Bankhead Revealed As Candidate For President

Speaker Praised As Favorite-Son Boom for Him Is Led By Senator Brother

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Speaker William B. Bankhead yesterday stepped into the 1940 Democratic Presidential race amid a rousing boom by the Alabama Congressional delegation.

His brother, Senator John H. Bankhead, announced the Speaker's name will be presented to the Chicago Democratic Convention "and we think his prospects are very good."

Designated "co-managers" of the Speaker's convention interests were Senator Hill and Representative Steagall, of Alabama.

Hill and Steagall were chosen at a recent joint meeting of the Alabama Senate and House delegations after a "favorite son" drive gathered force in the State.

Hill called the Speaker President Roosevelt's "strong right arm in putting through the Administration's legislative program," and observed:

"When the captain turns aside, you turn to his first lieutenant, don't you?"

With Vice President Garner already in the race "to win" whether or not the President runs, the Speaker's candidacy, announced through his brother, placed the presiding officers of both branches of Congress definitely in the contest for the Democratic pennant.

Senator Bankhead, who recently called on the President to "make his intentions known," said his brother will enter no primaries except in his home State and has sought no publicity.

"But when they start looking around at the convention for a suitable man, I think the lightning will strike him," said the Alabama Senator. "Everybody knows his ability, his high character and the success he has shown in leading the House for the Administration for the last seven years."

The Senator predicted his Speaker-brother will win overwhelmingly the State's favorite son designation in Alabama's May primaries and will find "plenty of friends" at the convention.

Senator Hill said together with Representative Steagall he will present the Speaker's name at the convention.

"He not only has an outstanding record as a distinguished Speaker of the House, but has been a great lieutenant of the President in placing the New Deal's program on the statute books," said Senator Hill.

Son of a Senator, brother of a Senator, and father of the glamorous Tallulah, Speaker Bankhead has been 23 years in Congress. He has risen successively to Rules Committee chairman, House majority leader and Speaker in President Roosevelt's two administrations. But his senatorial father advised him as a boy "not to go into politics." He is now 65.

With both party contests rapidly developing into a free-for-all, despite President Roosevelt's third-term silence, the Capitol yesterday awaited with political interest the decision of another silent figure—Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio.

Donahey will announce tomorrow his decision "to run or not to run" for reelection to the Senate from Ohio. Following closely on Ohio's double Republican Congressional victory on Tuesday, Donahey's choice might reflect his interpretation of political trends.

The Ohio Democrat recently declined to head an Ohio "favorite son" delegation as a State organization "stalking horse" for a third term, and later declined to permit

'Gone With the Wind' Sweeps Awards of Movie Academy

ROBERT DONAT
As Mr. Chips

VIVIEN LEIGH
As Scarlett O'Hara

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, Feb. 29.—A big wind swept through the Ambassador Hotel tonight, and carried with it most of the coveted annual awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

It was "Gone With the Wind," the motion picturization of Margaret Mitchell's best seller of the Old South.

"Gone With the Wind" captured eight out of a possible 16 prizes, including the best production, and two special awards.

Its feminine star, Vivien (Scarlett) Leigh, walked off with the palm as the best actress. Only blank space in the list of major awards was Clark Gable's failure to take the male prize.

That went to Robert Donat, for "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." It gave English stars the two major acting plums Hollywood can offer—chosen by a vote of the industry, from the biggest producer to the lowliest employe.

Presentation of the "Oscars," as the gold statuettes are known, took place at the film colony's swankiest party of the year.

"Gone With the Wind's" accomplishments included the following first place winners:

Victor Fleming for its direction.

Hattie McDaniel, Negro mammy, as the best actress in a supporting role.

The late Sidney Howard for the screen play.

Hal Kern and James Newcom for its editing.

Racing Inquiry To Call Hazen, Allen Today

Commissioners Own Horses, Oppose D. C. Track, Is Charge

The horse racing activities of District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George Allen will undergo Senatorial inquiry this morning before a subcommittee hearing on a bill to legalize horse racing in Washington.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, indicated he would give the Commissioners an opportunity to explain yesterday's reference to them as owners of race horses while opposed to a track with pari-mutuel betting in the Nation's Capital.

Hearings on the bill, sponsored by Reynolds, began yesterday in the Senate District Committee room of the Capitol with leaders of civic associations, labor representatives and officials of the Washington Federation of Churches in an all-day session of wrangling.

William C. Murphy, of the Central Labor Union, brought Allen and Hazen into the running when he asserted that both own and breed race horses.

Clerks Plan Fight On Budget Cuts

A drive against Congressional budget cuts affecting Government workers was begun by the Commerce Department local, United Federal Workers of America, with a rally attended by 200 last night.

Robert Sherman, local president, explained terms of an essay contest to be based on experience in the 1932 antieconomy drive and, he said, intended to "dramatize" the new campaign.

D. C. Liquor 'Meddling' Charged

Shafer Declares Inquiry Exceeds Its Authority

The House subcommittee investigating liquor distribution in the District recessed suddenly last night after hearing charges that Congressmen were "meddling" in administration of the alcoholic beverage control act.

Future of the investigation appeared to be in doubt, with one member of the subcommittee, Representative Paul Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, asserting that the group has extended the inquiry beyond its authority.

Chairman Herman Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said last night he would call an executive session of the committee early next week to take up Shafer's contention. The full District Committee probably will be asked to rule on the subcommittee's jurisdiction before hearings are resumed, he indicated.

Charges of Congressional pressure on the ABC board were made by Ernest F. Henry, representing the Petworth Citizens Association, and Shafer.

Mentions Commissioners

Henry said the District Commissioners and "some gentlemen on Capitol Hill" intervened in certain cases to "make a mockery" of the ABC board's authority.

The liquor inquiry was ordered, according to Shafer, only because "an influential Maryland Congressman became interested in the Rossiter case because the latter has a brother operating a restaurant in Baltimore."

"Neither Rossiter nor Lee should have been given liquor licenses," he

Round-up of Suspects Fails To Halt Wave of Robberies

Hardly had police finished parading 22 colored bandit suspects before 35 victims at headquarters last night when Washington's epidemic of violent robbery broke out afresh.

The line-up, marked down as unsuccessful despite its size, yielded "partial" identification of four suspects, two held in connection with the slaying Monday night of Herman Sirkis, liquor store proprietor, by two colored gunmen. They were picked out by Calvin Pendleton, colored, who saw the 42-year-old former Baltimore policeman shot down.

One of the three men who held him up the night of February 18 was partially identified by Albert Edelin, of 1405 Sixth street northwest. Mrs. Reuben Gordon, of 201 Fifteenth street northeast, pointed out two she believed were members of a trio who robbed her grocery of $27 February 15.

Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, admittedly disappointed at results of the line-up, laid its lack of success to failure of holdup victims to assist police by attending.

Detectives rounded up the suspects in beer halls and pool rooms early yesterday. None was able to give an acceptable account of himself. All were from other cities, it was said.

Superintendent of Police, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, yesterday attributed the drop in crime to the increased police squads.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Bonnet were robbed of $150 in their grocery at 3201 Warder street shortly after the line-up by two white men who brandished a pistol and forced them

Suffrage Hearing Set For Today

Committee Speeds Through Seal Bill, Calls Spokesmen Of Civic Agencies

With an unheralded burst of speed, the House subcommittee on District reorganization yesterday ran through the Seal bill and immediately afterward decided to hear local citizens' pleas for suffrage beginning at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

Chairman Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said the subcommittee will be called into an executive session with the Commissioners on Tuesday to start "marking up the bill."

Expressing hope the subcommittee will come to a quick agreement on the proposed administrative reforms before voting on the suffrage and city manager issues, Kennedy indicated the subcommittee may be able to report the bill to the full committee within a week.

All spokesmen for civic organizations fighting for local suffrage have been invited to send representatives to today's hearings, which will run all day if necessary.

The initial session of the subcommittee was marked by only two mild outbursts by committee members.

Two Express Alarm

Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, expressed alarm at one provision of the Seal bill to give the Commissioners authority to abolish or create any agencies they saw fit after passage of the reorganization bill.

Corporation Counsel Seal admitted, under questioning, that this could be construed to give the District heads authority to abolish the Health Department or the Board of Tax Appeals.

Chairman Kennedy later said he agreed with his colleagues that some limitation should be placed on this authority, although he recognized that the Commissioners should be enabled to make administrative changes in the municipal set-up.

Representative Nichols also took a rap at the civil service proposal in the bill.

"I'll take great pleasure in going to work on that," he said. "I've always wanted to write a civil service law."

He asked Seal whether all present District employes are "blanketed in" by the bill.

"Of course," responded Seal. "We couldn't miss on that one."

Donovan Explains Attitude

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor, explained at some length his differences of opinion with the General Accounting Office and criticized the present municipal budget.

"The District budget is a product of haphazard growth," he said. "It is not a model of what a municipal budget should be."

Maj. Donovan said he had no objections to the G. A. O. conducting post-audits of District expenditures but he believed the Comptroller General "has no right to step into purely administrative field, such

D.C. Defender Bill Hearing Unit Named

Proctor's Interest In Johnson Case Brought Experienced Attorney for Appeal

Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, yesterday appointed a three-man subcommittee to hold hearings on the Capper bill establishing a public defender system in the District of Columbia.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, is chairman of the subcommittee. The other members are Senators George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

Chairman Ashurst said that the subcommittee would begin hearings on the Capper bill "within 10 or 15 days."

Court Criticism Is Cited

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, who introduced his bill at the request of the District of Columbia Bar Association, asked Ashurst to speed action on the measure after the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia had sharply criticized the system here under which "two young members of the bar with little, if any, experience" were assigned by the District Court to defend an indigent accused of murder.

(The Post stated incorrectly in yesterday's issue that Justice James M. Proctor, of the District Court, assigned the two young lawyers to defend William F. Johnson. The attorneys were assigned in another court.

(The Post is glad to make this correction.

(In fairness to Justice Proctor, it should be emphasized that it was his interest in the case that resulted in the appointment of an experienced attorney to appeal the verdict in his court. The appellate court decision states that the trial court had been "scrupulously fair" to the appellant.

Post Seeks All Viewpoints

(It may be also stated that the interest of this newspaper in this case is to bring out all viewpoints in a situation that finds poor men without proper legal protection and the courts forced to appoint defense counsel who will take cases without pay. The answer would seem to be either a public defender or a fund that allows the courts to appoint competent counsel on a fee basis.—Editor's note.)

Under the Capper bill, the public defender would be appointed by the President and would receive a salary which would not exceed $7,000 a year. His assistants would be named by the Attorney General and would receive salaries up to $5,000 a year.

The public defender would represent and defend, without fee, any indigent person charged with an offense punishable by death or by imprisonment for a term of more than 90 days or by a fine of more than $300.

Representative Estes Kefauver (Democrat), of Tennessee, introduced a bill almost identical with the Capper bill after the Court of

D'Alesandro Visits Lorton, Finds It Like College Campus

Asks Why Aged Don't Get Food as Good; Health Department Urges Admissions Be Curtailed at Receiving Home

Representative D'Alesandro, chairman of the House subcommittee investigating local welfare institutions, made a quick trip to the District reformatory at Lorton, Va., yesterday and came away pleased.

"Why, if I didn't see the inmates, I would think I was on some college campus," he said as he noted the surroundings.

"When I see inmates treated this way," he added, "I can't help thinking about those poor people at Blue Plains."

The Health Department was not so happy about conditions it found at the Receiving Home. A report submitted to Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy urged immediate reduction in the intake at the Home, and recommended better facilities.

Visiting the Lorton plant with Bondy and Ray L. Huff, superintendent of penal institutions, D'Alesandro found conditions on the whole satisfactory. While he pointed out several conditions which he termed "bad," he complimented Bondy and Huff on the general set-up.

D'Alesandro plans to visit the District Jail today at 11 a. m., and the National Training School for Girls on Monday at 1 p. m.

The visit to the penal reservation, which was not, by any means a "surprise," found the inmates "spic and span" and "singing," he declared.

Throughout the entire inspection tour, however, D'Alesandro kept asking Bondy "why can't the Home for Aged be like this?" He found the spirit of the inmates keen and good; the food, "fit for a king" and the morale of the prisoners "wonderful."

He walked into the mess hall at the reformatory as 1,200 men were being served their noon-day meal and was "amazed" at the discipline and orderliness of the inmates. Above all, however, he marveled at the food, which Huff told him cost 16 cents in cash a day plus the cost of about 4 cents as the value of the farm-produced food.

"Why can't the inmates at the Home for Aged have good food just as these inmates have?" he kept asking Bondy.

Bondy told him that William Devers, steward at Lorton, had made a visit to Blue Plains last week and was now working on plans to improve the dietary plan

Defenders Fall Back

By Wade Werner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki (Friday), March 1.—Finnish defenders fought a growing Russian drive before Viipuri today while throughout Finland great fires burned in many towns in the wake of waves of Russian air bombers.

Observers said it seemed that nearly every town in Finland had suffered from yesterday's waves of Russian air attacks.

The exact extent of casualties was not known but at least ten were dead and many injured by bombs showered all day yesterday on the historic island town of Savonlinna, 80 miles north of Viipuri.

Reds a Mile From Viipuri

[A communique from the Leningrad military headquarters said the Red army was driving on Viipuri from the east and south and that the nearest force had reached Ylasainio, just south of the city on Viipuri Bay, and that the attacking forces had driven to within slightly more than a mile of Viipuri.—Editor's Note.]

Finnish forces braced themselves in what they said were stronger positions, to prevent encirclement of the city.

Riihimaaki, 40 miles north of Helsinki, was bombed five times, and it was reported fires were raging there far into the night.

Kuovala was bombed time after time by fleets as large as 50, 60 and 80 planes. Details of the casualties and damage there still were not known.

Finnish fighter planes fiercely counterattacked and prevented a bombing of Kajaani by 64 Russian craft.

Two persons were killed and three wounded at the little out-of-the-way village of Inkeroinen. One was killed at Hamina and one at Turku, on the Gulf of Bothnia.

First Aid Rushed

First aid was rushed to Savonlinna, devastated by dozens of fires.

The place, which Finns said is defenseless, is the site of the world-famous medieval island fortress of Olavi, hitherto one of the best preserved relics in northern Europe.

Continued assaults on the eastern side of the Karelian isthmus were said to have been repulsed with heavy losses.

The Finns said Russian attacks were thrown back northeast of Lake Ladoga, in the vicinity of Pitkaranta, and that more enemy strong points were captured at Kuhmo, in central Finland, where some Russians are encircled.

Heavy fighting raged unabated

50,000,000,000 Francs Are Added to War Chest by Decrees

By the Associated Press

Paris (Friday), March 1.—France today announced a devaluation of her gold stocks and a borrowing operation from the Bank of France to add 50,000,000,000 francs ($1,250,000,000) to her war chest in a series of decrees intended to implement the nation economically for its war with Germany.

Provisions for rationing food, increasing production, particularly on the farm, and curtailment of consumption and spending were other measures announced by Finance Minister Reynaud.

Nearly Half From Gold

Nearly half the 50,000,000,000 francs—21,400,000,000 francs—was realized by revaluation of the Bank of France's gold stocks to the present Paris rate of the dollar—43.80 francs to the dollar.

At this rate the franc is worth about 2.5 cents.

The last revaluation in May, 1938, left the rate at 35.880 francs to the dollar, or about 3 cents to the franc—which was "below the real value of the gold," according to Reynaud.

At the time of the transaction the Bank of France held 97,273,000,000 francs (about $2,431,825,000) in gold.

The decree said the Bank of France would proceed to revalue its gold stocks "on the basis of a weight of gold 23.34 milligrams, 900 thousands fine, per franc."

The decree said the bank would carry out the revaluation "in conditions foreseen by the first article" of the tripower monetary accord of September 25, 1936, by which the

Hoover Asks $20,000,000 To Feed Poles

7,000,000 Face Starvation, He Tells Congress

Former President Hoover, in a surprise appearance before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, yesterday urged Congress to appropriate up to $20,000,000 at once to meet an "acute" food shortage facing 7,000,000 persons in dismembered Poland.

Only a few hours later Federal Loans Administrator Jesse Jones said that embattled Finland would be given "first call" on the $100,000,000 added RFC capital authorized in Congressional action completed yesterday. Finland may borrow up to $20,000,000 of the $100,000,000 for nonmilitary purposes.

Mr. Hoover, appearing at the Capitol for the first time since he left the Presidency in 1933, testified in a crowded hearing room under special lights for photographers and amid the flashing of news picture bulbs.

"The whole of Europe will be a spot of starvation when the war is over," he declared, though empha-

Station Plaza Lights Create Scant Delay, Taxi Trips Reveal

By Scott Hart

Indignation in the gra[ss] manner was voiced by three ta[xi] drivers on three trips a Post porter made yesterday to Uni[on] Station when, at each trip's beginning, the subject of the new Plaza traffic lights was broached.

The essence of the talk by each was that such a trip was fraught with uncertainties. . . . "you may get through in time and maybe not . . . . Rube Goldberg must have designed the light system there. Why did they pay $50,000 for the system? It's only driven off traffic and a detour sign could have been fixed up for 50 cents," the talk ran.

But when a watch was put into the test, the first trip, from Fourteenth and E streets northwest, to the station—through the Plaza and all—required exactly seven minutes, flat.

Over the Coffee

DINNER AT THE WHITE HOUSE

You curve your car through the big front gate and park it in the front driveway. The uniformed officer under the pillars asks your name and nods, and you walk across the front portico to the big shining-glass and metal doors.

Harlan Miller

If you're not awed a little, you're calloused . . . A colored servant opens the door and another helps you take off your coat, and hangs it on a rack near the door. The dark-clad usher shows you your place at the table on a chart, leads you across the corridor to the tapestried Red Room and asks you to sit down near the fire.

* * * *

You are the first to arrive, and wonder if . . . But the other guests come trooping in 2 or 3 minutes later—an eminent journalist, a Protestant bishop with a little beard, a retired admiral, some distant relatives and in-laws of the Roosevelts who are staying at the White House, some young people, a celebrity or two just back from Europe.

* * * *

The usher introduces everyone, and you chat briskly, and then he arranges you in a sort of line roughly in order of precedence. Someone gets out of line and the usher finesses him back in line . . . Then Mrs. Roosevelt walks in and shakes hands and guides you down the hall to the family dining room.

"—you lose on the chicken"

The President is already in his seat, and she introduces those who haven't met him before, and he shakes hands with you, at his place at the middle of the table on the side nearest the door. With the chart in mind, you find your place card with only a false step or two.

* * * *

Three or four servants are passing the food to 18 or 20 guests—first clear soup with strips of carrot afloat. And then the tragedy of the chicken. The piece nearest you happens to be small, and the next piece for which you spear tentatively is too large, and seems anchored. So you compromise on the small. What you've speared is darned good. But it's not enough.

* * * *

The lady on your right was an in-law, and her husband is a jovial gentleman definitely not awed at being a White House guest, and determined to enjoy it and duck the formalities . . . You chat with her and eat your rice and beets and asparagus and try covertly to see what the President is doing.

* * * *

He seems absorbed in meditation the first half of the meal, eating steadily and exchanging an occasional word with the admiral's wife. Everything is most informal, like a Sunday dinner in any comfortable big family, and now comes the pear salad with the pink Philadelphia cream cheese, and the President is talking across the table with the admiral about Puerto Rico.

"—but recoup on the dessert"

The bishop is an animated conversationalist, on the First Lady's left, and he must perform a baptism later in the day, and he doesn't pay any attention to the fingerbowl on his plate, so she reaches over unobtrusively and moves it off for him, to make room for the dessert.

* * * *

You have been watching your chance to avenge yourself for the defeat in your encounter with the chicken platter, and now arrives the ice cream in round balls, and you brazenly take a double helping with plenty of the caramel sauce. The carnations hide the President's plate and you can't see whether he also took two.

* * * *

Now the President retires to the elevator across the little hall beyond the door at his back, and everyone stands as he goes, and up we go in the elevator on the next trip to the great hall upstairs, where the chairs are lined up for the movies.

* * * *

These are earnest and even somber, and it dawns on you that living in the White House isn't all beer and skittles; you can feel the country's problems and the world's beating against its walls in endless waves. The President has retired to his study. Mrs. R. learns your daughter is nine today, and sends her an autographed book as a memento. "You should have brought her," she says.

Senate Group Supporting Farm Increase

Committee Favors $200,000,000 Boost, Senators Say

By the Associated Press

An increase of $200,000,000 or more in farm appropriations has received tentative approval of a Senate Appropriations sub-committee, farm State senators reported yesterday.

Three senators, who asked that their names not be used, said the committee favored a $72,678,812 item for disposal of surplus commodities, and between $125,000,000 and $225,000,000 for parity payments. No funds for these purposes were included in the House-approved bill which totaled $713,896,084.

An increase of $200,000,000 in the farm bill would wipe out two-thirds of the reductions Congress has effected in appropriations measures, as they stand now. Cuts below budget figures total about $290,000,000.

Before the House Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, R. M. Evans, AAA Administrator, outlined Secretary Wallace's certificate plan of self-financing farm subsidies which would replace parity payments.

Evans explained that farmers cooperating with the Agriculture Department's crop-control programs would receive certificates having a fixed value for the share of their crop needed for consumption in this country.

When a processor bought the produce, he would have to buy also the certificate, and presumably would pass the cost of the certificate on to the consumer.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, suggested that a certificate tax on cotton, without a compensatory levy on competing fibers, might further destroy the markets for that staple.

Evans suggested this range for the value of the certificates:

Wheat, 10 to 25 cents a bushel; cotton, 1 to 5 cents a pound; tobacco, 1 to 3 cents a pound; rice and peanuts, ½-cent and 1½ cents a pound.

Dr. Yap Advocates Philippine Control

The Commonwealth Government of the Philippines should be continued beyond 1946 or some form of "dominion status" under the American flag should be given the islands, Dr. Diosdado M. Yap, director of the Philippine Information Service, said yesterday.

"A great thinking majority of the Philippine people . . . desire that the Commonwealth Government be continued indefinitely or that some type of dominion status be established," he told the Junior Board of Commerce at luncheon in the Annapolis Hotel.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt's Popularity Higher Than in 1936 But Majority Still Against Third Term

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 29.—As President Roosevelt enters his eighth year in the White House on Monday, his popularity as a second-term President stands at one of the highest points it has reached since his reelection.

Elected with 62.5 per cent of the major party vote in 1936, the President now has the support of 64 per cent of the major party vote, according to the continuous Presidential index of the American Institute of Public Opinion. A month ago the index stood at 63.5 per cent.

GALLUP

Mr. Roosevelt's sustained popularity at the approach of his eighth year in the Presidency is particularly interesting because some political observers—on both the "right" and the "left"—had predicted in 1936 that Mr. Roosevelt would leave the White House unpopular and "discredited" with the public.

Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt's current popularity as a second-term President is not to be confused with the support he would get if he decides to enter the November race as a candidate for a third term.

Side by side with its index of Presidential popularity in recent months, the Institute has asked voters: "If President Roosevelt runs for a third term, will you vote for him?" The results show that even when the President has been most popular (as a second-term Executive) there has never been quite a majority of voters who favored him for a third term.

The vote on the third-term question reflects, of course, the strength of the long tradition against a third term for any U. S. President. If President Roosevelt should decide to run and actually become a candidate, a new situation would be created which could only be measured at that time.

The following table shows the recent trend of opinions on the two subjects. Note that when the President's popularity has increased his third-term support has increased also, and vice versa:

	Support FDR As 2nd Term President	Would Vote For FDR for 3rd Term
August, 1939	56.6%	40%
September (After Outbreak of War)	61.0	43
October	64.9	46
November	62.7	43
December	63.5	—
January	63.5	46
Today	64.0	—

The number of persons included in any Institute survey varies with statistical requirements. In the study reported today, 12,500 persons were included—a number which insures that any error due solely to the size of the sample will be less than 2 per cent. Indeed, had the Institute interviewed the entire voting population of 60,000,000, the result would, with virtual certainty, have changed not more than 1.3 per cent.

Previous Institute tests have shown that President Roosevelt is the first choice of most Democratic voters for November's Presidential race, but a small and important bloc of Democrats remain cool to a third term. In an election showdown they might hold the balance between victory and defeat for a third-term ticket.

Smith Committee Weighs Labor Act Changes In Drafting Report on NLRB Investigation

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

A proposal for separation of the prosecuting from the judicial functions of the National Labor Relations Board is receiving favorable consideration from the Smith committee, The Post was informed yesterday.

In executive sessions now being held for drafting a preliminary report, to be issued in a few days, it is understood that special interest has been indicated in a half-dozen proposed major changes in the powers and structure of the Labor Board.

These include:

Replacing the personnel of the present three-man board, or, possibly adding two new members.

Special Division Urged

Setting up within the board a division engaged solely in the prosecution of Wagner Act cases, the head of the division to be appointed by the President with advice and consent of the Senate.

The so-called "Garrison amendment," which would deprive the Labor Board of any power to act in A. F. L.-C. I. O. disputes.

A six-month limitation on the period for which workers discharged in violation of the Wagner Act may receive back pay.

Restriction of the powers of aliens in representing employes in collective bargaining agreements.

While none of these alterations has been even tentatively decided upon, it is understood they are among the suggestions to which closest attention is being given by the five-man investigating committee.

Congress Awaits Report

The Smith Committee's report is awaited in Congress with the greatest interest, although its recommendations must be referred to the House Labor Committee before any action can be taken.

The proposal to replace the personnel of the present Board or to add two conservatives has been advanced in Congress for some time by members who contend the Wagner act has suffered from improper administration.

Establishment of an independent prosecuting division in the Board, if it eventually finds its way into the report, would be an answer to the criticism that the N. L. R. B. is prosecutor, judge and jury rolled into one.

Decision Speeder Sought

The "Garrison amendment," proposed during Smith Committee hearings by Dean Lloyd K. Garrison of the Wisconsin Law School, would relieve the board of the necessity for deciding the appropriate bargaining unit when it is in dispute between the two major labor organizations. This amendment is believed to be not unacceptable to the board itself.

The suggestion that workers be entitled to not more than six months' back pay when they are found to be victims of Wagner Act violation apparently is intended to hasten board decisions. The board has ordered back pay for periods exceeding a year—extending from the time of Wagner Act violations to the date of the company's offer of reinstatement in accordance with a board order.

One of the alien provisions under consideration in the Smith Committee is a recommendation that employers be required to bargain collectively only with citizens of the United States.

While no member of the Smith Committee would comment on the proposals, it is understood the preliminary report is in draft form and will not be issued until next week.

Bureau Curbs Bill Blocked, Leaders Charge

Administration Putting 'Pressure' on House, Rep. Sumners Says

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Democratic leaders yesterday disclosed that House consideration of the Logan-Walters bill, designed to curb discretionary power of New Deal "bureaucrats with Messiah complexes," has been blocked by "powerful Administration pressure."

The measure, which would strike at the broad authority of the National Labor Relations Board, the Bituminous Coal Commission and other New Deal agencies, was given legislative right of way by the House Rules Committee early in the session.

Chairman Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, of the Judiciary Committee, which reported the bill, said that "Administration pressure" had been applied against it and "it looks as if we won't be able to get it up."

"I've been told not to bring it up on the floor," said Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, of the Rules Committee. "It is a highly controversial bill that would take away a lot of power the bureaus have in administering new laws.

"Anyway, I know for a fact that President Roosevelt has given orders to these New Deal agencies to use good common horse sense in administering the new laws and to stop trying to be prosecutors, juries, judges and executioners. That removes the necessity for the Logan Walter bill."

The measure was passed by the Senate last year but upon the insistence of Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, it was recalled.

Branded "Messiahs"

In reporting the bill, Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, co-author, accused many of the New Deal "bureaucrats" of "disregarding the rights of the governed, and for lack of sufficient legal control over them a few developed Messiah complexes."

"They (the Messiahs) honestly and fervently believe their mission in life is to reform the United States," he said. "Regardless of the terms of the statutes, the Constitution, or anythisg else."

The bill would compel the agencies to conform to a uniform set of regulations based on court decisions and to restore to individuals the right to seek recourse in the courts from decisions handed down by the bureaus.

"Some of these New Deal laws bar to American citizens the right to seek recourse in the courts," asserted Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, member of the Judiciary Committee. "This Logan-Walter bill would restore to our citizens the rights their forefathers fought for in achieving the Magna Carta and American independence. But there is a lot of Administration pressure against its passage and thus far it has blocked House consideration."

Jugged, B'Gosh, by the Gals, Who Really Get Their Men!

Women took over every public office in Aurora, Ill., on their quadrennial Leap Year uprising yesterday and hundreds of bachelors were jammed into the city jail. Dr. E. Heinous, Horrifying Bachelors Fill Jail As Women Take Over City, Fining All And Sundry Everything Down to Lingerie

By the Associated Press

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 29.—Hundreds of melancholy men—charged with the heinous crime of bachelorhood—jammed the jailhouse today.

They were cast there by girls who took complete charge of this city of 52,000 in a coup de grace. In keeping with a traditional leap year day custom, the young women assumed control of the city hall, police and fire departments, business houses and the bastille—and all was merry confusion for 12 hours.

Mayor Audrey Kesel, brunette dancing teacher, decreed:

"Get those bachelors."

Copperettes collared hapless males on streets, in stores and factories. The prisoners were whisked off in paddy wagons, cooled in jail for several hours and haled before Mary Whiteis, pretty police magistrate. Fines were assessed promptly—stockings, candy, flowers, lingerie

The eligible Dr. Joseph Wadkins was penalized two grams of perfume for celibacy with malice aforethought. Suddenly he leaped to the bench, uttered a proposal and shouted: "I really mean it."

The flustered judge sent him back to the dungeon.

Within the next two hours, 167 defendants popped the question. To one and all she addressed a coy, "See you later."

One panicky fugitive from matrimony took refuge on a roof. Another hid in a cellar. Five escaped from a patrol wagon en route to court.

The fire lassies took the one genuine alarm in stride. They slid down the brass pole, mounted a truck and rumbled off to a burning house. (But the men regulars extinguished the blaze.)

John D. Grisch, a salesman, was forced into a red dress and pressed into service as a policewoman. As his first chore, he placed a cuspidor beside the comely mayor's chair. He was hustled off to the hoosegow pronto.

The alderwomen-for-a-day railroaded through a $71,092 pay roll. Items included $10,000 each for Clark Gable and Robert Taylor and 50 cents to underwrite a haircut for Harry Warner, bald mayor of Aurora.

"Petticoat rule" ended at a night banquet. The finery and fripperies piled up in the magistrate's court were divided.

And the brideless boys looked forward in relief to four more years of peace and single blessedness.

Harrington To Defer Slash In WPA Rolls

Tells Representatives He Will Not Ask For More Funds

A Congressional delegation was assured by Work Projects Commissioner F. C. Harrington yesterday that a tentatively projected March slash in WPA rolls would be deferred until later in the spring.

However, the Congressmen were told a total of nearly 800,000 persons must be cut off WPA between now and June 30, so that no reduction in March merely means heavier cuts in April, May and June.

The delegation, headed by Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, was informed by Col. Harrington that he plans to stay within the WPA appropriation voted by Congress last spring and that he would not ask any additional funds for the current year.

To Ask More Funds

Marcantonio declared his group would request President Roosevelt to recommend an emergency appropriation to avoid slashing the relief rolls.

Harrington told the delegation that in addition to the 800,000 who will be dropped from WPA between now and the end of June, 500,000 unemployed are certified for relief rolls with no chance of work in sight, and another 500,000 are eligible but not yet certified.

The WPA Administrator revealed that 25 per cent of the WPA workers dropped because of the "18-month provision" of the law have been restored to the rolls. This provision, protested last year, requires the WPA to "furlough" workers who have been on WPA 18 months, with the proviso that they may be restored to the rolls after a 30-day interval.

Boom Has Little Effect

The "war boom" of last fall and the present decline in industrial activity have affected WPA but little, Harrington said. He pointed out that many plants stimulated by the war simply gave part-time workers full-time jobs.

Harrington said he had set March WPA enrollment at 2,348,000, compared with average February enrollment of about 2,305,000. The June average is expected to be 1,600,000.

Besides Marcantonio, the delegation included Representatives Coffee and Hill, of Washington; Keller and Fries, of Illinois; Geyer, of California, and others—all Democrats.

Jobless Study Launched

Meanwhile, Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, moved toward further organization of the informal Congressional conference on unemployment.

He announced formation of 12 committees "for study of and report upon various phases of the solution of the unemployment problem." The groups, of Congressional volunteers, will deal with the relation of unemployment to such subjects as taxation, social security, farm tenancy, public works, monopoly, foreign trade, immigration and technological change.

Toll Remains at 2 as Dykes Break; 5,000 Flee Swollen Sacramento; Weather Promises Drop in River

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 29.—The Sacramento River, swollen by its many tributaries, poured through broken dikes today, inundating villages and farmlands.

Nine breaks in the levees flooded three towns, with an aggregate population of about 800, and created a threat in the lower valley.

Weather was favorable, however, and river experts predicted the flow soon would reflect the drop of the upper stream.

More than 5,000 persons had fled their homes but the death toll from the four days of flood still stood at two.

The overflow isolated Butte City and its 400 residents, Princeton and Codora. A hundred in Butte City were reported marooned, and relief agencies sought means of getting food and water into the town.

Concern developed for the safety of the area around Knight's Landing, about 20 miles north of Sacramento.

Three United States engineers were unreported after leaving Colusa to inspect levees between Princeton and Glenn, where the dikes broke on a 12-mile front.

At Princeton, six marooned families were rescued by boats, after most of the 200 persons living in the town had found refuge in a church and a school gymnasium.

Quincy, Plumas County seat, in the upper Feather River country, was isolated by floods, as was Greenville, 22 miles north.

Carbon to Help Spy on Germs

By the Associated Press

Berkeley, Calif., Feb. 29.—Production of a radioactive carbon which may permit scientists to trace disease germs through the body and to probe far deeper than ever before into the processes of plant and animal life was reported tonight at the University of California.

The discovery of "what appears to be" one of the two elements long missing from the roster of chemical substances, also was made known. Apparently it is a radioactive relative of iodine.

Both announcements were in connection with the presentation of the Nobel Physics Prize to Dr. Ernest O. Lawrence, father of the atom-smashing cyclotron, instrumental in both achievements.

The new form of carbon remains radioactive for a far longer period than other such carbons turned out by the cyclotron, thus giving off emanations which will permit it to be traced all the way through complicated biological, chemical and industrial processes.

Its discoverers, Dr. Martin D. Kamen, physicist, and Dr. Samuel Ruben, chemist, suggested it now may be possible to include the substance in the diet of disease germs as a "tracer." Hence the germs could be followed through the system.

Dr. Raymond T. Birge, head of the physics department, reported the discoveries.

Scalese Ruled Out as Judge

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 29.—George Scalese, Chicago labor leader, was prohibited by a court decision today from sitting in judgment on two local officers who accused him of ruling his union by coercion.

Scalese heads the A. F. of L. Building Service Employes' Union. Local officers charged in superior court that Scalese and other members of the executive board were unfit to try three San Francisco union officers on charges of irregularities.

Superior Judge I. M. Golden ruled to throw the case into the hands of the union for hearing, but disqualified Scalese and Thomas Burke, vice president, from participation in the hearing of charges against Charles Hardy, sr., and Hardy's two sons. The elder Hardy is president of the San Francisco local.

"It has been suggested," said Judge Golden, "that the board members are dominated and controlled by Scalese, and that Scalese is a gangster, racketeer and an assassin.

"It has been plainly charged that he murdered, or caused to be assassinated, three persons. I have no doubt that these unfortunate persons met their violent death in the safe precincts of Chicago, and that someone caused them to be assassinated, but I have no proof that Scalese did it or caused it to be done. If I did know anything about it, I would do something about it immediately. But merely on suspicion of Mr. Hardy, I can do nothing."

Judge Golden held that the suspension of the Hardys was legal under the union's constitution. The local's demand for an accounting of international funds cannot be granted, Golden ruled, because no provision is made in the constitution of the union.

Golden held that Meyer Lewis, representative of William Green, A. F. L. head, could not take possession of assets of the local unions involved.

Hitler To Tell Welles Reich Needs Room

German Officials Hint Chancellor Will Not Present Peace Plan

By Otto D. Tolischus.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 29.—Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles is scheduled to arrive in Berlin tomorrow morning for the first stop on his tour of Europe's warring capitals.

The Undersecretary is scheduled to be received by Chancellor Hitler personally, and to visit Field Marshal Goering and Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

Official quarters expressed themselves today as welcoming the visit because of the opportunity it will give Germany's highest spokesmen to explain German policies to one of the highest officials of the United States Government.

But is was also emphasized that in the German view this visit is purely informative and that Germany has no peace plan to present and expects none from the American.

The German press so far has taken little note of Welles' visit except by extensive discussions of the issues involved in the war and future peace. Presumably the ideas expressed in them also will form part of the answer Welles will get in response to his search for information.

The most extensive and the most violent of these discussions centered around a heated repudiation of the British press story that Germany had a new peace plan involving the creation of a new Polish state, self-administration in Bohemia and Moravia, the return of German colonies and a general disarmament conference.

This "peace plan" is obviously an interpretation of Hitler's detailed peace plan presented in his Reichstag speech of October 6.

Expression at the present moment is considered a British trial balloon to ascertain whether that plan is still valid. The German answer is unequivocal. With inspired unanimity the entire press, as well as official quarters, agree that Chancellor Hitler's peace terms of October 6 were a "one time offer" but that the Allies' scornful rejection of it annulled it forever and, that since then "Mars rules the thinking and decisions of the German war command." Welles will be sufficiently informed of that.

Germany Willing to Listen

The German press expressed indignation that by public discussion of the alleged German "peace plan" the Allies not only sought to convey an impression of German weakness but also tried to "torpedo" the Welles tour.

From this it would appear that Germany is still willing to listen to peace talks from the other side—a deduction that is supported by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop's recent reception of a Danish merchant who came with supposed peace terms.

At the same time official announcements, speeches and press discussions also served further to clarify Germany's own stand on various issues on which Welles might seek information. According to Hitler's last speech in Munich, Germany demands "assurance of her lebensraum" (living room), in which it includes everything that "Germans, not Englishmen, have cultivated, civilized and developed economically," return of German colonies and termination of the "organized terrorism of the infamous world plutocratic clique," to which must be added the "new Europe" envisaged by Hitler's New Year's proclamation.

Although the extent of German "lebensraum" has never been delimited except by a disclaimer of any German ambition for world dominion, Herr Hitler designated it as "at least Mitteleuropa" and that better half of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia already included in the German Reich or its direct sphere of interest.

Polish Status Is Defined

As regards Poland, the larger part of the German share of it has already been annexed by the Reich. The rest of it—the districts of Cracow, Warsaw, Radom and Lublin—has been organized into the government general, whose status Gov. Gen. Hans Frank just defined anew as follows:

The government general is not part of the Reich but has been entrusted to the Reich and designated by Hitler as the homestead of the Polish population.

It is ruled, led and controlled by Germans, who occupy all the higher positions of the government, but for the rest the Poles, and to some extent even the Jews, are being given local self-government under German supervision.

At the same time press discussions of "Lebensraum," "Plutocracy" and a "New Europe" have revealed that all these issues are intimately intertwined, and, i the last analysis, boil down to one problem in which the United States is also taking active diplomatic steps—namely, the economic organization of the world after the war.

Hoover Asks Food For Hungry Poles

sizing the immediate need is to care for suffering Poles between May 1 and harvest time.

He was applauded when he said:

"If the American people keep their actions on the basis of pure humanitarian relief there can be no question of violation in either fact or spirit of neutrality.

"I am prepared to feed women and children—I don't care of what race or nationality they may be."

He denied that the Nation would be "traveling in any way toward entanglement or involvement in war".

Busy already with his Finnish relief project, he made it clear that he was not seeking to head the Polish relief movement as well. He suggested President Roosevelt should designate the agency to be charged with distribution of the relief supplies.

"I've said I'll advise it," he added, but commented with a smile, "I don't want to take over a job like that."

He declared that a "rough estimate" placed the cost of providing just enough food to keep the Poles alive at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000, but asserted that from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 would be "a fair contribution" from the United States.

"One bushel of wheat and 3 pounds of fats will keep this human animal alive, at a wholesale cost of about $1.50 a month," he said.

Because of overcrowding in central Poland—a buffer state set up between the regions occupied respectively by Germany and Russia—Mr. Hoover said he expected an "acute" food shortage to develop there about May 1 and last until the harvest. Normally, he said, the central region would have enough food for about 8,000,000 persons, but "wholesale transfers of Poles and Jews" from the section taken over by Germany and "some migration" from Russian-occupied Poland had brought the population total to about 15,000,000.

Mr. Hoover told the committee the problem of getting food to Poland was not solely one of finance.

"There are distinct military ramifications," he explained. "There must be agreements with the belligerent powers."

He said, for instance, that Germany was insisting that whatever groups handle the relief work be strictly neutral in their conduct so that nothing would be done prejudicial to the Reich and its war effort. Likewise, he said, Britain wanted assurances that none of the supplies would find their way into German hands.

House Refuses Cash to Start Canal Locks

Roosevelt Request Rejected in Passage Of Supply Bill

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

Funds proposed by President Roosevelt for starting construction of new bombproof locks for the Panama Canal were denied yesterday as the House passed a $203,472,567 War Department supply bill.

The measure, which now goes to the Senate, provides for the so-called "civil functions" of the Army, but includes $19,000,000 in cash and $6,370,000 in contract authorization for "special protective installations" on existing locks at Panama. Included also is $850,000 to prepare plans for the new locks.

No changes were made in the bill on the floor, the House accepting its Appropriations Committee's recommendations on rivers and harbors and flood control work, which account for the bulk of the expenditures.

Plane Prices Rise

At the same time, the President asked Congress to allow an additional $20,000,000 in contract authorizations next year for new warplanes, equipment, spare parts and aerial accessories.

Acting Budget Director Blandford said the increase over the budget estimates was due to higher costs. The original budget contained $10,250,000 for the higher-priced equipment, but a total of $30,250,000 is required, he said.

"Unless provision is made for restoring the amount of this diversion," Blandford stated, "it will be necessary for the Army Air Corps to ground an indeterminate number of planes during the fiscal year 1941 because of the lack of spare engines and parts, and will seriously affect the training of the Air Corps, as well as reduce the number of effective planes on hand to meet an emergency."

Wake Island Funds Denied

There was no attempt on the floor to restore the $15,000,000 cash and $99,300,000 in contractual authority for starting the new Panama locks, although Chairman Bland of the House Merchant Marine Committee had launched a fight for them the day before.

The slash from budget estimates in the bill totaled $16,609,134 and brought the amount of Congressional budget cuts this year to $290,000,000.

Besides the locks, the only other major reduction was $700,000 proposed for harbor development at the mid-Pacific island of Wake. The House has twice refused to provide dredging funds for either Wake or Guam Island, on the ground it was preliminary to fortification.

Budget estimates of $70,000,000 for flood control in general and a $30,000,000 special fund for such work on the lower Mississippi were approved and the amount asked for rivers and harbors was voted almost intact. Besides the Wake item only a small amount for maintenance was eliminated in providing $66,721,510 for navigation improvements.

Son of 'T.R.' Casts His Lot With Finland

Kermit Roosevelt To Lead Brigade; Stays U. S. Citizen

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 29. Kermit Roosevelt, son of a crusading father, today threw in his lot with Finland's weary armies as commander of an international brigade. Only the King's signature on an order releasing him from his major's commission in Britain's Middlesex Regiment remains before he formally accepts his new command.

Looking like anything but a soldier of fortune, the paunchy, heavy jowled second son of President Theodore Roosevelt marched solemnly from the Ritz Hotel to the war office to resign his commission. Although failure of the King to sign the release shut his mouth today, Roosevelt did not mind when reporters and photographers saw him sign for new buttons for the British army uniform which he will wear in Finland.

These included a whopping, shiny "I N"-standing for international brigade—which are to go on his tunic collar. Volunteer wags jibed that the buttons upside down stood for "non intervention."

London newspapers, decorously joyful at the spectacle of an American commanding an expedition dear to British hearts, splashed front pages with his picture. Some confused him with his brother, Theodore, jr., and said he once was Assistant Secretary of the Navy and candidate for Governor of New York.

Modern Robin Hood Shoots Propaganda at Chamberlain

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 29.—A steel-tipped arrow sent winging through a window of Prime Minister Chamberlain's No. 10 Downing street residence in the cause of "social credit" by a twentieth century Robin Hood today just missed one of the cabinet members.

The arrow landed the green-jacket clad young man, Joseph Green, 22, by name, in court, where he said:

"A policeman told me the arrow just missed a cabinet minister standing in the anteroom."

Green said he did not know which minister, and no other sources would comment.

However, because Green was to join the army tonight, he got off lightly and was simply placed under a £2 ($8) peace bond for a year.

The orrow which went zooming into the sedate residence had a steel head 2½ inches long. Attached to the shaft was a note of four lines, saying:

"End Hitlerism. The war demands a debt-free Britain. Social credit is the only remedy. Social credit is coming."

Green, who calmly told reporters he could put an arrow through the throat of a man at 50 yards, used a yew bow of the legendary Robin Hood type. He said he shot through the window to avoid hitting the policeman standing in the door. He had intended to drive an arrow with his message atttached into the prime minister's door in the best Robin Hood style.

As he entered Downing street carrying his long bow he encountered the policeman, who asked jovially: "Going shooting."

"Yes, I am," replied Green.

The policeman laughed. Green laughed and let Ten Downing have it.

Later Green said, in anticipation of joining the army:

"I regret having to play Robin Hood in Downing street, but I think people here should fight Hitlerism at home as well as in France. I expect to get plenty of shooting with the army, and I am 100 per cent patriotic. Britain will not emerge victorious without establishing a debt-free money system here."

Speaking of social credit—to anyone who would listen—Green said that "social credit in Alberta (Canada) was sabotaged by British bankers and the Privy Council."

He explained that social credit, which was launched in Alberta several years ago, was "primarily the key to unlock to the people the plenty which we know exists."

The originator of social credit is Maj. C. H. Douglas, who appeared in the United States to advance his theory.

Daladier Sees Massive Nazi Drive in Spring

French Premier Tells Japanese Paper of Hope For Closer Relations

By the United Press

Paris, Feb. 29.—Premier Edouard Daladier, in an exclusive interview with the Osaka Mainichi, tonight, revealed that French military preparations envisage a "massive German attack with all forces," this spring.

Daladier also said France and Japan are preparing to open negotiations for French recognition of Manchukuo and that the French government views Russian bolshevism and German nazism as essentially the same thing, comparable to cholera or the plague.

It was the first full dress interview the premier, foreign minister and minister of national defense has granted since the start of the war and he expounded his views on the world situation at length, making these points:

Russian Attitude "Contemptible"

1. France is determined to continue the war "until we have rid Europe of a situation under which, every 25 years, France finds herself obliged to go to war."

2. France expects a German offensive this spring, but is not prepared to speculate on the possibility of an Allied drive if the Germans fail to attack. The premier did not deny that an Allied attack is possible.

3. No negotiations are taking place so far between France and Italy with regard to Italian aspirations in Tunisia, the Suez Canal zone, and Djibouti. Technically, French-Italian relations are "good."

4. Russia's attitude toward the European war is "contemptible." Moscow hopes the war will spread and bolshevism with it. France considers bolshevism and nazism equally hateful—as hateful as cholera or the plague.

5. Following a discussion of general policy, it is hoped that negotiations can be started "very soon" envisaging French recognition of Manchukuo. Conversations will be held simultaneously in Paris and Tokyo, and the outlook is "excellent." (The United States has refused to recognize Manchukuo, composed of China's former northeastern provinces, on the grounds that the Manchu state was brought into being by "force.")

General Atmosphere Conciliatory

6. France agrees that the French Yunnan Railway, in south China, which has been bombed by Japanese planes, should not be used for transporting war supplies to China, but is not yet ready to accept Japan's broad definition of what shall be considered "contraband."

7. France is "much less preoccupied" with the situation which will be created in China following establishment of the new Japan-sponsored "national" government, to be proclaimed soon in Nanking, than with that in Europe.

The premier's attitude throughout toward Japan was conciliatory. He believed that a Russo-Japanese accord would be against Japan's best interests.

French Revalue Gold in War Step

The thirty-billion franc profit on revaluation is to be used by France's exchange stabilization fund.

Finace Minister Reynaud, in announcing the measure, explained that "for our domestic payments we have taken out part of the reserve which the treasury has at the Bank of France and which has resulted from the fact that in November, 1938, the gold stock was revalued at a price below its real value."

Secret Purchase Fund

In addition, what he described as a "fraction of our war chest" of Bank of France gold will be put aside as a secret fund to finance purchases from abroad.

"The Bank of France will cede to the state to be put in the exchange stabilization fund gold deducted from its stocks to the amount of 30,000,000,000 francs on the basis of 23.34 milligrams, 900 thousandths fine per franc," the decree read.

"In settlement of the transfer foreseen in Article 3 of the present agreement, the Bank of France will receive for a nominal capital of 30,000,000,000 francs, treasury bonds of three months' duration bearing interest at the tax in force for ordinary treasury bonds of 75 to 105 days limit and negotiable on the market."

Furthermore, "the Bank of France agrees to advance the state, on the demand of the ministry of finance, and in addition to the advances foreseen by the first article of the convention of September 9, 1936, temporary loans of 20,000,000,000 francs without interest."

These loans "will be secured by three months treasury bonds bearing no interest and renewable up to the reimbursement of the loans."

A broad program regimenting Frenchmen in the fight against Germany also was announced by Reynaud in a nationwide radio address. Measures announced included a general census "in a few days" preparatory to distribution of food ration cards.

Eble Denies Trade Pacts Aid Business

Former Customs Chief Asserts Claim Is 'Silly Nonsense'

By the Associated Press

A former commissioner of customs told the Senate Finance Committee yesterday that it was "silly nonsense" to believe that the national economy could be bettered through the reciprocal trade program.

Appearing in opposition to a resolution to extend the trade agreements act for three more years, F. X. A. Eble, Republican customs head in 1929-33, declared that Great Britain had given the United States "blows below the belt" by reducing the value of the pound sterling four days after signing a trade agreement with this country.

Budd Favors Bill

When Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, pointed out that this action increased the cost to the British of products they bought in this country as well as cut the cost of American purchases in England, Eble launched into a technical explanation of foreign exchange.

B. C. Budd, of Detroit, chairman of the export committee of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, urged approval of the bill. Budd said the auto industry believed that its best customers—the farmers—had been helped rather than hurt by the trade agreements program.

On the other hand, F. R. Marshall, of Salt Lake, secretary of the National Wool Growers Association, expressed the conviction that the trade agreements program "is trading off agriculture to increase exports of factory products."

Hugo N. Schloss, of New York, president of the American Lace Manufacturers Association, charged that reduction of import duties made in agreements with Great Britain and France were definitely "destroying" the lace industry in the United States. He urged that appeal be provided from decisions of the State Department on tariff schedules.

Skullduggery Charged

C. B. J. Molitor, of New York, chairman of the association's tariff committee, charged that the trade agreement with France had been concluded by "skullduggery."

Walter R. Peabody, of New York, secretary of the American Tariff League, asserted that the trade agreements program was "not adequate" to meet postwar conditions. John G. Lerch, of New York, put into the record statements in opposition to the bill by the Wool Hat Manufacturers Association of America, toy manufacturers, and woven wire manufacturers.

U.S. Importers Unite to Fight British Blockade of Nazi Goods

By Walter Fitzmaurice

International News Service Staff Writer

Organization of the Committee of American Importers to combat the British blockade against German exports to the United States was disclosed here yesterday.

To direct the campaign, the committee has engaged Bert L. Hunt, the State Department lawyer, who drafted a majority of this Government's notes protesting Allied measures of economic warfare, including the blockade.

Hunt, the department's foremost expert on the law of contraband and blockade, confirmed his resignation as assistant legal adviser to represent the importers in Europe.

Other Measures Hinted

He will sail shortly from New York to lay before the Allied authorities the importers' case for moderation of the export blockade, proclaimed by a British order in council and a French decree last November 28.

Committee members, whose business has been throttled by the blockade, indicated other measures may be taken should persuasion fail.

Hunt, however, expressed belief the plight of the importers and the American industrial clients they supply with German goods unobtainable elsewhere can be amicably adjusted. He said:

"The difficulties are formidable but not unsurmountable. They appear to be due to a lack of understanding arising from long-range correspondence and the lack of a personal presentation of the issues involved."

The blockade sealed up in Germany goods valued in excess of $10,000,000, for which the American importers had paid or contracted to pay, committee members said.

Items included chemicals and dyes, optical goods, phosphates, fertilizers and specialty machines, including parts, which Germany alone produces.

The United States, in a protest December 6, in the drafting of which Hunt collaborated, insisted the export blockade had no basis in international law.

Most Applications Rejected

They promised to consider applications for clearance of certain goods shipments, particularly those paid for before the effective date of the blockade, and those unobtainable outside Germany.

Of hundreds of clearance applications filed since receipt of the British answer, committee members said, Britain has granted less than a score. The others have gone unanswered or have been rejected without explanation.

Committee sponsors include a majority of the leading American importers of German goods, headed by Arthur Reiner, Inc., of New York. Eugene R. Pickrell, New York attorney, has been designated counsel for committee matters in the United States.

Russian Bombers Raid Finn Towns

The defenders, who have been withdrawing gradually to their more formidable positions between the Bay of Viipuri and the Vuoski River, in the western part of the Karelian Isthmus, yesterday withstood assaults by wave upon wave of Red troops. In addition to inflicting tremendous losses on these forces, the Finns said they smashed 14 Soviet tanks.

Mass Attacks Fail

At the eastern end of the Mannerheim Line, in the Taipale area, the Russians launched three mass attacks "in great force," which the Finns said ended in failure.

The Finns' Isthmus Line now runs roughly from Viipuri Bay straight eastward to the Vuoski River, which splits the heart of the isthmus. From there to Taipale the line follows the original first line of the Mannerheim defenses.

Thus the Russians in three months of fighting have penetrated a distance ranging from about 38 miles on the western part of the isthmus to about 12 miles on the east.

Finnish strategy calls for delaying, punishing, wearing down action of a small army against a vastly larger enemy force.

Finns Mining Bay

To bolster their efforts, the Russians were reported today to have hurled fresh troops—estimated in some quarters at fully 19 divisions, nearly 300,000 men—into the Isthmus fighting.

On the other hand, the Finns were reported sowing mines in frozen Viipuri Bay to prevent a possible Russian attempt to cross from newly won positions north of the Koivisto fortified area and strike the mainland to the west and rear of Viipuri.

Meanwhile, the Helsinki newspaper Usi Suomi reported that Moscow had broadened its demands on Estonia, and already had occupied the twin Pakri Islands, near the Soviet air base at Paldiski, apparently by taking strategic points not defended by the Finns.

Turks Affirm Good Relations With Russia

Premier Denies Any Border Incidents, Flays War-Mongering

By Edward Kennedy,

Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Feb. 29.—Premier Saydam told his countrymen emphatically tonight that Turkey's relations with Russia are "normal and good."

His broadcast address was interpreted immediately by diplomats, watching the Near East for signs of spring military action, as notice to the British-French allies and Russia alike that Turkey is determined to stay out of the European war unless her own security is threatened.

Saydam denounced "evil intentioned propaganda" against Turkey's peace policy, and disavowed "aggressive intentions" by his country against Russia.

Recent national economy measures designed to prepare Turkey for any emergency, he insisted, had been interpreted falsely by "certain agencies" as meaning that Turkey wanted war.

"Has Soviet Russia any intention of acting against us?" he asked. "Up to the present there have been no events or evidence to support such an intention."

He asserted all stories of any Russian-Turkish border incident were untrue.

The premier did not mention Germany in his speech.

"Turkey's policies always have been frank," Saydam continued. "Turkey never has yielded and never will yield to any combination contradictory to her own line of conduct."

Diplomatic circles took the view that that statement meant Turkey is ready to hold to her obligations as a nonbelligerent ally of Great Britain and France, but is not willing to be led by them into war before her own security is threatened.

No. 1 Swiss Nazi Seized for Sending Secrets to Reich

Schaffhausen, Feb. 29 (AP).—Switzerland's number one Nazi, Robert Tobler, was arrested tonight and charged with espionage.

Tobler is the head of the Swiss national front, a Nazi-type party, and was once a member of the lower house of Parliament.

Military authorities said he was held for transmitting "information of a military character" to Germany.

Italy to Seek Coal From U. S. In Blockade

English to Seize Reich Fuel Ships, Cutting Off Supply

By the Associated Press

Rome, Feb. 29.—Italy, spurred by British threats to blockade coal shipments from Germany, was reported today in commercial circles to be negotiating for the purchase of some 3,000,000 tons of bituminous coal in the United States to avert a fuel shortage.

Although the negotiations were said to have been conducted by private interests, a government decision rejecting or approving the terms is considered likely within a few days.

The decision probably will be influenced by credit facilities, which might be extended by the Export-Import Bank, it was said.

(Washington coal men figured the order would bring $13,500,000 in business to American mines and railroads, with another $52,500,000 for transportation interests, mostly to United States shippers. The estimates were based on a price of $2.15 a ton for the coal, rail rates to Hampton Roads of $2.35, and present abnormal ocean freight rates of $17.50 a ton.)

In London, British government officials, announcing "suspension" of trade negotiations with Rome, disclosed that the British navy had been ordered to halt all shipments of German coal consigned to Italy beginning tomorrow.

Negotiations for a war trade agreement between Rome and London have been in progress for several weeks, and pending their conclusion Britain has allowed Italy to import coal from the Reich without interference.

The British decision to clamp down on German coal deliveries to Italy is in line with her blockade policy, which a few weeks ago was extended to cover German exports as well as imports.

At the time the blockade was extended, Britain announced that German exports were liable to seizure regardless of whether they were carried in ships flying neutral flags.

The chief stumbling block in the Rome-London trade negotiations was understood to have been Italy's refusal to sell arms to Britain, in return for which Britain had offered to sell Italy more coal.

Although British officials said the negotiations had been "suspended," there was no evidence at London to indicate they had been definitely broken off, and government circles appeared confident they would be renewed.

The possibility of Italy buying American coal stirred considerable interest in Government circles at Washington. The Commerce and State departments arranged to cable Rome for information.

Informed Rome circles intimated that the coal deal, if consummated, might pave the way for revised trade relations between Italy and the United States. They indicated that Italy probably would seek tariff concesions on Italian wines, silks, fabrics, fiber, felt and hats.

In addition to coal, Italy is interested in machinery for use in exploiting her own supplies of crude oil, scrap iron and steel. Shipment of about 20,000 tons of American-made steel plates was said to have been contracted for already for confrom Italy by a belligerent nation.

as how District accounts are kept."

The G. A. O., he said, had tried unsuccessfully for years to tell the District what kind of tax bills it should use, how to file records, and other details of auditing. Some recommendations have been adopted, he added, but others have been rejected.

The auditor also urged that a provision of the Seal bill placing all expenditures and collection of revenue under District officials be left in the bill.

He pointed out that the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and other quasi-Federal agencies now expend District funds without any consultation with District officials.

The subcommittee was amused by the discovery of a typographical error in the printed copy of the Seal bill, which substituted the word "or" for "of" and gave the Commissioners authority to control the moving of "human beings" instead of just bodies of human beings.

"Give us this authority and we won't need anything else," quipped Seal.

Witnesses to be heard today include Wilbur Finch, president of the District Suffrage Association; Harry Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association; Charles M. Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations; Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-District Industrial Union Council; A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, and Mrs. Eugene Callahan, of the American Association of University Women.

Leas Campbell, new president of the Washington Hotel, has a tete-a-tete with members of the hotel staff

The Washington home of Vice President Garner and Supreme Court Justice Murphy was sold yesterday to a Galveston (Tex.) hotel corporation.

Their home is the Washington Hotel, 22-year-old structure at Fifteenth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. It was sold, effective midnight, by the National Capital Hotel Corporaion, at between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

Purchase was announced by Leas Campbell, general manager of the Affiliated National Hotels, of Galveston, and president of the newly formed Texwash Corporation, which will have ownership.

The Washington Hotel was built during the World War on site of the old Corcoran Building, and opened half its 400 rooms the evening of April 4, 1918. Besides Vice President Garner and Justice Murphy, residents include A. J. Wirtz, Unsecretary of the Interior, and several members of Congress.

Campbell, who started in the hotel business as a bellboy in Beloit, Kans., two years before the Washington Hotel was built, said the Washington is the first hotel his firm has taken over in sound financial condition.

At a meeting of hotel department heads in the afternoon he said:

"I know just what you're thinking. I've been fired from hotel jobs myself, but you don't have to worry."

Campbell said, however, that he plans a $100,000 reconditioning program during the first year, to include air conditioning.

for the aged at the home.

The Health Department report on the Receiving Home, on the other hand, was forwarded to Bondy with recommendations for immediate reduction of the intake at the home, and better facilities for isolating diseased children.

The survey was made by Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the bureau of maternal and child welfare; Dr. Carl C. Dauer, epidemiologist, and Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of the school medical inspection service.

After a visit to the institution recently Chairman D'Alesandro demanded the Commissioners "do something right away" to remedy the conditions "without waiting for increased appropriations."

Dr. Oppenheimer pointed to a recent report of the Children's Bureau which made a demonstration for ten days in December, 1938, to determine the number of applicants for admission who should and could be cared for without being entered into the home. They studied the reasons for admission and by locating the parents returned the child to his home as soon as possible. Dr. Oppenheimer said of 82 children admitted in the period, 34 were kept less than one day, only 35 were considered actually in need of detention care and 13 were given shelter because of the absence of other facilities in the community.

The survey by the Health Department points out many shortcomings of the home. For example, it is pointed out that fire escapes are provided, "but windows leading to them kept locked and windows screened with heavy metal, mesh screens."

Television Industry to Begin Commercial Operations Sept. 1

FCC Grants Approval for Sponsorship Of Programs on Limited Number of Stations; Two Classes of Broadcasters Created

Growth of television into a major medium of communication and entertainment appeared a step closer yesterday when the industry was given permission to begin limited commercial operations September 1.

Approval for commercial sponsorship of programs on a limited number of stations was granted by the Federal Communications Commission, which declared that television has achieved "great advances."

The commission set up two classes of television stations. Class I stations would carry forward technical investigations and might be assigned to more than one channel. Class II stations, experimenting in program production, would operate on one channel only.

Beginning September 1, Class II stations may charge advertisers the full cost of all sponsored programs.

The Commission refused to fix definite standards of technical performance, asserting that television "should not be frozen in the present state of art."

To the industry the Commission suggested that an increase in the size of receiving set screens appears essential for any "widespread acceptance of television." Staging of television performances should be the subject of further experiments, the report recommends.

Evidence presented the FCC reveals that television "may be on the threshold of significant advance," the report stated. There is no reason today, the commission said, why the public should not buy receivers, providing purchasers are aware of "the fluid state of the art."

No step should be taken, however, to encourage a large public investment in receivers which may soon become obsolete, the FCC declared, "since such an economic loss in the long run can rebound only to the harm of the industry."

Lights at Station Cause Scant Delay

any lights in Washington ever were," he said. He began a flurry of staccato and technical talk of why the 28 vehicle and pedestrian lights were, in the main, placed at 28 faulty points. His cab moved down Pennsylvania avenue, turned into Constitution avenue and then up Louisiana avenue.

It moved through a splash of green lights, then hove upon the constellation that is the new system. A stop was made for a light at Louisiana avenue and the Plaza —but from there there was no hindrance.

On the second trip, one stop was made for a light on Louisiana avenue. One stop was made at the Plaza intersection. On the third trip, which followed the route from Eleventh and F up Eleventh and down H street through the Plaza, there was no interruption, save one brief slowing down for a street car within the Plaza.

This driver had commented that Goldberg designed the system and, at journey's end asserted that "it would be a terrible mess" if the traffic weren't all detouring out of distrust of the new lights and that "the city would have saved money by putting up a 50-cent detour notice."

Hanes Named To Business Council Post

Hopkins Appoints Former Treasury Undersecretary

John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, whose proposed selection as trustee for the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation was the subject recently of considerable controversy, has been appointed to the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council.

This was announced by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins. Hanes, however, was not present yesterday when the council opened its two-day February meeting at the department.

An increase in the council membership to 60, an addition to the membership of representatives for small business, farmers and consumers, was announced by Hopkins. Robert Yarnall, Philadelphia manufacturer, was chosen to speak for the small businessman. Oscar Johnston, who served the New Deal in several official capacities here, is the farmer representative, and Stacy May, of the Rockefeller Foundation, New York, is spokesman for consumers.

Among others who accepted Hopkins' invitation to serve on the council are: Cornelius F. Kelley, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co.; Louis E. Kirstein, vice president of William Filene's Sons Co., Boston; Clarence Avildsen, chairman of the United Drill Corporation, Chicago; Hardwick Stires, of Scudder, Stevens & Clark, New York, and Franklin D'Olier, president of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America. Avildsen and Stires have served as special advisers to Hopkins.

Hanes resigned as Undersecretary January 1. A short time ago Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, led an attack against his appointment as trustee for the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, for which voluntary bankruptcy proceedings have been filed in the Federal Court for the Southern New York District. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Attorney General Jackson joined Norris in insisting that the Securities and Exchange Commission should accept the trusteeship. Hanes, sponsored by New York banking interests, reported to have informed the [illegible] he would not serve.

Concluding Session Today

The business advisory council will conclude its meeting today. Undersecretary of Commerce [illegible], in the absence of Hopkins, met with the group yesterday. The business leaders heard a luncheon address by Col. F. C. Harrington, Works Projects Administration Commissioner. E. A. Goldenweiser, research chief of the Federal Reserve Board, will address the council at luncheon today.

Since the council is only in an advisory capacity the Commerce Secretary, its actions are not made public.

Daladier Sees Massive Nazi Drive in Spring

French Premier Tells Japanese Paper of Hope For Closer Relations

By the United Press

Paris, Feb. 29.—Premier Edouard Daladier, in an exclusive interview with the Osaka Mainichi, tonight revealed that French military preparations envisage a "massive German attack, with all forces," this spring.

Daladier also said France and Japan are preparing to open negotiations for French recognition of Manchukuo and that the French government views Russian bolshevism and German nazism as essentially the same thing, comparable to cholera or the plague.

It was the first full dress interview the premier, foreign minister and minister of national defense has granted since the start of the war and he expounded his views on the world situation at length, making these points:

Russian Attitude "Contemptible"

1. France is determined to continue the war "until we have rid Europe of a situation under which, every 25 years, France finds herself obliged to go to war."

2. France expects a German offensive this spring, but is not prepared to speculate on the possibility of an Allied drive if the Germans fail to attack. The premier did not deny that an Allied attack is possible.

3. No negotiations are taking place so far between France and Italy with regard to Italian aspirations in Tunisia, the Suez Canal zone, and Djibouti. Technically, French-Italian relations are "good."

4. Russia's attitude toward the European war is "contemptible." Moscow hopes the war will spread and bolshevism with it. France considers bolshevism and nazism equally hateful—as hateful as cholera or the plague.

5. Following a discussion of general policy, it is hoped that negotiations can be started "very soon" envisaging French recognition of Manchukuo. Conversations will be held simultaneously in Paris and Tokyo, and the outlook is "excellent." (The United States has refused to recognize Manchukuo, composed of China's former northeastern provinces, on the grounds that the Manchu state was brought into being by "force.")

General Atmosphere Conciliatory

6. France agrees that the French Yunnan Railway, in south China, which has been bombed by Japanese planes, should not be used for transporting war supplies to China, but is not yet ready to accept Japan's broad definition of what shall be considered "contraband."

7. France is "much less preoccupied" with the situation which will be created in China following establishment of the new Japan-sponsored "national" government, to be proclaimed soon in Nanking, than with that in Europe.

The premier's attitude throughout toward Japan was conciliatory. He believed that a Russo-Japanese accord would be against Japan's best interests.

French Revalue Gold in War Step

The thirty-billion franc profit on revaluation is to be used by France's exchange stabilization fund.

Finance Minister Reynaud, in announcing the measure, explained that "for our domestic payments we have taken out part of the reserve which the treasury has at the Bank of France and which has resulted from the fact that in November, 1938, the gold stock was revalued at a price below its real value."

Secret Purchase Fund

In addition, what he described as a "fraction of our war chest" of Bank of France gold will be put aside as a secret fund to finance purchases from abroad.

"The Bank of France will cede to the state to be put in the exchange stabilization fund gold deducted from its stocks to the amount of 80,000,000,000 francs on the basis of 23.34 milligrams, 900 thousandths fine per franc," the decree read.

"In settlement of the transfer foreseen in Article 3 of the present agreement, the Bank of France will receive for a nominal capital of 30,000,000,000 francs, treasury bonds of three months' duration bearing interest at the tax in force for ordinary treasury bonds of 75 to 105 days limit and negotiable on the market."

Furthermore, "the Bank of France agrees to advance the state, on the demand of the ministry of finance, and in addition to the advances foreseen by the first article of the convention of September 9, 1938, temporary loans of 20,000,000,000 francs without interest."

These loans "will be secured by three months treasury bonds bearing no interest and renewable up to the reimbursement of the loans."

A broad program regimenting Frenchmen in the fight against Germany also was announced by Reynaud in a nationwide radio address. Measures announced included a general census "in a few days" preparatory to distribution of food ration cards.

Eble Denies Trade Pacts Aid Business

By the Associated Press

A former commissioner of customs told the Senate Finance Committee yesterday that it was "silly nonsense" to believe that the national economy could be bettered through the reciprocal trade program.

Appearing in opposition to a resolution to extend the trade agreements act for three more years, F. X. A. Eble, Republican customs head in 1929-33, declared that Great Britain had given the United States "blows below the belt" by reducing the value of the pound sterling four days after signing a trade agreement with this country.

Budd Favors Bill

When Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, pointed out that this action increased the cost to the British of products they bought in this country as well as cut the cost of American purchases in England, Eble launched into a technical explanation of foreign exchange.

B. C. Budd, of Detroit, chairman of the export committee of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, urged approval of the bill. Budd said the auto industry believed that its best customers—the farmers—had been helped rather than hurt by the trade agreements program.

On the other hand, F. R. Marshall, of Salt Lake, secretary of the National Wool Growers Association, expressed the conviction that the trade agreements program "is trading off agriculture to increase exports of factory products."

Hugo N. Schloss, of New York, president of the American Lace Manufacturers Association, charged that reduction of import duties made in agreements with Great Britain and France were definitely "destroying" the lace industry in the United States. He urged that appeal be provided from decisions of the State Department on tariff schedules.

Skullduggery Charged

C. B. J. Molitor, of New York, chairman of the association's tariff committee, charged that the trade agreement with France had been concluded by "skullduggery."

Walter R. Peabody, of New York, secretary of the American Tariff League, asserted that the trade agreements program was "not adequate" to meet postwar conditions. John G. Lerch, of New York, put into the record statements in opposition to the bill by the Wool Hat Manufacturers Association of America, toy manufacturers, and woven wire manufacturers.

U.S. Importers Unite to Fight British Blockade of Nazi Goods

By Walter Fitzmaurice

International News Service Staff Writer

Organization of the Committee of American Importers to combat the British blockade against German exports to the United States was disclosed here yesterday.

To direct the campaign, the committee has engaged Bert L. Hunt, the State Department lawyer, who drafted a majority of this Government's notes protesting Allied measures of economic warfare, including the blockade.

Hunt, the department's foremost expert on the law of contraband and blockade, confirmed his resignation as assistant legal adviser to represent the importers in Europe.

Other Measures Hinted

He will sail shortly from New York to lay before the Allied authorities the importers' case for moderation of the export blockade, proclaimed by a British order in council and a French decree last November 28.

Committee members, whose business has been throttled by the blockade, indicated other measures may be taken should persuasion fail.

Hunt, however, expressed belief the plight of the importers and the American industrial clients they supply with German goods unobtainable elsewhere can be amicably adjusted. He said:

"The difficulties are formidable but not unsurmountable. They appear to be due to a lack of understanding arising from long-range correspondence and the lack of a personal presentation of the issues involved."

The blockade sealed up in Germany goods valued in excess of $10,000,000, for which the American importers had paid or contracted to pay, committee members said.

Items included chemicals and dyes, optical goods, phosphates, fertilizers and specialty machines, including parts, which Germany alone produces.

The United States, in a protest December 6, in the drafting of which Hunt collaborated, insisted the export blockade had no basis in international law.

Most Applications Rejected

They promised to consider applications for clearance of certain goods shipments, particularly those paid for before the effective date of the blockade, and those unobtainable outside Germany.

Of hundreds of clearance applications filed since receipt of the British answer, committee members said, Britain has granted less than a score. The others have gone unanswered or have been rejected without explanation.

Committee sponsors include a majority of the leading American importers of German goods, headed by Arthur Reiner, Inc., of New York. Eugene R. Pickrell, New York attorney, has been designated counsel for committee matters in the United States.

The defenders, who have been withdrawing gradually to their more formidable positions between the Bay of Viipuri and the Vuoski River, in the western part of the Karelian Isthmus, yesterday withstood assaults by wave upon wave of Red troops. In addition to inflicting tremendous losses on these forces, the Finns said they smashed 14 Soviet tanks.

Mass Attacks Fail

At the eastern end of the Mannerheim Line, in the Taipale area, the Russians launched three mass attacks "in great force," which the Finns said ended in failure.

The Finns' Isthmus Line now runs roughly from Viipuri Bay straight eastward to the Vuoski River, which splits the heart of the isthmus. From there to Taipale the line follows the original first line of the Mannerheim defenses.

Thus the Russians in three months of fighting have penetrated a distance ranging from about 38 miles on the western part of the isthmus to about 12 miles on the east.

Finnish strategy calls for delaying, punishing, wearing down action of a small army against a vastly larger enemy force.

Finns Mining Bay

To bolster their efforts, the Russians were reported today to have hurled fresh troops—estimated in some quarters at fully 19 divisions, nearly 300,000 men—into the isthmus fighting.

On the other hand, the Finns were reported sowing mines in frozen Viipuri Bay to prevent a possible Russian attempt to erost from newly won positions north of the Koivisto fortified area and strike the mainland to the west and rear of Viipuri.

Meanwhile, the Helsinki newspaper Usi Suomi reported that Moscow had broadened its demands on Estonia, and already had occupied the twin Pakri Islands, near the Soviet air base at Paldiski, apparently by taking strategic points not defended by the Finns.

Turks Affirm Good Relations With Russia

Premier Denies Any Border Incidents, Flays War-Mongering

By Edward Kennedy,

Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Feb. 29.—Premier Saydam told his countrymen emphatically tonight that Turkey's relations with Russia are "normal and good."

His broadcast address was interpreted immediately by diplomats, watching the Near East for signs of spring military action, as notice to the British-French allies and Russia alike that Turkey is determined to stay out of the European war unless her own security is threatened.

Saydam denounced "evil intentioned propaganda" against Turkey's peace policy, and disavowed "aggressive intentions" by his country against Russia.

Recent national economy measures designed to prepare Turkey for any emergency, he insisted, had been interpreted falsely by "certain agencies" as meaning that Turkey wanted war.

"Has Soviet Russia any intention of acting against us?" he asked. "Up to the present there have been no events or evidence to support such an intention."

He asserted all stories of any Russian-Turkish border incident were untrue.

The premier did not mention Germany in his speech.

"Turkey's policies always have been frank," Saydam continued. "Turkey never has yielded and never will yield to any combination contradictory to her own line of conduct."

Diplomatic circles took the view that that statement meant Turkey is ready to hold to her obligations as a nonbelligerent ally of Great Britain and France, but is not willing to be led by them into war before her own security is threatened.

No. 1 Swiss Nazi Seized for Sending Secrets to Reich

Schaffhausen, Feb. 29 (AP).—Switzerland's number one Nazi, Robert Tobler, was arrested tonight and charged with espionage.

Tobler is the head of the Swiss national front, a Nazi-type party, and was once a member of the lower house of Parliament.

Military authorities said he was held for transmitting "information of a military character" to Germany.

Russia Violates Law, Finland Tells League

Geneva, Feb. 29 (AP).—Finland today sent to the League of Nations two notes accusing Russia of violating the rules of war. One listed instances of bombing civilians.

Italy to Seek Coal From U. S. In Blockade

English to Seize Reich Fuel Ships, Cutting Off Supply

By the Associated Press

Rome, Feb. 29.—Italy, spurred by British threats to blockade coal shipments from Germany, was reported today in commercial circles to be negotiating for the purchase of some 3,000,000 tons of bituminous coal in the United States to avert a fuel shortage.

Although the negotiations were said to have been conducted by private interests, a government decision rejecting or approving the terms is considered likely within a few days.

The decision probably will be influenced by credit facilities, which might be extended by the Export-Import Bank, it was said.

(Washington coal men figured the order would bring $13,500,000 in business to American mines and railroads, with another $52,500,000 for transportation interests, mostly to United States shippers. The estimates were based on a price of $2.15 a ton for the coal, rail rates to Hampton Roads of $2.35, and present abnormal ocean freight rates of $17.50 a ton.)

In London, British government officials, announcing "suspension" of trade negotiations with Rome, disclosed that the British navy had been ordered to halt all shipments of German coal consigned to Italy beginning tomorrow.

Negotiations for a war trade agreement between Rome and London have been in progress for several weeks, and pending their conclusion Britain has allowed Italy to import coal from the Reich without interference.

The British decision to clamp down on German coal deliveries to Italy is in line with her blockade policy, which a few weeks ago was extended to cover German exports as well as imports.

At the time the blockade was extended, Britain announced that German exports were liable to seizure regardless of whether they were carried in ships flying neutral flags.

The chief stumbling block in the Rome-London trade negotiations was understood to have been Italy's refusal to sell arms to Britain, in return for which Britain had offered to sell Italy more coal.

Although British officials said the negotiations had been "suspended," there was no evidence at London to indicate they had been definitely broken off, and government circles appeared confident they would be renewed.

The possibility of Italy buying American coal stirred considerable interest in Government circles at Washington. The Commerce and State departments arranged to cable Rome for information.

Informed Rome circles intimated that the coal deal, if consummated, might pave the way for revised trade relations between Italy and the United States. They indicated that Italy probably would seek tariff concesions on Italian wines, silks, fabrics, fiber, felt and hats.

In addition to coal, Italy is interested in machinery for use in exploiting her own supplies of crude oil, scrap iron and steel. Shipment of about 20,000 tons of American-made steel plates was said to have been contracted for already for confrom Italy by a belligerent nation.

as how District accounts are kept."

The G. A. O., he said, had tried unsuccessfully for years to tell the District what kind of tax bills it should use, how to file records, and other details of auditing. Some recommendations have been adopted, he added, but others have been rejected.

The auditor also urged that a provision of the Seal bill placing all expenditures and collection of revenue under District officials be left in the bill.

He pointed out that the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and other quasi-Federal agencies now expend District funds without any consultation with District officials.

The subcommittee was amused by the discovery of a typographical error in the printed copy of the Seal bill, which substituted the word "or" for "of" and gave the Commissioners authority to control the moving of "human beings" instead of just bodies of human beings.

"Give us this authority and we won't need anything else," quipped Seal.

Witnesses to be heard today include Wilbur Finch, president of the District Suffrage Association; Harry Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association; Charles M. Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations; Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-District Industrial Union Council; A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, and Mrs. Eugene Callahan, of the American Association of University Women.

Midnight shows in connection with the President's Birthday celebrations netted the infantile paralysis fund $6,203, it was announced yesterday.

Texas Firm Purchases Washington Hotel, Home of Garner, Murphy, Congressmen

Leas Campbell, new president of the Washington Hotel, has a dete-a-tete with members of the hotel staff

The Washington home of Vice President Garner and Supreme Court Justice Murphy was sold yesterday to a Galveston (Tex.) hotel corporation.

Their home is the Washington Hotel, 22-year-old structure at Fifteenth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. It was sold, effective midnight, by the National Capital Hotel Corporaion, at between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

Purchase was announced by Leas Campbell, general manager of the Affiliated National Hotels, of Galveston, and president of the newly formed Texwash Corporation, which will have ownership.

The Washington Hotel was built during the World War on site of the old Corcoran Building, and opened half its 400 rooms the evening of April 4, 1918. Besides Vice President Garner and Justice Murphy, residents include A. J. Wirtz, Unsecretary of the Interior, and several members of Congress.

Campbell, who started in the hotel business as a bellboy in Beloit, Kans., two years before the Washington Hotel was built, said the Washington is the first hotel his firm has taken over in sound financial condition.

At a meeting of hotel department heads in the afternoon he said:

"I know just what you're thinking. I've been fired from hotel jobs myself, but you don't have to worry."

Campbell said, however, that he plans a $100,000 reconditioning program during the first year, to include air conditioning.

for the aged at the home.

The Health Department report on the Receiving Home, on the other hand, was forwarded to Bondy with recommendations for immediate reduction of the intake at the home, and better facilities for isolating diseased children.

The survey was made by Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the bureau of maternal and child welfare; Dr. Carl C. Dauer, epidemiologist, and Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of the school medical inspection service.

After a visit to the institution recently Chairman D'Alesandro demanded the Commissioners "do something right away" to remedy the conditions "without waiting for increased appropriations."

Dr. Oppenheimer pointed to a recent report of the Children's Bureau which made a demonstration for ten days in December, 1938, to determine the number of applicants for admission who should and could be cared for without being entered into the home. They studied the reasons for admission and by locating the parents returned the child to his home as soon as possible. Dr. Oppenheimer said of 82 children admitted in the period, 34 were kept less than one day, only 35 were considered actually in need of detention care and 13 were given shelter because of the absence of other facilities in the community.

The survey by the Health Department points out many shortcomings of the home. For example, it is pointed out that fire escapes are provided, "but windows leading to them kept locked and windows screened with heavy metal, mesh screens."

Army Assembles Armored Autos

The Army yesterday ordered a concentration of armored scout cars from Fort Myer and other cavalry posts into provisional scout car platoons during Corps and Army maneuvers in the South this spring.

The cars will leave their home stations late this month to arrive at Fort Benning, Ga., April 1. One officer and about 30 men will leave from Fort Myer.

Television Industry to Begin Commercial Operations Sept. 1

FCC Grants Approval for Sponsorship Of Programs on Limited Number of Stations; Two Classes of Broadcasters Created

Growth of television into a major medium of communication and entertainment appeared a step closer yesterday when the industry was given permission to begin limited commercial operations September 1.

Approval for commercial sponsorship of programs on a limited number of stations was granted by the Federal Communications Commission, which declared that television has achieved "great advances."

The commission set up two classes of television stations. Class I stations would carry forward technical investigations and might be assigned to more than one channel. Class II stations, experimenting in program production, would operate on one channel only.

Beginning September 1, Class II stations may charge advertisers the full cost of all sponsored programs.

The Commission refused to fix definite standards of technical performance, asserting that television "should not be frozen in the present state of art."

To the industry the Commission suggested that an increase in the size of receiving set screens appears essential for any "widespread acceptance of television." Staging of television performances should be the subject of further experiments, the report recommends.

Evidence presented the FCC reveals that television "may be on the threshold of significant advance," the report stated. There is no reason today, the commission said, why the public should not buy receivers, providing purchasers are aware of "the fluid state of the art."

No step should be taken, however, to encourage a large public investment in receivers which may soon become obsolete, the FCC declared, "since such an economic loss in the long run can rebound only to the harm of the industry."

any lights in Washington ever were," he said. He began a flurry of staccato and technical talk of why the 28 vehicle and pedestrian lights were, in the main, placed at 28 faulty points. His cab moved down Pennsylvania avenue, turned into Constitution avenue and then up Louisiana avenue.

It moved through a splash of green lights, then hove upon the constellation that is the new system. A stop was made for a light at Louisiana avenue and the Plaza—but from there there was no hindrance.

On the second trip, one stop was made for a light on Louisiana avenue. One stop was made at the Plaza intersection. On the third trip, which followed the route from Eleventh and F up Eleventh and down H street through the Plaza, there was no interruption, save one brief slowing down for a street car within the Plaza.

This driver had commented that Goldberg designed the system and, at journey's end asserted that "it would be a terrible mess" if the traffic weren't all detouring out of distrust of the new lights and that "the city would have saved money by putting up a 50-cent detour notice."

Hanes Named To Business Council Post

Hopkins Appoints Former Treasury Undersecretary

John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, whose proposed selection as trustee for the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation was the subject recently of considerable controversy, has been appointed to the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council.

This was announced by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins. Hanes, however, was not present yesterday when the council opened its two-day February meeting at the department.

An increase in the council membership to 60, an addition to the membership of representatives for small business, farmers and consumers, was announced by Hopkins. Robert Yarnall, Philadelphia manufacturer, was chosen to speak for the small businessman. Oscar Johnston, who served the New Deal in several official capacities here, is the farmer representative, and Stacy May, of the Rockefeller Foundation, New York, is spokesman for consumers.

Among others who accepted Hopkins' invitation to serve on the council are: Cornelius F. Kelley, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co.; Louis E. Kirstein, vice president of William Filene's Sons Co., Boston; Clarence Avildsen, chairman of the United Drill Corporation, Chicago; Hardwick Stires, of Scudder, Stevens & Clark, New York, and Franklin D'Olier, president of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America. Avildsen and Stires have served as special advisers to Hopkins.

Hanes resigned as Undersecretary January 1. A short time ago Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, led an attack against his appointment as trustee for the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, for which voluntary bankruptcy proceedings have been filed in the Federal Court for the Southern New York District. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Attorney General Jackson joined Norris in insisting that the Securities and Exchange Commission should accept the trusteeship. Hanes, sponsored by New York banking interests, is reported to have informed the court he would not serve.

Concluding Session Today

The business advisory council will conclude its meeting today. Undersecretary of Commerce Noble, in the absence of Hopkins, met with the group yesterday. The business leaders heard a luncheon address by Col. F. C. Harrington, Works Projects Administration Commissioner. E. A. Goldenweiser, research chief of the Federal Reserve Board, will address the council at luncheon today.

Since the council acts only in an advisory capacity to the Commerce Secretary, its actions are not made public.

Commissioners Own Track Horses, Labor Official Says

"You mean that both our Commissioners actually own race horses and encourage race track betting in other States?" Reynolds exploded.

"Why that's appalling to me—it's like the fellow who drinks wet and votes dry," Reynolds drawled. "I can't imagine anyone actually owning race horses and encouraging betting in other States. You say they are against this bill?"

Murphy asserted they had given that impression to him time after time.

Last night, Commissioner Hazen affirmed his opposition to racing in the District.

"I don't mind saying I'm opposed to it for the simple reason that I don't think the majority of the people want it here. I might like a drink of whisky and still be against it. I'm supposed to represent the District, not what I might like myself," he said.

"I raise horses and I do favor racing in Virginia. There's a lot of money invested in breeding fine horses in Virginia, and racing would help that. I don't think there's any interest in breeding horses in the District. You want to know about Worthowning—oh, I dumped that off on Commissioner Allen," Hazen said, referring to the horse he raced at Charles Town and Marlboro last year.

Pokes Fun at Horse

Commissioner Allen reserved comment, stating he understood he and Hazen were to be at the Senate hearing today at 11 a. m.

"But you can have Worthowning if you want him," Allen quipped. He purchased the horse from Hazen in the Marlboro racing season.

Differences moved to a new front last night as John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, declared that Murphy was in "no way, shape or form" connected with the union and had no authority to speak for that body.

"I plan to write Senator Reynolds a letter tomorrow informing him that Murphy does not represent us and is not authorized to give our viewpoint," Locher said.

"The Central Labor Union indorsed the bill to legalize racing when it was last brought up in Congress in 1936, but we're not going to permit anyone outside the union to go down there and speak for us even on matters we have indorsed," Locher added.

"He's correct in saying we favored the bill, but if he's representing himself as our delegate, there's a mistake somewhere," he said.

Murphy, however, insisted that he was the duly appointed representative of the union.

"I was talking to Locher only yesterday, and Frank J. Cleman, the secretary, was there at the hearing with me when I was talking," Murphy insisted. "They gave me the complete minutes of the union's indorsement meeting. I admit I haven't been a member of the union in two years, but I still carry a card."

Justin V. O'Conor, local businessman who said he was speaking as a "farmer," added his voice to Murphy's charges.

LaRoe Defends Them

Leading the opposition of the measure to legalize pari-mutuel betting in Washington, Wilbur LaRoe, jr., of the Federation of Churches, rushed to the defense of Allen and Hazen. "They are putting the welfare of the city above their private interests," LaRoe interjected.

The Commissioners' activities were brought into the session after Murphy had painted a glowing picture of revenue flowing into the District government's coffers at the rate of $700,000 per year.

A 54-day racing season and a daily play at the mutuel windows of $300,000 was envisioned by Murphy.

"And there's the matter of Federal licenses. You'd get a take-off, too," R. H. Brown, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, told Reynolds.

"Flowers That Bloom"

Brown testified the Columbia Heights group was solidly behind Reynolds' bill.

LaRoe voiced bitter opposition, however, and sarcastically compared the measure to the "flowers that bloom in the spring."

"It's the same old story. Every spring this subject keeps bobbing up, and the citizens' associations go on record against it as an evil the city doesn't want," he asserted. "It is difficult to find an association in favor of the bill."

Murphy immediately pointed out that in the room were officials and leaders of the Trinity, Kenilworth, Rock Creek, Deanwood, Southeast and the Georgetown Progressive Citizens Associations and the Washingtonians, waiting to express support of the bill.

W. J. Calnan, of the Home and School Association, testified that his organization had gone on record against the race track idea and charged that any revenue from such a track would be more than offset by the expense to the city in the way of policing and "catching up with those fellows."

The Rev. Henry V. Porter, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, raised the question of the effect of a race track on morals in adding his opposition.

LaRoe, however, was the chief dissenter. He pictured a vast influx of gangsters, gamblers, various other parasites and even dope fiends.

"We do not want to make Washington a mecca for the gambling fraternity," he said. "It's true the numbers racket still flourishes. It is highly incongruous, however, to legislate against gambling in certain sections of the city while legalizing it at a race track."

He charged the bill was a matter of "private interests" and demanded to know if Murphy holds an option on the supposed site of the track, the old Benning track in northeast Washington. Murphy answered he had no interest in the site and knew of no others who did.

Reynolds and Murphy conferred for more than an hour, finding themselves almost in perfect agreement.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Faces Divorce

MRS. HELEN VARNER VANDERBILT, of Clarksville, W. Shafer Charges Liquor 'Meddling'

said. "It was only because of political pressure that this investigation was started."

Shafer argued that the subcommittee had been directed to examine only the Leo Rossiter and Ralph A. Lee cases, in which the ABC board reversed its decisions after the House inquiry had been ordered.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, sponsor of the resolution ordering the investigation, last night took issue with Shafer's interpretation, stating that his intention was that the subcommittee "should make a full and complete investigation of the administration of the present act."

"The subcommittee certainly was not expected to confine itself to the Rossiter and Lee cases, he said.

Kennedy declined to comment on Shafer's reference to an "influential Maryland Congressman." He said he would issue a formal statement after studying a transcript of yesterday's hearing.

Henry, who was on the stand more than an hour, asserted that an informal opinion by Corporation Counsel Seal made it "a waste of time" for citizens to protest board decisions.

Seal had told the House District Committee that he doubted the board had a legal right to deny a license renewal in the absence of any violations of law or regulations.

William Ramsay, of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association, recommended revision of the Beverage Control Act to narrow the ABC board's discretionary powers. Provision should be made for appeal from the board's decision to the Circuit Court of Appeals, he said.

"The granting of a license one year should not create any presumption in favor of a renewal," he declared.

Alfred D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, who described himself as a "lifelong total abstainer," said the country will never know "peace, prosperity or good order" until prohibition is reenacted.

Dale Crowley, executive secretary of the United Dry Forces of the District, submitted a mass of statistics to support charges that drunkenness and crime have increased jointly within recent years.

The per capita District consumption is 22.2 gallons a year, he said, as compared with a national average of 13 gallons and 4.5 in Virginia, where the dispensary system is in effect.

Eberharter asked whether he was not defeating his cause by working for elimination of abuses in the liquor traffic.

"No, I don't think so," Crowley responded. "If conditions are too bad, temperate people get discouraged and give up fighting."

Crowley said he thought Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the ABC board, was "more socially minded" than other members and that he "tries to represent the people."

Both Sides Admit Fighting on Rhine

Paris, Feb. 29 (AP).—Bitter fighting was reported today by both the German and the French high commands.

The French said patrols were active west of the Vosges Mountains and that there was firing on both banks of the Rhine.

Germany's military communique, issued in Berlin, told of "bitter fighting at close quarters" in a small woods northwest of Betting and east of the Moselle River.

Appeals' decision Wednesday.

Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said yesterday that his committee realizes the importance of the problem here and "will examine it carefully."

Representative Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said that he favored a fee system here such as prevails in Maryland.

"Serious," D'Alesandro Says

"Something should be done to correct the situation described by the Court of Appeals," he said. "I think Congress ought to pass a law authorizing the courts here to pay reasonable fees to attorneys they assign to indigent defendants. In Maryland the standard fee is $100. That is much less than an experienced lawyer would receive normally. Nevertheless, the courts in our State manage to get attorneys of high capability to take such cases."

Representative Thomas D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, said that if young and inexperienced lawyers were being assigned by the courts here it was a "very serious situation." He said he was going to study the public defender bill.

Senator Ashurst said that while he was not hostile to the Capper bill, he rather favored a system under which the courts would be authorized to compensate attorneys handling cases of indigents.

"When I was practicing law in Arizona," he said, "lawyers handling such cases got no fee. They felt that, as true ministers of justice, it was a duty that they owed to the judge, the bar and to society."

In its opinion in the Johnson case, the Court of Appeals said "It is hard to ask experienced counsel, of proved ability, to serve in cases of this sort without compensation."

Crime Wave Swells As Police Line-up Many Suspects

into a rear room after rifling the cash register. The victims told police the bandits warned them "we've got a good mind to kill you anyway" as they were forced into the rear room.

While the lineup was dispersing, Hasper Thompson, colored, of 1602 Levis street northeast, was robbed of $20 by two colored men and a white man who forced him into an automobile at Fairview and New York avenues northeast. Thompson told police the men held him in the automobile with what appeared to be a sawed-off shotgun and put him out at Sixth and Oates streets northeast.

When Gales School, First street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, was opened yesterday, Mary A. Dilger, principal, discovered the student aid room, maintained by the Parent-Teacher Association, had been ransacked during the night. Missing were 3 suits, 20 pairs of trousers, 30 pairs of knickers, 15 pairs of shoes, five shirts and 120 pairs of stockings. Five sewing machines were smashed. The stolen articles were valued at $117.

Whisky Is Stolen

The three suits had been placed there for three poor boys unable to afford such attire at graduation exercises.

Twenty-four bottles of whisky were stolen from the show window of his store at 1448 P street northwest, yesterday, Morris Bassin reported to police. He said a stone was thrown through the plate glass.

A basement window was broken to gain entrance to the home of Emma Williams, 1543 Eighth street northwest, by a thief who escaped with a radio.

A suit valued at $10 was stolen from a laundry truck parked in the 1200 block Raum street northeast, said Louis Brott, 1467 Irving street northwest, driver.

Denied the privilege of serenading Mrs. Ida Dick, proprietor of a novelty shop at 2021 M street northwest, a colored man with a guitar yesterday retaliated by attacking Mrs. Dick, kicking out a showcase and taking a toothbrush, chewing gum and perfume. A short time later a suspect was arrested.

Southwest Council Opposes Bill For D. C. Racing

The Southwest Neighborhood Council yesterday voted its opposition to the bill legalizing racing in the District, and to the proposed Child Labor Law amendment which would permit children to appear on the stage here at night.

The council, meeting at Barney Neighborhood House, also went on record in favor of a mental hygiene clinic for the Health Department.

The Rev. John L. Mixon, director of social welfare, Washington Federation of Churches; the Rev. Richard T. Scholl, pastor of Gorsuch Methodist Church, and the Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, took part in a panel discussion of "The Relation of the Churches to the Southwest."

Policeman Detained As Wife Is Found Shot

New York, Feb. 29 (AP).—Bernadine Bernstein, Broadway chorus beauty who eloped to Elkton, Md., last July with Patrolman Max Bernstein of the New York police force, was shot with her husband's revolver during a domestic argument today, and he was arrested on a charge of felonious assault.

Bernstein was quoted by Inspector Louis Schilling as saying he found his wife shot after he had frustrated her attempt to kill herself.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

JOHN ELLIOTT INTO SHOREHAM. The noted young barytone, John Elliott, will star in the Shoreham Blue Room next week. You'll remember him as soloist with Horace Heidt's orchestra, also for his juvenile lead in Ed Wynn's musical "Hurray for What." Esquire Elliott sings a superior barytone, but his appearance is not that of the orthodox barytone. He's no fugitive from a reducing diet, has a trace of moustache and a Don Ameche smile.

HOTCHA "HA-CHA." That pyromaniac number, "Knick Knack Polly Wha Jingasol," written by Washington's Nat Lewis, will be vocaled tonight by Dick (Ha-Cha) Gardner with Dick Koons' Mayflower Lounge orchestra. This is the first presentation for "K. K. P. W. J." since it become a platter craze.

DEL RIO MYSTERY. Manager Herbert Sachs, of Del Rio, is quietly cooking up a marvelous and mysterious surprise for his patrons. This dish of super-entertainment will probably be ready in a week or so. Be prepared for anything. . . . But it's no mystery that Miss Cecilia Sachs, Herbert's sister and aide-de-camp at Del Rio, is just back from Port-au-Prince, Haiti, says the Caribbean isles are still a blue heaven

WHERE NEXT? That's the question that's plunging Bert Granoff, Glen Hardman and Alice O'Connell, of the Neptune Room, into heavy thought. The many months of their Neptune engagement wind up on March 29 and they're thumbing over offers from New York, Chicago and Ohio. "They all look so good that I think we'll just draw straws," said Bert.

SPRING CLOTHES. Singer Adele Van, of the Lounge Riviera, is looking like the first crocus in a tiny pill-box hat of blue flowers. . . . Hi Hat's Angie Rodante is ready for the first sunny day with a frock of dusty rose and powder blue coat and bonnet.

PAUL MARTIN, "chatterbox cartoonist," who's garnering laughs at the Lotus LISTENING POSTS. Mayfair. Maria Karson's Trio plays "Confucius Say," with bells on, literally. You have only until next Monday to bid those fond goodbys (we hope they're just au 'voirs) to Maria, Joann and Joy.

Troika has the perfect Arabian Nights setting for Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Easter Romance" as violined by Sasha Lukas.

Rainbow Room. You can't tell the difference when Milton Davis stops playing the novachord and the New York wire music begins. Either the novachord sounds like an orchestra or an orchestra sounds like the novachord.

Pall Mall Room. Singer Russ Cullen has a very special way with a mike, a sort of microphone seduction, one would say. Listen to his "Just a-Wearyin' For You."

Metronome Room. That new epidemic, "Between Eighteenth and Nineteenth on Chestnut Street," has just been brought out by Eddy Brandt and orchestra, who'd been getting red in the face because their arrangement of it had been held up in the mails (we trust not by the censor).

Shar-Zad. Representative Martin Dies requested Maestro Bill McCune to play his favorite "I Wish I Was in Dixie." And a ringsider said "So do a lot of other people."

Lotus. "Gaucho Serenade" is one of the songs just made for Buddy Shaners' voice. He's not doing it for the floor show but with the band.

Cafe Caprice. There's no end to those snicker-trap songs Eddy Mayhoff does around midnight. He makes up a lot of them himself, can write gingery lyrics as easily as falling off a piano bench.

Robin Hood. When Lynne Allison sings "Jeanie With the Light Brown Eyes,' all the customers get that sentimental look.

BIG SUNDAY EVES are always in order at the Nightingale. Bill Downer and his full 12-piece orchestra always play for the Sunday night crowd, take their only day off on Monday.

HITHER AND THITHER DEPARTMENT. That ol' flu has been annoying Mrs. Lily Santmyer, owner of La Salle Versailles and L'Escargot. She's had rather a session with it, but will be up and around in a few days . . . That cute tag, Wendy Ann, bestowed on the new daughter of Don Shook, of the Madrillon, and Mrs. Shook, is the result of blending papa's and mamma's favorite names . . . Anchor Room's Matt Windsor and his wife, Anna Sublukova, recently played for the benefit for the Russian Greek Catholic Church at the Washington Club.

"SWING NIGHT" is on at River Bend tonight. All the numbers played by George Stein's band will be high tension. But take a special listen to "720 in the Book" as arranged by George. A diller!

Bishop Hughes Speaks at Rites Observing Lent

Straying From Straight And Narrow Paths Is Abnormal, He Says

Any tendency to "stray from the straight and narrow path" is definitely "abnormal and sub-normal," Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes said at yesterday's Lenten rites of southeast churches at the Penn Theater.

The white-haired, 74-year-old resident prelate of the Methodist Church said "man is only normal when he comes to an awakening and realizes that he does not belong to live in a pig-sty or swineherd but in his Father's house."

The Rev. Frank Jaggers, pastor of Anacostia Methodist Church, sang several numbers at the service, attended by the largest congregation since the beginning of the series. The Rev. George H. Bennett, Wilson Memorial Methodist pastor, presided. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, speaks today at noon.

The Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, rector of Calvary Episcopal Church, New York City, said yesterday that "America's enemy today is the loss of a spirit of sacrifice—the apathy which lets things drift as they will."

"It is not the members of the other party from our own, it is not a racial minority that seems to be making trouble, it is not the opponent on the other side of the industrial picture from ourselves," he said at Epiphany Lenten services, but "the false philosophy of materialism, wherever we find it, which makes for our national chaos. It is everything that makes for internal strife and warfare. It is the failure to cast out of our lives what we want to see cast out of our country."

He will conclude his sermon series today.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the St. Nicholas Collegiate Church, New York City, and former leader of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here, will preach at Epiphany Monday through Friday at 12:05 p. m. He drew capacity crowds last Lenten season.

The Rev. Mark Depp, pastor of Christ Methodist Church, Pittsburgh, spoke last night at St. Paul's Lutheran Church at weekly union Lenten services of Chevy Chase Protestant churches. Dr. Henry W. Snyder was host pastor.

Inadequate Defense

Reopening of the case of William F. Johnson, who was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to death, has emphasized the need for reform of the District system of assigning inexperienced lawyers to defend indigent persons accused of serious crimes.

In ordering a new trial for Johnson the Court of Appeals sharply criticized the lower court for appointing as defenders "two young members of the bar with little, if any, experience." However, it was conceded that it is "hard to ask experienced counsel of proved ability to serve in cases of this sort without compensation."

The Court of Appeals has drawn attention to the underlying cause of the difficulties encountered in trying to find competent lawyers to safeguard the right of uninfluential defendants. District judges are seriously handicapped in the selection of counsel by the lack of provision for payment of fees to appointees. Experienced lawyers are usually busy and high-priced. However public-spirited they may be, it is difficult for such men to find time for assigned cases. And those willing to take on unpaid tasks may not be able to give them the requisite amount of study.

Hence, some systematic provision should be made for the defense of people in the position of William Johnson. Undoubtedly the most satisfactory plan is the public defender system, already indorsed by the local bar association. A bill embodying its recommendations was introduced last session by Senator Capper and a similar measure is now sponsored in the House by Representative Kefauver of Tennessee.

By the appointment of a public defender with adequate staff, indigent persons would be assured the protection of experienced counsel when charged with serious offenses. And the legal services given would properly be paid for by the District government. In cities where this system has been in force for a number of years it is reported to give complete satisfaction.

Ideally, it would seem desirable to have a single organization combining the tasks of prosecution with defense of the rights of those accused. If prosecuting officials were always moved solely by the desire to determine the facts instead of being eager to secure convictions, there would be few miscarriages of justice and little need for the special office of public defender.

For various reasons, however, it seems impractical to urge so great a reform in the methods of public prosecutors. Hence, the public defender system appears to fill a real and continuing need, which is not being met at the present time. As Judge Curran says: "The criminal law should be such that the poor and helpless defendant would be accorded the same adequate defense as is given to the wealthy. . . . the Government should protect the innocent as well as protect society against the criminal."

Progress Of Cornelius

Either there is fresh proof that "things are seldom what they seem" or else Cornelius Alexander Horton has changed considerably in four years.

Cornelius is the "Very Good Boy" whose picture was chosen by a poll of New York City school teachers as the best of 400 photos in the superintendent of schools' annual pictorial report. So appealing was the presentation of the little 6-year-old, his hands crossed in front of his record book with its pages open to a star of excellence, that it received two and a half times as many votes as its nearest competitor. Curious as to the private life of this juvenile paragon, a newspaper reporter and photographer called at his house the following day.

They found first that the boy is now 10 years old and frequently a "holy terror," according to no less an authority than his mother. His accomplishments include baiting his sister, hating arithmetic, and breaking whatever is pleasantly breakable. According to his latest picture, however, he is even more engaging, if slightly less soulful looking, than in the prize-winning photograph.

Cornelius' progress as a public figure leads to speculation as to his future. The boy's own desires, according to the interview, vary between the life of an electrician, cowboy and actor. Indications are that Hollywood has, so far, overlooked this photogenic youth, but it is significant that he has already filled the role of Clark Gable in a school play. The delight of thousands of teachers' hearts may still become the idol of millions of flappers, his sister remaining the exception which proves the rule.

Two Months Leeway

All the available evidence indicates that former President Hoover spoke very conservatively when he told the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday that some 7,000,000 people in Poland will be facing starvation in two months' time.

The complete elimination of their normal governmental authority must of itself have a catastrophic effect on the economic life of a people. But in the case of Poland the dislocation inevitable with conquest has been deliberately increased by the policy of the conquerors. The sufferings of the Polish population only began with the destruction of warfare and the partitioning of the country into a Russian area, a German area and a German-controlled rump section in what was central Poland.

It is in the latter district, as Mr. Hoover pointed out, that conditions are particularly appalling. Normal economic life has ceased to exist. There is little or no employment for industrial and clerical workers, transportation is at a standstill and seemingly many of the farms have been pillaged of livestock, equipment and food reserves.

On top of this situation the central part of Poland, at best a barren area, is crowded with hundreds of thousands of penniless refugees. Some of these have fled from the areas annexed by Russia. Many more are being dumped there as a result of the Nazi policy of deporting all non-Germanic elements from the territory annexed to the Reich.

German censorship has not been able to conceal the horrible conditions already apparent in central Poland. And terrible as is the present situation, it is certain to become progressively worse. The German policy, with the blockade as a good alibi, is apparently to let disease and undernourishment settle the problem by wholesale elimination of the Polish population. And this will be the outcome unless relief, on a huge scale, is organized quickly.

For a humanitarian work of this character Mr. Hoover is by training and experience the ideal administrator. But all his great ability will be useless unless the necessary funds and authority are given him by Congress. The undertaking is far too gigantic to be handled by unofficial organization. And many aspects of it, such as reliable guarantees that relief shipments go to the people for whom they are designed, will require governmental assistance.

Mr. Hoover told the committee that the problem is theoretically easier because of the coexistence of burdensome agricultural surpluses in this country. "No one here would have less for what we might send to Europe," he said. But the gigantic task of prompt and efficient organization remains. The lives of millions of innocent and helpless people are at stake and it depends primarily on Congress as to whether or not they shall be saved.

There is a moral for that body in the former President's remark to reporters that "I am not engaged in politics. I am interested only in feeding the Finns and Poles."

Big Ideas

There is more than paradox in the assertion that the intellectual mood of our age is anti-intellectual. It has long been scientifically fashionable to discount the part played by abstract ideas in the shaping of human history. Indeed, a great deal of ingenious logic has been expended on the argument that the existence of a logical process in mankind is a kind of pious illusion and in the modern vocabulary the very word "rationalization" is likely to carry a certain accent of disdain.

Perhaps, however, this is not so much a recent mood as the development of a fairly old one. Nearly two centuries ago Rousseau observed that the obsession with general ideas was to blame for practically everything that was wrong with the world. The heritage of his own generalities, as they work out in Townsend plans and youth congresses, has certainly not minimized confusion.

On the whole, however, general ideas have nowhere been held in less esteem than in the United States. For decades European visitors have commented on the American idolatry of Brass Tacks, on the almost purely factual nature of American thought and conversation. It is here that the preoccupation with concrete particulars—the compulsion to "get down to cases"—has been carried to the greatest extremes. And the only great system of philosophy developed in America is one which considers the practical effect of a general idea the acid test of its validity.

Now, interestingly enough, a kind of intellectualist reaction is taking place in America. Of this there have been many symptoms, such as the national attention given to the educational experiment at St. John's College, Annapolis. Another significant indication may be found in the appearance of a new publication, a Journal of the History of Ideas, under the talented editorship of Dr. Arthur O. Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins University.

This is indeed a vast subject and it is not surprising to learn that there is no other publication in English that attempts to cover it. Perforce the new journal must trespass into fields which the modern itch for specialization has long since marked off as belonging to philosophy, religion, science and politics. But perhaps this overlapping is itself an indication that the disintegrating tendencies in American scholarship—the tendency to learn "more and more about less and less"—has been arrested.

Idle Deposits

In its current monthly survey the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York points out that bank deposits in the United States have reached an all-time peak. The amount of money in circulation—that is, outside the Treasury and the Federal Reserve banks—also exceeded all previous figures in the third week in December. And despite a subsequent seasonal decline the total is still not far below the maximum circulation recorded in 1933, when the hoarding of cash was widespread.

Yet, as if to confound the monetary theorists who maintain that an increase in purchasing power brings expanding business and rising prices, we are currently witnessing a recession in business, with an accompanying decline in prices. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, for instance, reports that wholesale prices for the week ended February 17 dropped to 78.3 per cent of the 1926 average, more than 1 per cent below the level of mid-January, and the lowest point reached in over five months.

There are, of course, innumerable factors, both general and specific, affecting the course of commodity prices. In particular, the dislocations and uncertainties of the European war have introduced a new element of disturbance which tends to accentuate the instability of the price structure. But whatever the explanation of price changes may be at any given time, it is plain that price movements cannot be related to changes in the volume of purchasing power as measured in money and bank deposits.

The reason for this failure of prices to respond to an increasing volume of deposits, representing purchasing power, is found in the declining rate of turnover of deposits. In other words, the amount of checks drawn against deposits to pay for goods and services has increased at a much slower rate than the deposits themselves. As a result, the rate of deposit turnover dropped from an average of about 22 for the years 1922-1926 to 13½ in 1939.

As the Federal Reserve Board states: "This decline in the turnover rate, which compares the volume of payments by check with the volume of deposits, indicates that an increasing amount of deposits is being held relatively idle."

That raises the question as to why deposits are not being used as freely as formerly. And in the answer to that question is to be found the chief explanation of our failure to achieve a satisfactory business recovery.

When business concerns borrow from banks, the loans are made available in the form of deposits, which are drawn upon by the borrower. The expansion of deposits in such cases results from and in turn assists expanding business activity. In recent years, however, as the Guaranty survey points out, the expansion of deposits has come largely from the borrowing and spending activities of the Government and from the importation of gold. "Thus all the principal factors underlying the recent increase in bank deposits . . . . were and are primarily of a sort to inhibit, rather than promote, sustained business recovery."

In view of the insubstantial character of deposit expansion due to the Government's methods of financing budgetary deficits, and to other causes having nothing to do with normal business borrowing, we have good cause to be grateful that funds have been left idle. For if this created purchasing power were to be turned over as rapidly as formerly under present conditions, we should doubtless be faced by an inflationary advance of prices of catastrophic proportions.

From The Christian Science Monitor

The haunting strain of the gypsy flute grows a little more wistful than before. The winding road still calls but nomad hearts cannot always answer. The squawk of a rusty automobile horn has displaced the whinnying of the horse herds among most of the gypsy bands in the United States. But in Bohemia, adopted land of the gypsies, they may rove no more.

A decree by the German-controlled Czech protectorate requires them to choose a place of residence and settle down to some reputable occupation. This in the land on whose name the gypsies have stamped perhaps more color than the Bohemians themselves! For it was up through Bohemia that the gypsies came into western Europe, and the adjective "Bohemian" as a symbol for the unconventional rose out of their association with that land of sober, placid Slavs.

"Ships For Sale"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the editorial in The Post of February 19, I should like to make the following observations:

(1) These vessels are 19 and 20 years old, therefore obsolete; the legal life of a merchant vessel from an operating subsidy point of view is 20 years.

(2) The United States Lines are obligated by the conditions of the transfer as laid down by the Maritime Commission to not only replace these vessels by new, modern and efficient vessels (now under construction) but also to use most of the funds obtained from the sale to purchase these new vessels from the Maritime Commission under title V of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936.

(3) As a matter of policy (whether required by courtesy or by law) the Maritime Commission consults the Navy Department in matters of this character and the commission gives full weight to the opinions of the Navy Department before final action is taken by the commission.

(4) These eight vessels were laid up affording employment to no one save a few ship keepers. These ships in operation, even under a foreign flag, afford employment to longshoremen and to many others engaged in producing, manufacturing and transporting the goods that will be shipped in the vessels. Certain congestion of cargo already obtains in the port of New York. The Neutrality Act does prevent employment of American seamen and officers on these vessels as transferred (and I very much regret this loss of employment), but, even so, some employment is far better than no employment.

I think you will be interested in the foregoing, which seems to me to be very pertinent, as I have a feeling that the editorial does not properly cover this matter completely or quite fairly.

Words And Action

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the papers that our genial Commissioner Hazen is back with us after a sojourn in Florida. He boasts of our "city" in terms of its marvelous policing, cleanliness, etc. Naturally, being away in the environs of warmth, pleasure and luxury, Mr. Hazen would not be acquainted or does not care to recall a few of the many sore spots of the city.

His job is not an easy one, but it seems to me that boasting does not improve conditions any.

How about the schools, Mr. Hazen? The new high school in Takoma—is it an exhibit of the builders' art or just a novelty to take up unoccupied lots? Western High School with its walls about to decay from lack of repair? And how about your slums, Commissioner? And not to forget the traffic situation—with what does Mr. Hazen compare it? In what way is it superior, in comparison with itself or with no system at all? About cleanliness—where is the shining example, may I ask?

It is easy to criticize, I know, but it seems as though Mr. Hazen's boasting could be replaced with a little constructive effort rather than boastful oratory.

Accounts Of The War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Rae McCombs in his letter appearing in The Post of February 27, concerning the dearth of Finnish casualties, while many Russians are reported slain, has also caused this writer to wonder.

While the Russians, as soldiers, do leave something to be desired in fighting ability, they are, nevertheless, armed with death-dealing modern equipment, and it's sure death if their missives hit a vital spot. It would not, therefore, be possible that the combats so far fought failed to injure or kill at least a few Finns.

During 1914-18 there were many conflicts between the German and Russian armies and the German casualties ran into the thousands.

In the Russo-Japanese war, thousands of Japanese were slain, although they were finally victorious over the Russians.

I feel that the newspaper accounts of the present combat are inaccurate, perhaps because of British censoring of news out of Finland. I have lived among Russians and I have found them strong and vigorous people with the combative instinct strongly developed.

Reports of no Finnish death lists just can't be correct.

J. J. W.
Alexandria, Va., Feb. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Rae McCombs was right in his letter saying that the Russian losses and Finnish victories are being exaggerated "to build up sympathy" and "drag the American people into a bloody and senseless war."

He might well have added that, in addition to building sympathy, these distorted reports are obviously intended to give Americans a false notion that the Red army would be a push-over for our boys, and thus encourage us to get into the fight.

Our boys do make good soldiers, but millions of them will be killed and wounded if they get into the fight with the Russians, who also are brave and consider their country worth dying for. They have a big and strong army, and military men know it, despite the propaganda we read.

Herbert Hoover and the other Russian hate-mongers are too old to go to war, and will sit safely and profitably at home while my two boys and others do the fighting and dying. Moreover, Hoover and his wealthy associates disqualified themselves from posing as protectors of Finnish democracy, by their complete silence while the Spanish democrats were being massacred for more than two years.

A FATHER.
Washington, Feb. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. McCombs' concern has to do with the trivialities of the situation. I don't care from which side of the Mannerheim Line you report the news. You may even, if you wish, flavor your editorials to suit Mr. McCombs.

What delights me is the brilliant manner in which the hypocritical Russians have demonstrated their ineffectiveness. Isn't it probable that your correspondent's complaint arises from a realization, incomprehensible to him, that nine Americans out of ten feel as I do?

Sound Effects

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mark Sullivan's analysis of the outstanding (as outstanding as is possible for a Republican to be these days) Republican Presidential candidates certainly leaves much to be desired, either in his analysis or, perhaps, in the candidates themselves.

According to Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Dewey heads the list solely because of the superior quality of his voice. He pronounces his words fully and distinctly and has "all the goldenness" of F. D. R. This "goldenness" quality has nothing whatever to do with our monetary policy or other such trivial matters. You must have "gold" in your voice now.

Mr. Vandenberg's voice has "drive, stir, an urge to do something about it (probably to turn off the radio). However, it doesn't seem to drive, stir, or urge Mr. Sullivan, for he dismisses Mr. Vandenberg with a few more kind words.

Mr. Taft is a well-meaning but artless fellow, being prone to say the right (perhaps) thing but at the wrong place, as witness his recent speech on foreign affairs in Wisconsin, where there are so many Germans.

Mr. Joe (good old Joe) Martin's voice is twangy and wholesome, and if elected would have much the same effect as a "New England boiled dinner." Now I don't know what a New England dinner consists of, but I have an idea it is something about beans. I grant you that beans are very wholesome, but for our President to have the same effect upon us would not be so good I am sure.

Mr. Sullivan admits Messrs. Vandenberg and Taft have one advantage over the golden-voiced Mr. Dewey, but that is a mere advantage of experience, and so shouldn't count very much.

He likes people who make political mistakes, saying Mr. Taft makes so many that someone has said that he is progressing by "backing" into the nomination. (But perhaps this may not be a mistake considering how far behind he is.)

Now, I say that when an analysis of the abilities of the outstanding Presidential candidates of a party sums up as the above, the well must be getting pretty dry. Perhaps the selection will boil down to an audition and a screen test.

Loyalty In Lingnan

Loyalties and sympathies are strange things—unpredictable, contagious, vacillating. There is, for example, something quite logical in the way America has embraced the worthy cause of Finland. By contrast, Spain, Poland, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia were left pretty much out in the blizzard. In a recent interview, Homer M. Berry, long-time test pilot, said: "The only people I'd fight for right now are the Finns. My God, would I like a chance to fight for them!"

But I have not heard of anyone wanting to fight for China. Since American women gave up wearing cotton stockings as a futile protest against Japan, we have not been worrying much about China. I wonder, indeed, whether we shall ever get worked up about China. There is, of course, the feeling that China is so big, so amorphous, that she can never be subjugated. She is not a political or social entity, but in her disunion there seems to be strength.

China is a world grown old with trouble, and aggression is no new thing in the lives of her ancient, philosophic people. "Ah," exclaims one of her early poets, "how I long to return again to the place where I was born! I long to go. But alas, alas, there is no road that leads back home!"

One cannot help noticing, however, that China has a way of inspiring individual loyalties if not national ones. I have known several Americans who have lived, worked, and studied in China, and nearly without exception they would give their eyeteeth to go back, even under present conditions.

A few years ago I met Dr. Floyd A. McClure, a young American botanist. He had been in China for about 10 years as professor at Canton Christian College (now Lingnan University) and had returned to America with his family. With world affairs so unsettled his friends in Washington urged him to stay, but when his scientific work here was completed, back he went to China. He knew pretty well, I think, what he was returning to, but the obligations and devotion he felt toward China were uppermost.

Now the students at Lingnan University have had to move to Hongkong, and the campus has been turned into a refugee camp and school for the Chinese. They are carrying on under some difficulties, but in good spirits. Dr. McClure's 14-year-old daughter, Sophie, writes: "How the life on the campus has changed! When I left for Hongkong there were students rushing all around, hurrying to their dormitories between classes and back again. Their bicycles made a deafening racket.

"But now one sees only refugees meandering to the dining halls, the children playing hop-scotch, marbles, or jump-rope. They seem so happy with an opportunity to go to school. For some time the number of refugees has remained the same, about 4,500. Most of the strong, hardy folks have gone, leaving the women, children, and the old people here. What would they do if Lingnan did not exist?"

Sophie is editor of the school paper. One of her contributors, fourth grade Alice Frank, adds another note on the resourcefulness required of the new campus life in these uncertain times. She says: "A new style of shoes has been started among the school girls. The way to make them is to get a piece of cardboard and cut it in the shape of the foot but a little bigger, and tie it to the foot. If you tie it on carefully, it will stay on, and you can run and jump and do anything you want to. If our cardboard is thick it will last for quite a long time. Sophie found the flat stem of a palm leaf was more durable than cardboard."

Dr. McClure has recently written to a friend in Washington. He is able, he says, to carry on his botanical studies, his specialty being bamboos. He has about 200 refugee men helping him. "I have a woman and a little girl making bamboo things for our museum, and there are four or five others who are kept busy making baskets of various sorts, brooms, etc., for the use of the camp and campus." Trades are being taught, and the people are learning to be self-reliant. "Many of our people are wearing shoes and clothes made from leather and cloth produced right here on the campus."

He does not stress the war dangers, but says: "One of our botanical collectors spent a number of months in Kwangsi but managed to get back only 20 bundles of plants. He lost a lot by fire during a raid and another lot when the launch on which he was returning was struck by a bomb."

Dr. McClure expresses no regret that he went back to China—only a natural nostalgia to see and talk with his old friends in America. "Our garden," he writes, "is especially lovely now at Christmas. We have chrysanthemums of so many hues and shapes, and they give us much joy."

China, after all, does claim her loyalties from the accident, and they are of an unostentatious but most enduring kind. They are loyalties to a stricken people that may never know peace or unity. For even now, as in the days of Li Po, 12 centuries ago—

About the city walls
Still linger
The throb of the advancing drum
The gong beating swift retreat
And the blood staining the sword
In its golden sheath
Is not yet dry!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Glamour Cop

REPRESENTATIVE Vito Marcantonio, of New York, has called J. Edgar Hoover a Stork Club detective, which is pretty good going, just as repartee, and if Mr. Hoover will now crack back that Marcantonio is a Communist Congressman the boys will be even. For Mr. Hoover is, in a manner of speaking, a night-club fly-cop, and, in the same manner of speaking Marcantonio is a bolo statesman. Hoover hangs out in the glamour jukes, and the Representative camps around with the Muscovites, and if Marcantonio wants to judge Mr. Hoover by the company that he keeps, he shouldn't mind being judged by the rule himself. He will mind, however. For him to call Mr. Hoover a Stork Club detective is statesmanship, but it undoubtedly will be red-baiting to call Marcantonio a Communist on the same grounds.

Mr. Hoover's worst fault is not his hangout. His worst fault is that he is sensational. For a file of trashy personal publicity he has permitted the prestige of his bureau, to be exploited commercially by a personal following of self-elected junior G-men and himself to be identified in the public mind with gents' room journalism. A few years ago, when he was strictly a cop and before he had tasted celebrity, he was regarded as the greatest policeman since Pinkerton, but he soiled his prestige in the Lindbergh trial by allowing, or, anyway, failing to prevent, the creation of an impression that he was trying his case in the papers through the lowest form of journalism that has ever disgraced the craft.

HE HASN'T TURNED up anything big in a long time, and it may be that he has outlived his usefulness in his present job and is on the threshold of a new career. He would be a great attraction as a keyhole columnist and log-roller, and he should be worth something, at current rates, with 15 minutes a week of hysterics on the air composed of unimportant and unconfirmed innuendos about people too big and too contemptuous to talk back.

Mr. Hoover's latest exploit is the arrest of a number of vermin, male and female, in the Miami sector on Mann Act charges, and this has been challenged on the ground that prostitution is a friendly or, to say the worst, necessary vice. It is my contention, however, that this is just about Mr. Hoover's speed, and that, since Congress, in its wisdom, made a law forbidding interstate traffic in prostitutes, the F. B. I. has no right to interpret public opinion as having repealed the law. It is not comforting to hear such men as Willie Bioff and George Scalese absolved or defended, even though these two distinguished labor leaders had wrought well for the underpaid and for altruistic motives, and it is not Hoover's right to ignore evidence of interstate prostitution. On the contrary, it is his duty to get evidence and make arrests.

The fact is that the two Miamis have become the winter headquarters of the most prosperous and, therefore, most vicious criminals out of prison, and Mr. Hoover is wise in establishing his camp there in the biggest season of all. The local police and the Florida State authorities and the politicians who control them have been too foul or too dumb for trusting, and the problem is not local, but interstate. Both the criminal scum, as Hoover so happily described this loathsome horde of panders, racketeers, blackmailers, gamblers and drug venders, and the legitimate winter customers of the two Miamis come from other States.

The Miamis are a good place in which to gather and check information and identifications, and the fact that the local authority never has been either competent or trustworthy invites the F. B. I. and the Department of Justice to concentrate there.

HOOVER IS understanding matters when he says that the local authorities do not cooperate. If the local authorities wanted to they could make the two Miamis so hot for the criminal scum of the country that no doorknob thief would ever light there. Mr. Hoover is not only harassing the criminal scum, but seriously interfering with the vicious corruption of the local government when he lets it be known that he is spending his vacation there and that a number of his fly-cops will be on duty around the clock as long as the season lasts.

And if, as a result of his winter's work, the gamblers are starved for a season and the thieves in office are made afraid to do business with crime, that is good police work, which is Hoover's job, and a net profit to the country which pays his wages.

If Mr. Hoover is forgetting that he is a glamour cop and getting down to police duty, let's let him alone.

Books And Things

By William Soskin

NEVIL SHUTE'S new novel, "An Old Captivity" (Morrow, $2.50), starts unpretentiously in the town of Oxford, England, makes its way by airplane in a crescendo of physical excitement to Iceland and Greenland, where it attains a series of climaxes of dangerous adventure, and then proceeds to Halifax and Cape Cod, where its drama is more spiritual than physical.

All this suggests that the book may combine the best features of two types of best sellers—an Admiral Byrd book and a mystic romance of the "Lost Horizon" type. Mr. Shute, one may suspect, had no such large ambitions. His purpose was to tell a simple story of aeronautical adventure and romance decently and entertainingly. He succeeds in that.

IN MR. SHUTE'S writing there are certain qualities essential to intelligent fiction of the popular type. First, he possesses an expert technical knowledge of his subject, and his flyer who negotiates a transatlantic journey is obviously not one of your vague creations for whom the ordinary author picks up a sketchy, superficial knowledge of the subject. This flight has all the realistic pleasure of expert non-fiction, and Mr. Shute makes his readers undergo all the agonies and nervous suspense, all the small technological triumphs and failures of an actual flight. Without overstraining or overwriting, he can transmit the sensations of cold and hunger and physical danger, the smell and feel of the plane and the atmosphere and experience of strange places and strange peoples.

The young aviator, Donald Ross, who undertakes the flight simply as a pilot's job, an assignment to carry an elderly archeologist to Greenland to make an air survey of a lost colony, is not a heroic fellow or a matinee idol of a flyer. An unassuming man of a Scotch middle-class family, he has passed some years as a pilot in Canada and has returned to Scotland during the depression—broke. The job is a great opportunity for him, but he regards it practically as a job, and not as a heroic adventure.

IT IS THAT prosaic attitude, the conscientiousness and efficiency of the man, the attitude that aerial accidents are due to carelessness and unscientific flying rather than the capricious will of the gods, that makes the entire story of this flight so appealing. Ross has the attraction about him of the modern scientist, the garage hand, the mechanical tinkerer—a sort of pragmatic, mathematical courage and an equivalent wholesomeness. And it is that quality which leads the professor's daughter who goes along on the flight eventually to overcome her repugnance and stubborn opposition and to fall deeply in love with him.

When Mr. Shute departs from this realistic pattern and injects a note of fantasy and mysticism into his story, he is not quite so successful.

'Blood And Soil'

By Dorothy Thompson

Under The Union Jack

THE BRITISH GOVERINMENT has announced that in the future no more land in Palestine may be purchased from Arabs by Jews or anybody else. Therewith it falls in with Hitler's blood-and-soil theory. The ownership of land in that country—which is about the size of the State of Vermont—is to remain the way it is now in perpetuity. Merely being a member of the indigenous race constitutes an eternal claim to the soil, no matter what that indigenous race does to the soil and no matter whether the individual owners wish to sell their lands. They may sell, but only to other Arabs.

NOW, THIS MOVE is made for reasons of international political strategy and is otherwise utterly without logic. The British government knows that the Palestine Jews will be loyal to Britain under all circumstances. But the Palestine Arabs are questionable. They are open to agitation by agents of other governments. The British government wants to conciliate them, and does so at the expense of the Palestine Jews, under the argument that Britain is fighting against racial persecution and that the most important thing for the Jews is that Britain should win the war.

Unfortunately, however, Britain establishes a policy which not only makes her noble words seem hollow but which will remain to plague her in peace. For overcrowded Europe, not only the Jews, will need colonization projects when this war is over. It has needed them for years. And it happens that the Palestine colonization project is the finest example existing of what transplanted Europeans, animated by faith and idealism, can do. For Britain to come out for the theory that a race anywhere constitutes an eternal static population is simply to condemn the undeveloped portions of the earth to eternal stagnation. On that basis this continent would still belong to the Indians.

BUT THE JEWS in Palestine have not dealt with the Arabs as our forefathers dealt with the Indians. They are not "conquering" a continent. Every bit of their land has been bought from the owners and paid for at an exorbitant price—not with whisky and colored beads. The land they bought was swampy, deforested and eroded. The Arab lands are still in the same condition. The land of the Jewish colonists, having first been purchased, has been reclaimed by a system of cooperative land settlements or colonies whose work is quite incredible.

Walter C. Lowdermilk, assistant chief of the Soil Conservation Service of the United States Department of Agriculture, said in a recent report on a survey of land use on three continents, that agricultural colonization in Palestine by the Jews is the most remarkable devotion to and reclamation of wasted lands that he has ever seen.

"The Jews have paid high prices for pestilential swamps," reports the disinterested Mr. Lowdermilk, "for sand dunes requiring fixation, for stony hills requiring terracing or the planting of forests. Jewish effort has transformed these wasted lands into flourishing areas."

THIS TRANSFORMATION of Palestine back into a land flowing with milk and honey has been done by Jewish youth from the ghettos of eastern Europe or refugees from recurrent pogroms. It has been done with their own hands, hands and backs that had to be trained to break stones. After centuries of a social inheritance that made most Jews into lawyers, physicians, other professionals or traders they have gone back to the land and shown what they can do with soil, and human labor, science and organization applied to it. And at the same time they are rebuilding their race into hardy individuals who can swing a pickax.

The Jewish colonists have been the victims of organized terrorism. Their colonies have to be continually defended. But their answer to terrorism has been to build new colonies. There is a settlement called "The Five" which is a memorial to five young Jewish workers shot from ambush by Arab terrorists. The reply was to build a new settlement on the scene of the murder—to answer terror by planting trees!

The form of social organization of the colonies, which combines private enterprise with communal organization, is full of suggestion for the whole world. The education of the young colonists, preparing them for a life on the land that will be efficient, simple and yet civilized, is worthy of study and emulation. It suggests things that could be done in this country for and by our unemployed youth.

BUT THIS ACTIVITY, which is creative, this great drive to build and reclaim a homeland out of centuries of waste and abuse of the land, is now to be halted, not by the Arab, to whom the settlements bring a pattern of civilization which generations from now can be their own salvation, but because of Arabian politics, which is another matter entirely.

The Labor Party in England is vigorously protesting the decision, war or no war. That adds to the prestige of England. For it is good to know that even when a country is at war, free men can still express themselves about policy.

'Bolshevist' Trend In Reich Seen At Vatican

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 29.—Vatican circles evidently see a trend toward radicalism in German policy since Prof. Guido Gonella writes about it in today's column in the Osservatore Romano, official Vatican organ, and he could not do so without permission or orders from the Papal secretariat of state. The professor clearly goes out of his way to make his case on the basis of recent pronouncements by Chancellor Hitler and other German leaders.

"Hitler not only criticized German social democracy but also the German monarchy in his last speech," writes Prof. Gonella, who also points out that the Fuehrer said the days of Bethmann-Hollweg are over. "These affirmations are being interpreted in the sense of a possible aggravation of the internal offensive against conservative elements. The accentuation of this trend is considered a consequence of the rapprochement between Berlin and Moscow."

After pointing out that Herr Hitler said he would go through with his friendship with Russia to the end, Prof. Gonella writes: "This assertion has permitted adversaries of the Reich to speak of an evolution of National Socialism toward 'National Bolshevism.'"

The professor cites with approval a comment of Count Vladimir d'Ormesson, editor of Figaro: "This means a violent change of direction toward the extreme Left. Hitler has never used more revolutionary language."

According to Prof. Gonella, recent speeches of Dr. Robert Ley, Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Dr. Joseph Goebbles and Dr. Otto Dietrich "only serve to confirm this impression."

Msgr. Cesare Orsenigo, nuncio to Berlin, has made another protest to the Wilhelmstrasse, it was learned here today. Two weeks ago, he expressed the Holy See's alarm over the persecutions in Poland. Now, he has complained in behalf of the Vatican regarding the consistent violations of the financial clauses of the 1933 concordat. German Catholics have been paying taxes for the cult regularly, he has pointed out, but the church is getting virtually none of the money and great numbers of the priests are in distress.

News also arrived today that the German authorities have ordered the melting of the famous "Sigismund" bell in the tower of the Cathedral of Cracow. The bell, which Poles consider one of their national treasures, was made from the bronze of cannons captured from the enemy by Sigismund I in 1520. Now the historic circle is being completed, for the bronze will soon again take the form of cannons used by Poland's enemy.

Preparedness

One of the most important rules to be observed during the present war crisis is to keep the nails soft. Bathe them daily in a mixture of oil, vinegar and lemon juice to which some boric acid has been added.

Canadian Production Of Aluminum Increased

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—Announcement was made here today that, by arrangement with the British ministry of supply, Canadian capacity to produce aluminum will shortly be increased sufficiently to make it almost equal to the German capacity. Great Britain has purchased the entire Canadian output for this year and next, less Canada's own requirements.

Canada is now also assured of all the wool necessary for military purposes up to September next and larger and more regular supplies for civilian use have been made certain. This was announced by Labor Minister Norman McLarty in a 15-minute broadcast in which he described the work of the wartime prices and trade board, responsible for such matters. The board has already dealt with more than 40 commodities, including sugar, and due to its arrangements prices have not risen appreciably beyond those prevailing at the beginning of the war.

In detailing some of the board's efforts, Mr. McLarty showed that even the supply of cod liver oil had been assured for Canadian children by providing substitutes for animal and industrial needs.

He estimated the number of graduates to be furnished by the commonwealth air training schools at between 25,000 and 30,000 full-trained men annually.

Last week's war contracts reached the comparatively small total of $1,064,256, mostly for clothing, aviation supplies and building construction.

War Booms Timber Trade In Rumania

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Feb. 29.—Negotiations for a new agreement, to replace one that has just been expired on the exportation of Rumanian meat and livestock to Germany, began today. The difficulties to be ironed out are that Rumanian exporters of these commodities demand a form of cash-and-carry, since they are unwilling to assume the responsibilities of transport beyond the frontier and want payment to be F. O. B.

Timber is fast becoming an important item in this nation's exportable commodities, since the Russian-Finnish war has cut off this northern country as a source of supply. Within the last few days the price of lumber has gone up 8 to 12 per cent. Great Britain has become an important customer and has been active recently in its purchases from large and small dealers. Large quantities are also being shipped to Ethiopia.

Relative Qualifications

WHO IS THE BEST qualified man for the next Presidency of the United States, regardless of his chances for nomination and election?

This question has just been put by Newsweek to a group of men who are exceptionally fitted to render judgment on the real abilities of the leading men in national life: 52 of the leading Washington correspondents and political columnists. Counting three points for each correspondent's first choice, two for each second choice and one for each third, these were the six men who came out at the head of the list:

	Points
Franklin D. Roosevelt	54
Cordell Hull	36
Arthur H. Vandenberg	29
Robert H. Jackson	26
Herbert Hoover	22
Robert A. Taft	15

These were the second six:

	Points
Joseph W. Martin, jr.	14
James A. Farley	12
Paul V. McNutt	12
James W. Wadsworth	12
Fiorello H. LaGuardia	11
William O. Douglas	8

JOHN N. GARNER, it will be noted, is missing so far. He comes thirteenth. Only three correspondents even mentioned him. This is all the more striking because substantially the same group of correspondents thought he had the best chance of getting the Presidential nomination, in a poll taken last April. Another poll of the same group, taken in November, put him fourth on the Democratic list—below Roosevelt, McNutt and Hull—on the basis of his chances at the nomination, but well above other Democrats whom these correspondents consider better qualified.

Thomas E. Dewey comes in sixteenth in this appraisal—below Burton K. Wheeler and Henry A. Wallace. Dewey scored only five points.

In contrast, Jackson, Hoover, Martin, Wadsworth, LaGuardia and Supreme Court Justice Douglas are ranked in ability far above their chances at the Presidential nomination, as weighed by these correspondents in the earlier polls.

Jackson's rating is the most striking of all. He has just been advanced to the Cabinet and he has never been a Governor, a Senator, or a Congressman. But he has been in Washington for seven years and his personality and work are well known to most of the political writers. Not one of them mentioned him in the previous polls on actual chances at the Presidential nomination. He received only a few scattering mentions for Vice President.

In this appraisal of ability, Jackson stands below Hull. This is due to the fact that Hull was mentioned by a number of correspondents who cast their other two votes for Republicans. By those who cast two or more of their votes for Democrats or progressives such as LaGuardia and Robert M. La Follette (who tied for eighteenth), Jackson was rated a little higher than Hull.

Hoover was not even mentioned in the two polls on chances at the Presidency taken among these correspondents last year. On ability he is rated next to Vandenberg among the Republicans, which is not surprisingly high in view of his experience.

The European war helped both Roosevelt and Hoover, as well as Hull, in this poll. Several correspondents said that they felt experience in foreign affairs was an especially important qualification for the next President. Some of the votes for Roosevelt came from correspondents who put down Republicans as their other two choices. The high vote for Roosevelt is not, however, a reliable measure of sentiment for a third term among the political writers. Several said they oppose a third term, but in a cold appraisal of ability had to rank Roosevelt first.

Equally noteworthy is the fact that a number of correspondents with liberal views omitted Roosevelt in favor of Jackson, LaGuardia, Douglas and others.

APART FROM ROOSEVELT, the two men who, in the opinion of these observers, best combine ability with chances at being nominated for President are Secretary Hull and Senator Vandenberg. Both, curiously, cut across party lines in this poll. Vandenberg was frequently mentioned by correspondents who gave their other votes to Democrats, just as Hull was by those who gave their other votes to Republicans. Incidentally, only 13 of the 52 participants voted a "straight ticket," picking all three choices from one party.

The political writers may not be endowed with unusual wisdom, but they have unequaled opportunities for observation at close range. Here, for what it is worth, is their judgment on a question every citizen would like to have answered.

Parisian Comment On Welles Mission

Paris, Feb. 29.—Le Canard Enchaine, the humorous weekly magazine published here, used Sumner Welles and his mission to Europe as an instrument to poke fun at the French high command's taciturnity, as embodied in the familiar communique: "Nothing to report."

"Mr. Welles," the magazine observed, "is undertaking the trip to make a report to President Roosevelt. The most authoritative statements declare there is nothing to report. That is why everyone believes Mr. Welles's trip is premature."

SENATOR VANDENBERG
The correspondents, it seems, rate him as the best qualified Republican in sight, but nevertheless put him 25 points below Mr. Roosevelt and 14 points below Cordell Hull. See Ernest Lindley's column on this page today

Spring Offensive

By Barnet Nover

Can It Be Avoided?

IT MAY HAVE been only a coincidence that on the eve of Mr. Sumner Welles' arrival in Berlin, that city was astir with widespread rumors of a spring offensive to be undertaken by the Reich no later than March 15.

It is possible to suspect, however, that there was a relationship, and probably a direct and deliberate relationship, between the visit of the American Undersecretary of State to the German capital and the fact that the belief is developing among the German people that the period of waiting and inaction is over.

This happens to be the time of the year which, again and again in Hitler's meteoric career as Fuehrer, has been marked by some dramatic move. Five years ago Germany repudiated the clauses in the Treaty of Versailles limiting her armaments. Four years ago—on March 7—German troops entered the demilitarized Rhineland. Two years later Austria was annexed and the following year saw the disappearance of what was left of Czecho-Slovak independence.

THUS THE CALENDAR itself suggests the possibility that this year as in previous years the end of winter and the coming of spring may again see Hitler in action.

Nor can one ignore that if the present state of relative inaction continues the superior economic might of the Allies will more and more weigh in the scales. The blockade is working. It may not be as effective as the Allies desire. Winston Churchill's latest speeches indicate that he, at least, is not wholly satisfied with its operations to date. Germany is nonetheless feeling the pinch.

Thus the pressure is there for an attempt to break through and end the war by a decisive military victory. And as things stand Germany's chances of success are undoubtedly better today than they are likely to be six months or a year from now. Morever, Hitler has never been able to stand still for very long. He is, as has been pointed out here in the past, a man in a hurry. His philosophy of action is expressed in the motto of his erstwhile ally and financial supporter, Fritz Thyssen, whose coat of arms bears the inscription: "If I rest, I rust."

YET IF WE take all this into account, it is nonetheless difficult to avoid the suspicion that the rumors of a spring offensive, beginning on March 15, are not wholly the spontaneous product of popular logic but part of a calculated maneuver of the Nazi regime. For these rumors can at this particular movement serve Germany's purposes.

There is no doubt that the Third Reich would be willing to make peace tomorrow, provided that it were permitted to keep all its recent gains. Indeed, Hitler for a long time calculated on such Allied acceptance of the status quo. It was not until recently that his speeches show any indication that he had abandoned this dream and, instead, began to emphasize Germany's invincibility.

WHETHER so intended or not, the Welles mission gives the Third Reich an opportunity to discover whether peace by negotiation, which under existing circumstances probably means a peace of capitulation, is possible. The alternative is, of course, the continuation of the war and possibly on a magnitude never before attempted. It is not unlikely, therefore, that the rumors of a military offensive and such significant moves as Tuesday's mass flight of German bombers over Paris—they did nothing apparently, but make their presence known—are an attempt to revive the peace offensive which was launched October 6 but petered out.

That the Nazi leaders expect the Welles mission to accomplish anything constructive, so far as it is a peace mission and not purely a fact-finding expedition, is unlikely. But they are clearly not averse to making what capital they can out of his presence in Berlin. Which is one reason, no doubt, why rightly or wrongly the enthusiasm for the tour of the Undersecretary of State has never been great in London and Paris.

Nazi-Czech Customs Union Is Postponed

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 29.—The customs union between the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia and the Reich, scheduled for April 1, has been postponed several months, trading circles here believe. This is thought to be the result of a memorandum the Czech government presented to the protector, Baron Constantin von Neurath, pointing out the lack of preparation which had been made for the union.

One result of this postponement is the announcement that the date of the next meeting of the Yugoslav-German Permanent Economic Council has been postponed to April.

It is learned that at the Yugoslav-Bulgarian commercial talks in Sofia last Sunday and Monday the question of the transit of goods from Bulgaria through Yugoslavia to Germany was discussed. This is a question in which Germany is particularly interested for it is expected that Russian produce landed at Burgas, on the Black Sea, will be sent via Belgrade to Germany.

The Once Over

Radio Taxicabs

There's another revolt in the offing. This time it's against radios in taxicabs. No man can serve two masters and no taxicab driver can do justice to three traffic lights and four or five radio programs.

A public cab should be a conveyance and not a loud speaker with hot brakes and loose fenders.

There is no reason why a man who wants to cross town in a hurry should be obliged to ride with a swing orchestra, a cooking program or a couple of radio comedians.

The taxicab companies insist that the customers prefer radio hacks. They say the riders regard an outside aerial as more important to transportation than four-wheel brakes. But this correspondent doubts it. He thinks the ride is tough enough without the incidental static.

For every cab fare who wants to hear "Oh, Johnny," "Town Hall Tonight" or the United States Marine Band while taking sharp corners on two wheels, there are at least ten who prefer to do their rough riding unaccompanied by symphony orchestras, radio tenors and masters of ceremonies.

The revolt is being led by the Broadway Association of New York, which asks the city to ban radios in cabs after April 1 in New York on the ground there are squeaks enough in any cab.

It has sprung to the rescue of a long-suffering public with a demand that taxi driving by ear be forbidden, and that the hose be turned on the quaint notion that there isn't noise enough in a big city without radios in taxicabs.

The drivers won't give up without a battle, however. They contend that their lives are drab without music, wise cracks, hints on how to prepare a shrimp salad and a voice shouting from somewhere every five minutes, "Right Miss Turpey! 100 per cent right! Lincoln's first name was Abraham, and you win five silver dollars!"

They insist that, with or without passengers, they are entitled to the full companionship of the Radio Corporation of America. If that contention is sound then a paper hanger is entitled to use his portable radio while papering your living room and a doctor is justified in listening to the Bison City Quartet while discussing your symptoms.

This department is also mildly opposed to radios in private automobiles. Driving is hazardous enough in modern traffic without giving the driver three extra switches, another glass dial and a lot of additional noises to worry over.

Vocal Comma Worries Heads Of Census

Protests Blamed On Misunderstanding Of Questions

By Alfred Friendly

Because the voice of Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, in a 15-minute radio address, indicated the existence of a comma where there was no comma, the problem of taking the 1940 population may be made infinitely more difficult.

This was testified yesterday by Willard L. Thorp, economic adviser of the Commerce Department, who appeared before a special Senate Commerce subcommittee hearing on Tobey's resolution to delete two questions on income from the forthcoming survey.

Thorp said he believed the great volume of protest stirred up against the two questions in particular and the whole census in general was the result of misunderstanding of the actual queries. He inferred that it may have been a recent broadcast of Tobey that gave rise to the misunderstanding.

Thorp explained that one of the questions asked for the amount of "money wages or salary received." The word "money," he said, modified "wages." The question did not ask for the amount of "money" received from sources other than wages. In reading the question over the air, Thorp noted, it may have sounded like the amount of "money, wages, and salary."

Citing letters of protest which Tobey had inserted in the record of the hearings on Wednesday, Thorp said that many of them protested against telling enumerators the amount of income received. No such question would be asked, he said, other than to get a "yes or no" answer to an inquiry whether the person enumerated had more than $50 in the past year from an outside, nonwage, source.

Thorp agreed with Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, that the census should take steps to allay needless fears.

"We are more disturbed about the protests against the census than Senator Tobey," Thorp added. "Because if people make it difficult to obtain answers they might even discredit the entire undertaking.

Eight Minutes for Questionnaire

Noting that it took an average of only eight minutes to fill out the population questionnaire in a sample test in South Bend, Ind., last year, Thorp said it might take much longer in the actual enumeration, "if, for some new reason, such as a radio broadcast, it becomes necessary for each enumerator to discuss the Bill of Rights at each household."

Much of the day's debate concerned the legal question of whether the income questions were allowed by the Census Act, limiting the inquiries to unemployment and population.

Tobey, Johnson and Senator White (Republican), of Maine, sought by questions to show that the law forbade gathering income data. Thorp, Commerce Department Solicitor South Trimble, jr.; Census Director Austin, and other census officials argued that income was a characteristic of unemployment, without which unemployment figures would be meaningless.

Thorp explained that data was already available on farm income and income of those who earned more than $1,000 a year, but that the income of industrial workers, where unemployment was centered, was the "great blind spot."

C. I. O. Aide Testifies

He said he did not believe people would object to telling their wages, and that they would not be asked to reveal the more delicate figure of income from outside sources.

Another witness was Ralph Hetzel, director of the C. I. O. unemployment division, who said the income questions were necessary for an "intelligent attack" on unemployment.

Three witnesses representing women's organizations, however, testified in favor of eliminating the questions, which they declared would not be answered, despite penalties.

They were Miss Cathryn Curtis, national director of the Women Investors in America; Mrs. William C. Uhrhan, of Buffalo, and Mrs. Nicholas Nock, of Washington, representing the American War Mothers.

Farmers to Attend Banquets To Hear Roosevelt, Aides

Broadcast to Gatherings in 19 States On March 8 Seen as Bid to Recoup Political Losses in Agricultural Areas

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will deliver talks by a radio hook-up March 8 to some 100,000 farmers attending dinners in at least 19 States.

This was revealed yesterday by Wallace, who admitted that the speeches might have a tinge of political coloring. His impression, however, was that they would be "quite non-political" for the most part.

It is in the farm belt that Republicans have made their greatest gains in regular and special elections in the last two years.

Some observers thought the dinners represented an attempt to rally farm sentiment behind the New Deal in general and the crop-control program in particular in the 1940 elections. The gatherings, it was believed, may give an impetus to farm support for a third term. Wallace twice has called publicly for another term for Mr. Roosevelt.

Wallace announced plans for the dinners at a press conference. Asked how Farley happened to participate, he intimated that he represented the city consumer element.

Anniversary of AAA

The dinners will be a kind of farmer's version of the Jackson Day dinner. The idea, Wallace declared, originated spontaneously among certain farm leaders and was first mentioned to him when he was in Des Moines, Iowa, January 8 to deliver a Jackson Day speech.

March 8 was selected, he said, because it was on that date in 1933 that the first conference of farm leaders was called to draft farm legislation. It will be the seventh anniversary, in other words, of the first move toward the preparation of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

The President, Farley and Wallace will speak from Washington, and will be on the air from 10 to 10:30 p. m. Wallace said there probably would be "some sort of dinner" here.

Dinners, he said, will be held in about 600 counties. There will be at least one dinner in each county in Ohio, Indiana and Iowa, he declared.

The original farmer committee arranging the dinners, Wallace disclosed, consists of the following: John Nolan, Alliance, Nebr., chairman; Elmer Carlson, Audubon, Iowa, vice chairman; Peter Parkert, Hooper, Nebr.; Harold Teachout, Farragut, Iowa, and E. M. Vonseggern, West Point, Nebr.

Carlson, Wallace recalled, some years ago won the national corn husking championship. Asked whether the farm group favored a third term, he said he did not know.

"Farmer's Day" Hopes

States in which dinner arrangements have been made, besides the three named, are: Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

"There will be at least 100,000 farmers present at the dinners," Wallace said, "and possibly more."

Wallace was hopeful that the dinners would develop into something similar to a "farmer's day" comparable to Labor Day.

Close friends yesterday predicted Donahey, Ohio's greatest Democratic vote-getter, will not seek re-election, but denied there was political significance in his expected choice. Donahey has long desired to retire from politics to devote more time to private business, friends said.

Press Club Satire

A bevy of Presidential possibilities meanwhile was arriving in town to participate tonight in an off-the-record bipartisan political rally sponsored by the National Press Club.

"Stump speeches" and satirical sketches on the national political scene will feature the unique rally. President Richard L. Wilson of the National Press Club said the following have accepted invitations to participate: Representative Bruce Barton, Senator Bennet Champ Clark, Thomas E. Dewey, John D. M. Hamilton, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, Jesse H. Jones, Paul V. McNutt, Norman Thomas, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and Senator Burton K. Wheeler.

"Men who a few months hence may be throwing rough words at each other will clasp hands amid newspapermen who have forgotten for the evening there are such things as notebooks and pencils," said Wilson.

Other developments:

In New York, Garner-for-President managers decided to oppose Representative Christopher D. Sullivan, Tammany Hall leader, as delegate to the Democratic National Convention for the Thirteenth Congressional District. Tammany leaders have announced their support for President Roosevelt for a third term if he wants it.

Weir Choice Assailed

Garner managers also were considering running former Representative John J. O'Connor, "purged" by the President in 1938, and State Senator John McNaboe against Representative James H. Fay and George W. Loft, Tammany designees.

In the Senate, Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, declared selection of Ernest T. Weir, Pittsburgh steel executive, as Republican finance committee chairman was the "pay off" of efforts to prove the Republican Party "the great friend of labor." Minton said "Labor is too smart not to know that Mr. Weir will expect his quid pro quo, and that labor will be the quid."

Visit Our Senior High Schools in the Washington Post's Picture Section

Sunday's Washington Post brings you the picture story of our senior high schools. This is the third in the "Our Town In Pictures" series of 8-page sections about Washington's schools, which have been so enthusiastically received by parents and educators alike.

What does a modern high school student do? This Sunday Post section will show in pictures what takes up the day of three typical students, Sophomore, Junior, and Senior.

What are high school students taught? You'll get the picture story of the new subjects and the old, familiar ones.

What do they think about—besides studies, sports, dates, and movies? Here's a camera record of a panel discussion among high school students, conducted by Archibald MacLeish of the Library of Congress.

What about fashions? High school students have their own ideas on what's the right thing to wear and what simply won't do. Parents of high school students, and of younger boys and girls about to move up into high school, will get some valuable pointers from the pictures of high school fashion ideas.

Athletics, music, school publications, and military training are all important activities to the high school student. You'll find these pictures in this Sunday Post section, too.

What about the men who are in charge? There's a page devoted to a day with a high school principal, to acquaint you with the work of the people responsible for our children in high school.

You'll find this picture story of the high schools an entertaining, enlightening section, one which will give you a complete, new understanding of what boys and girls get out of today's educational methods. Be sure to get a Post this Sunday!

Zone Appeal Is Rejected By Board

Neighborhoods' Sentiment Is Not Controlling Factor, Commission Says

Holding that the sentiment of a neighborhood is not a controlling factor in zoning cases, the District Zoning Commission yesterday unanimously rejected the appeal for a rehearing on its recent order rezoning a site at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street northwest.

The rezoning, requested by Sears, Roebuck & Co., will pave the way for a store on the site.

After the decision, Rossa F. Downing, attorney for Immaculata Seminary, which joined other school and civic groups in fighting the zoning order, said his group would consider possible court action against the commission's order. He said a meeting would be held Monday at 8 p. m. at St. Ann's School.

In its decision the commission stated:

"While the zoning commission is deeply interested in hearing from all persons interested in the facts and reasons why property should or should not be zoned in a certain way, the sentiment of a neighborhood is not a controlling factor. The Supreme Court has held that restrictions upon the use of property can only be sustained if they bear a reasonable relation to the public health, safety, morals or general welfare; that it is the duty of the officials charged by law with the administration of a zoning law to determine for themselves whether the restrictions to be imposed meet these requirements, and this duty cannot be delegated to those living or owning property in the neighborhood."

The commission said it "recognizes that the traffic problem in the vicinity is great, and believes that this problem would increase with any development permitted under the prior zoning." However, "since the new building to be erected will not contain more than two stories and will provide off-street parking, and since the entrances and exits to that building must meet the approval of the Zoning Commission, the commission is of the opinion that the traffic problem will not be materially aggravated by the extension of the first commercial area and the erection of a building thereon under plans approved by the commission."

The commission said its action in changing the zoning of parcel 35 over 410 (which is the property involved) was correct, and that at the time of its decision "was in possession of all material facts in the case."

Judges Favor Reforms In Principle

George Horning, Jr., Expects Proposals To Be in Effect Soon

Reforms in Municipal Court proceedings yesterday were approved in principle by all five judges, at a conference with members of the Bar Association special committee on racketeer collection methods.

George D. Horning, jr., chairman of the committee, said he was confident that reforms advocated by the association soon would be officially adopted. Horning said the judges heard the proposals with evident sympathy.

"Shocking Evidence"

The special committee was appointed last autumn by Sefton Darr, then president of the association, and its recommendations for new laws and for court reforms were adopted by the association January 16.

The committee reported "shocking evidence of oppression of the poor and needy" through misuse of court processes and proposed a number of reforms, some possible through action of the judges and others which would require legislation by Congress.

Reforms Discussed

Among the reform proposals discussed at the conference yesterday:

A rule requiring that a showing be made as whether a defendant is exempted by law before a garnishment is issued against him. Up to now the practice has been to issue the garnishment first and wait for the defendant to claim his exemption. Many ignorant persons never did so, because they did not know they were exempt.

A rule requiring specific approval of the court for the summoning of an employer for questioning about the financial status of his workers who might be sued in the court. Creditors have been accused of harassing employers to get them to force their employes to pay up.

A rule providing that no more than one attachment be issued without specific approval of the court. Creditors have been accused of getting repeated attachments for purposes of persecution. It was also proposed that the clerk of court be required by rule to present the file of a case to the judge when an additional attachment was asked for.

Fort Davis Citizens Back Liquor Board

Approval Is Voted For Lodge Policies; Current Inquiry Called Unnecessary

Fort Davis Citizens Association last night voted approval of policies of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board and its chairman, Thomas E. Lodge.

W. A. Duvall, president of the association, said that the present investigation is uncalled for, and that the board has been taking into consideration the views of the majority of citizens in the localities concerned, in issuing or refusing licenses.

The association adopted T. J. Lynch's resolution to oppose the issuance of liquor licenses in the Fort Davis area.

Duvall was renominated for president and Lynch for vice president. Elections will be held at the annual meeting in March. Mrs. Mabel I. Morris was nominated for secretary and Edward M. Schaff for treasurer.

J. E. Reeve, R. T. Hudson, John H. Weiner and Joseph J. West were new members voted in at last night's meeting at the Southeast Branch Library. N. L. Taylor, membership chairman, reported a total of 124, the largest in the association's history. Mrs. C. R. Spring was appointed to the membership committee.

Conduit Road Citizens

The Conduit Road Citizens Association voted last night to sponsor Boy Scout Troop 61 and Girl Scout Troop 132 for another year.

The action was taken at a meeting of the association at the Palisades Field House on a resolution offered by the Rev. Albert Gingrich. Ellis R. King and Walter D. Conyus were chosen association delegates to a sponsoring committee to include representatives of the American Legion and the Community Church.

The association also discussed the possibility of moving the library and post office into a vacated chapel at Conduit and Little Falls roads.

A boy was born to Mrs. Mary Bayhar, of 909 Savannah street southeast, at 7:45 p. m. at Providence Hospital. Washington Sanitarium was visited again at 4:07 a. m. with a boy for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Miller, of 902 Garfield street, Bethesda, Md.

Gallinger's births included a boy to Mrs. Katie Contee, 422 Floyd avenue northwest, at 5:11 a. m.; a boy to Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, 1926 Waverly place northwest, at 5:30 a. m.; a girl to Mrs. Theresa Ratland, 418 B street northwest, at 8:45 a. m.; a boy to Mrs. Vivian Moore, 712 Lamar street northwest, at 11:16 a. m., and a boy to Mrs. Emma Williams, 451 O street northwest, at 12:15 p. m.

At 8:30 a. m., a nine-pound 14-ounce boy was left for Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Alloy, of 5113 Second street northwest, at Homeopathic Hospital.

Father of three daughters, the happy Representative declared, "They're all Republicans, and I guess the boy will be a Republican too—not Farmer-Labor."

Colleges Needed, McConaughy Says

Private colleges are needed to maintain the standards of American higher education, President James L. McConaughy, of Wesleyan University, told the local Wesleyan Alumni Club in a dinner meeting at the Cosmos Club last night.

If private colleges disappear, said Dr. McConaughy, "it will not be long before State-supported institutions will find themselves under political pressure to lower standards, cater to public taste, and even possibly cease really to be educational institutions."

Chinese Goes to Meet Bride Betrothed at 11

W. M. Mei, 25-year-old Chinese journalist, leaves Washington for New York today to claim a bride who has come all the way from China to marry him.

GONG YUNG

Seven years ago, when he was a cub reporter on the "Star Island" Daily News in Hong Kong, Mei was betrothed to Gong Yung, then an 11-year-old school girl, daughter of a Hong Kong banker.

As it is with Chinese custom the affair was arranged by his family. Still loyal to the customs of his country, despite four years in America, Mei, who lives at 620 H street northwest, took out a marriage license here yesterday.

"I have promised," he said yesterday, "and am going to keep my promise."

After their marriage, Mei said, they may live in New York, where Gong Yung will go on with her schooling.

Kiwanis Wives Show Husbands It's Leap Year

Relegating their husbands strictly to the role of "listeners," Kiwanis Club wives celebrated Leap Year by taking over the weekly luncheon meeting yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Frank Peckham, wife of the club president, took her husband's gavel at the outset of the meeting. Mrs. Al Howard welcomed the guests, while Mrs. Herbert Gill introduced the speaker, Mrs. Joshua Evans.

Interesting stories of prominent national figures were recounted by Mrs. Evans. On her first day as a substitute teacher in District schools, she recalled she reprimanded Quentin Roosevelt and demanded his mother come to see her. At the time she did not know his mother was Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, the First Lady.

Park Savings Advised to Pay Late in May

Depositors to Get $220,000 if Wilkes' Counsel Is Followed

Early payment of $220,000 to 8,000 depositors of the closed Park Savings Bank was recommended to the District Court yesterday by Special Master James C. Wilkes.

Wilkes advised payment of $130,000 in fees and expenses in connection with collecting $350,000 from directors of the institution which closed seven years ago.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts ordered a hearing March 15 on the motion of Attorneys E. Hilton Jackson and William E. Richardson that Wilkes' report be approved by the court. About 10,000 depositors will be notified by mail of the proposed distribution and given ten days to protest.

Suits Settled

When collection of $350,000 from the directors was assured several months ago, the court appointed Wilkes to reckon the amount to which depositors were entitled and the amount of fees to be paid. The settlement followed seven years of lawsuits, in which the affairs of the Park Savings Bank were taken three times to the Supreme Court.

The directors finally settled suits brought by a depositors' committee and by John F. Moran, receiver of the bank, for $500,000, of which $150,000 was allotted to general creditors and $350,000 to expenses and depositors.

Should Wilkes' report be approved, the 8,000 persons who had money in the bank when its charter expired August 30, 1929, and did not close their accounts before the bank closed in March, 1933, will receive their portions of the $220,000 late in May.

The depositors' claims totaled $806,827.63 and their dividends amount to about 27 per cent. A depositor's share of the $220,000 was calculated from his lowest balance between 1929 and 1933.

Fees Recommended

Wilkes recommended that Attorneys Jackson and Richardson be paid $37,500 each as fee and expenses for handling the suit against the directors. They were retained with an agreement that if they lost the case they would receive nothing.

Other fees recommended included:

John F. Moran, as disbursing agent who will pay out the $220,000—fee, $3,000; expenses, $3,500.

Attorney J. Bruce Kremer, counsel for Moran, as receiver, in the long litigation, $23,602.50.

Special Master Wilkes, $7,500, fee for apportioning the money.

The firm of Spicer & Rees, certified public accountants, $4,313, fee for auditing.

Members of depositors committee, fees for directing the lawsuit—Robert H. Young, John C. Drake, C. C. Hines and William J. Neale, $1,250 each, Chairman Joseph W. Thompson, $1,500.

Jewish War Veterans Hold Testimonial for J. F. Barr

300 Attend Dinner Given in Honor Of Retiring President of Post 58 And Gensberg, Stearns, Harmel and Sacks

Joseph F. Barr, retiring commander of the Washington Post, No. 58, Jewish War Veterans of the United States, and his staff were honored last night by 300 members and guests of the post at a testimonial dinner at the Continental Hotel.

Sharing the limelight with Barr were Irwin M. Gensberg, retiring senior vice commander; Philip Stearns, junior vice commander; Falk Harmel, adjutant, and Colman Sachs, quartermaster.

Feature of the evening was a round table conference on the aims and purposes of the Jewish War Veterans, in which the retiring commander and vice commander answered the questions of Dr. Ivy A. Pelzman.

Formed in 1896

They pointed out that the organization, the second oldest veterans' group in the United States, was formed in 1896 to "call attention to the record of patriotism of the American Jew."

This purpose distinguishes the organization from other veterans' groups with which its aims in other respects are identical, they said. These aims were described as maintaining allegiance to the United States; encouraging honor and purity in public affairs; combatting whatever tends to impair the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions; encouraging the doctrines of universal liberties, equal rights and full justice to all men; combatting the powers of bigotry and darkness; preserving the records of patriotic services performed by men of the Jewish faith, and honoring the memory of the heroic dead.

The conference pointed out that all members of the Jewish War Veterans also belonged to such other veterans' organizations as they are eligible for, and that the different groups worked together in close harmony.

The work of the Ladies' Auxiliaries of the 225 Jewish War Veteran Posts in hospitals and other charitable work, and the social and patriotic services undertaken by the organization were also noted.

The conference recalled the work of George Freedman, national commander in 1933, in originating the anti-German boycott and organizing a nonsectarian anti-Nazi committee. Through radio addresses of prominent non-Jewish leaders under the veterans' sponsorship, the accomplishments of the American Jew have been repeatedly brought before the public, they said.

Other speakers at the dinner were Benjamin Aronsohn, present commander of the post, who welcomed the guests; Capt. Watson B. Miller, national rehabilitation director of the American Legion; George McLeish, department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; and Dr. Walter C. Hess, department commander of the Disabled American Veterans.

Newmyer Presides

Alvin L. Newmyer presided, and entertainment was provided by the post Junior Drum and Bugle Corps.

Other guests at the dinner were Paul Griffith, national employment director of the American Legion; Heywood N. Saunders, department senior vice commander of the American Legion; Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post; Morris Cafritz, president of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club; Charles Goldsmith, Clarence Grosner, Col. John Korman, Morris Simon, Harry Viner, Louis Ottenberg, Lawrence Koenigsberger, Frederick S. Kogod, Hyman Goldman, Norman Kal, David Bornet, Joseph Cherner, James Simon, Sidney B. Lust, William Bush, Seymour Guthman, Milton S. Kronheim, Harry S. Wender, Dr. Maurice Protos, Dr. Edward A. Cafritz and Edward Kahn.

Harry Cohn was chairman of the dinner committee, assisted by Co-chairman Dr. Ivy A. Pelzman, Dr. Joseph J. Berlin, and Irwin M. Gensberg.

Capital News In Brief

Blossom Date Set

April 5 and 6 were tentatively set as days for the Cherry Blossom Festival at a meeting of the committee for the affair yesterday. The announcement of a tentative date followed a statement by officials of the National Capital Parks that a definite time for the blossoming of the trees could be announced March 23.

According to past records, April 5 is the average blossoming date. The festival will include dances under the trees, and coronation of the Queen of the Festival, Miss Rose Colliflower. The Army Day parade will be April 6, and it is planned to have a portion of the parade pass by the cherry trees.

'Vigil in the Night' Reveals a Serious Lombard

New Film at RKO-Keith's Is Adapted From Book by 'The Citadel's' Dr. Cronin; News and Gossip of the Local Theater

By Richard L. Coe.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

WHEN CAROLE LOMBARD determines to forsake the Gay Life, at which she is cinematically so adept and, may we add, charming, she chooses no half measures. In "Vigil in the Night," which opened yesterday at RKO-Keith's, the blonde star has a role that is unremittingly serious in a film that is unrelentingly grim. Despite a monotony, which, it is evident was achieved by design, the picture makes its point with some power and no little restraint.

"Vigil in the Night" was adapted from a novel by Dr. A. J. Cronin, whose very similar "The Citadel" was such a memorable film of last season. In the present instance, Dr. Cronin repeats much of what he had previously said in "The Citadel." Again we have an English doctor who cries out against the limited material forces within his reach, when plenty could so easily be supplied by moneyed men, but greedy ones. There is a shift of interest, however, in the focus. The central figure is a girl who is inherently a nurse. Strong willed she is and serious. Her duty further includes an irresponsible and selfish younger sister for whom she sacrifices her promising career.

While there are some touches of humor, and very good touches they are at that, the film makes no bones about trying to be anything but a serious drama. This very sincerity of purpose is the most telling quality in gaining the rapt attention of its audience.

As in "The Citadel," Dr. Cronin's hatred of the fashionable Harley street physicians is the foundation of the film's philosophy. Again, too, the scenarists' purpose has been to create characters that ring true. In but one instance Messrs. Fred Guiol, P. F. Wolfson and Rowland Leigh, the scenario writers, have succeeded.

Miss Lombard's purposeful figure is a devoted nurse and sister, played with considerable effect and with that restraint that is the film's most obvious characteristic. Brian Aherne is the brilliant, repressed surgeon, consumed with a desire to serve humanity. Anne Shirley has several scenes as the wayward nurse which are deeply interesting, dramatically moving.

But in the characterization of the "villain" of the piece, the authors have failed us. He is too black a wretch, too deeply-dyed a villain to be convincing. Julien Mitchell as this backward benefactor does everything but twirl his moustache. But as a strict, understanding matron, Ethel Griffies contributes a portrait that is at once vivid and convincing.

George Stevens has directed with the singleness of purpose that results in the unvarying line that we have discussed. There is little doubt, however, that it is a film which the ladies will find much to their taste, largely because the appeal and characters have been pointed in their direction.

Also on the Keith screen is the latest of these superb "Information Please" releases. It's a highly interesting one, as it should be, boasting the services of Christopher Morley as guest expert. F. P. A., Oscar Levant and that most knowing of men are the regulars. Information please on the most knowing of men? John Kieran.

That must have been an interesting party we missed yesterday afternoon at the Raleigh, where the stars of "CBS Radio Revue" were feted prior to their opening on the Earle's stage this afternoon. These wonderful Hartmans were to be there. The Hartmans being those ballroom dancers who find it more lucrative to make fun of what all the other ballroom dancers do. Only two months ago they won New York's annual gold medal as the best night club entertainers of the year. We never thought of there being such a thing, but Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney, Burgess Meredith, George Abbott, Tony Sarg, Beth Brown and Gene Tunney are the judges, so it must be there is such.

Another of the CBS stars, Professor Quiz, whom you will find awarding the solid shekels to a grasping hand on the opposite page, will broadcast his weekly program from the stage of the Earle tonight from 9 to 9:30. His program is heard locally from 7:30 to 8, but the broadcast you may watch tonight is the special airing for the West Coast.

Nor are things in the Capitol Theater's stage quarters at so much of a standstill as the lack of mention in this column might indicate. Those Rhythm Rockets will burst forth this morning in a miniature minstrel show, whanging banjoes, flicking tambourins and soft-shoeing it a la Eddie Leonard.

The Civic Theater is looking past its "St Joan" experience toward its double bill come the week of March 25: "The Devil and Daniel Webster," by Stephen Vincent Benet, and "The Fall of the City," by the Librarian of Congress, Archibald MacLeish. Since over 50 of the Civic's males are busy rehearsing for Miss Rainer's widely awaited American stage debut next week, the stronger sex is much in demand by the casting office. And a pretty girl or a capable girl are always welcome anywhere. Those experienced in verse reading will be particularly sought after. Director Day Tuttle is holding tryouts at Civic headquarters in 918 Fourteenth street on Saturday and Sunday. The hours for both days: 2 to 5 and 7 to 10 p. m.

AMATEUR LIFE: The Music and Dramatics Committee of the Farm Credit Club, an employe organization in the Farm Credit Administration, are presenting the FCA Players in a spring program of two one-act plays and a musical interlude in the Department of Agriculture auditorium tonight at 8:15. "The Patient Is Always Right" and "The Valiant" are the pieces.

"The Cradle Song," that lovely Spanish drama by the Sierras with which Eva Le Gallienne charmed so many of her audiences at the Civic Repertory Theater in New York, will be played tomorrow evening by the students of the Mount Vernon Seminary at the school on Nebraska avenue.

The opening event in the series of five evenings of drama arranged by the Washington Catholic Theater Cycle will consist of three short plays under the general title, "To Meet Three Saints." Sunday evening—The Blackfriars Guild will be the producing group. St. Paul's Auditorium is the place.

Further ahead: Robert Speaight, the prominent English actor who played "The Comedian" here last summer, returns to Catholic University for a five-day run in "Murder in the Cathedral," the Thomas a Becket play, opening at the University Theater Sunday, March 24. Tickets for "Outward Bound," the coming production by the Falls Church Community Theater group, go on sale this morning at Ware's in Falls Church.

Because of the interest aroused by the success of "Gone With the Wind," Bethesda's Hiser Theater is reviving that other epoch-making film of the Civil War period, "The Birth of a Nation." The David Wark Griffith film opens Sunday for a four-day run.

Have you heard the ultimate link in Filmland's terrific "burger" chain? We thought a "pruneburger" was pruning things a bit, but how much further can they go now that someone has created the retiringly titled "Oomphburger?"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 29.

SYLVIA SIDNEY: A law suit concerning "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"—the movie in which you were starred four years ago—was settled this month by Walter Wanger, the producer . . . The plaintiffs were the family of Edith Maxwell, a schoolteacher of Wise, Va., who killed her father by hitting him with her slipper. Wanger's publicist arranged for the press to refer to it as "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine Case," secured a new trial for her, and promised to contribute the first day's receipts at the Music Hall, to a defense fund . . . Because of a switch in booking dates, the picture was shown at the Paramount, had its run—and Miss Maxwell was forgotten. She's now serving her 10-year prison term . . . Wanger just settled for $2,000.

HANS THOMSEN: The State Department talk is that Sumner Welles' trip to Europe was first suggested by your men at the German Embassy in Washington, acting on Hitler's orders, and with the knowledge of the Allies . . . Jim Farley: Homer M. Adams, national president of the Young Democrats, will fix April 20 as the date for Jeffersonian banquets throughout the Nation, designating it as "Young Democrats Day" . . . Police Commissioner Valentine: James Wheeler-Hill, convicted official of the German-American Bund, has provided the district attorney with a list of all the police officers who "cooperated" with the Bund, during Fritz Kuhn's reign.

ROBERT TAYLOR: Despite the fact that M-G-M plans to star you in a movie based upon the life of Liszt, Universal is proceeding with a film based upon the same theme. Henry Koster will produce it, and is trying to induce James Stewart to play the title role . . . Sinclair Lewis: Your wife, Dorothy Thompson, is arranging for a visa to go to Europe shortly . . . Mayor LaGuardia: The newest name being mentioned as successor to the late Boro President Ingersoll, is Frank J. Taylor.

DAVID P. SARNOFF: Norman Cousins, who will be the new editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, participated in the People's Platform program, over C. B. S., on the subject of propaganda . . . He warned Lyman Bryson, moderator for that program, that he planned to attack radio as a means of propaganda—and asked whether his broadcast would be censored . . . "Oh, no, say anything you want," said C. B. S.'s Bryson. "But we have one rule to which you must adhere. Say anything you want about C. B. S.—but nothing about N. B. C."

FCC: Mayor LaGuardia is coming to Washington on March 19, to fight for a clear, unshared wavelength for WNYC . . . Ben Hecht: Jack White last night lost his distinction as the only Broadway notable who won't appear in your movie. He'll portray a fight manager. He portrayed such a role 20 years ago, in the "Leather Pushers" serials . . . Walt Disney: The first movie ever seen by the leper colony in Tahiti was "Snow White." Billy Leeds brought it to them. He's planning to return there soon, and would like to bring "Pinocchio."

ERNEST HEMINGWAY: Elliot Paul, who was with you in Spain and who wrote "The Life And Death of a Spanish Town," now is seeking some peace and quiet . . . Since his recent return from Europe Paul has written two mystery-thrillers, learned to play Boogie-Woogie and gave a Boogie-Woogie concert, and so now is ready to rest . . . That's why he's really taking a civil service examination for a lighthouse keeper's job. His application already is in.

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 29 (INS).—You and you and you—Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public and all the little publics will see the Academy winners two weeks from tomorrow night in your theater. Warner Brothers will make a cavalcade of the Academy winners—a two-reeler, starting with "The Jazz Singer" in 1927 in which Al Jolson won the first Oscar, going on through the years with Mary Pickford in "Coquette," Helen Hayes in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," Janet Gaynor in "Seventh Heaven," Bette Davis, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Clark Gable, etc., etc.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Each studio has agreed to permit Warners to photograph their stars and tonight, which is the big night when the 1939 Oscars will be handed out, will be photographed at the dinner. A grand idea and give credit for it to Jack Warner and the Academy committee.

Walter Brennan is Darryl Zanuck's choice to play the amazing backwoods character, Jeeter Lester, in "Tobacco Road," created on the stage by Henry Hull. That's the casting setup as told me by Darryl, who bought Jack Kirkland's startling drama. When "Tobacco Road" reaches the screen it will be comedy—riotous comedy without any effort to make it serious. Just in passing, I knew well that the printed story that Charles Laughton would play the role was untrue. Laughton was never even hot, since Zanuck always has a stranglehold on the film rights—and obviously Laughton is not the Jeeter type.

The movie destiny of Lon Chaney, jr., seems very well set since Hal Roach took a chance and cast him in "Of Mice and Men." Since that time Lon's boy's place in the Hollywood sun has been assured and yesterday he took one more step forward in his promising career. He was borrowed from the Roach studios to play the very good role of "Shorty," in Cecil B. DeMille's Canadian Northwest epic.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Sid Rogells are cradle shopping. She was formerly June Clayworth; Mrs. Pansy (Nicholas) Schenck is seriously ill with a nervous breakdown in Miami and her friends are greatly worried; the death of the Bob Speers (of Paramount Publicity) 19-month-old baby girl was a severe shock to Bob and his wife. The little one was only sick a few days. Ann Sheridan is on a milk diet; Binnie Barnes and Mike Frankovitch at Stapsie Maxie's, the first time he has been out since he had his nose remodeled; the most surprising twosome of the week Mrs. Dick Foran and Greg Bautzer. They were at the premiere of "Grapes of Wrath" and later at Ciro's; Joan Bennett celebrating her birthday at the Darryl Zanuck party at Ciro's. She won a huge cake, while Reginald Gardiner, who kept his birthday a secret, was given a cup cake with a solitary candle, but it was so good Reggie asked for an encore.

Fay Wray and Bob Riskin, an unexpected two-some at the Zanuck party, and credit goes to Billy Wilkerson for arranging one of the nicest parties of the year. The tables were done in red and white with menus for each guest; Marlene Dietrich wearing a fascinating turban of gold with a white and gold-trimmed dress; Dolores del Rio also wore draped headgear while Mrs. Jack (Ann) Warner attracted attention with a small flower-trimmed chapeau not unlike the one grandma used to wear—but tres smart; Mrs. Zanuck leaves tomorrow for Sun Valley with the children, while Darryl follows later for four weeks' holiday; Judy Garland, in a long sweeping skirt, looked like she borrowed her mama's dress, having herself a time; George Raft sat with one arm around Norma Shearer gazing at her all evening and dancing only with her; Gracie Fields, a quaint figure in a high-neck dress and glasses, escorted by the devoted Monty Banks; Joan Davis' cute little daughter, Beverly, is so ill with the flu that production on "Sailor's Lady" has been held up so she can be at her baby's bedside.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

George Murphy Is Yale Man Who Won Out

Dancing Star Worked Up to Stardom From An Anthracite Shaft

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Feb. 29.—"They let a pick-and-shovel man down into a Pennsylvania coal mine," reported Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's inspired biographer a couple of years ago, "and when the cable broke, they hauled up an actor."

M-G-M was referring then to a supporting player, who did mostly gangster parts, by the name of George Murphy. He was one of America's great dancing stars—only Hollywood didn't know it. It's beginning now to discover the kind of man he is, and thanks to S. Goldwyn, Inc., Ltd., his story makes one of the movies' strangest.

He did his first movie dancing as one of the three stars in "Broadway Melody of 1940" and he's dancing again as Lana Turner's costar in "Two Girls on Broadway." Because of the great Goldwyn, it took him six years to make the grade.

"Not that I'm sorry," he reported today. "I learned a lot about movie making behind those wooden prison-bars."

Young Murphy graduated from Yale University as an engineer and spent some time in Detroit installing rear axles in Paige automobiles.

"The company since has gone out of business," he said. "I think my rear axles were one of the principal reasons."

Then he became a coal miner, as per the official biography. Only he never fell down any shafts.

"I just got sick of it," he said. "It was lonesome down in the mine, nobody else could speak English, the work was back-breaking and I decided that since I had only one life to live, I could do it better than by blasting anthracite."

He left the mine one night without saying goodbye, went to New York, and bumped into Juliette Johnson, a would-be actress he'd known in Detroit..

"We'd both been good ballroom dancers," he said, "so I suggested we get together as a professional dancing team. She said she'd do it, if I could get us a job."

Murphy found one in an out-of-the-way hotel on Sixtieth street. The new dancing team soon was a sensation and Murphy and Johnson spent eight years entertaining the nightlifers in hotels here and abroad.

"I finally got into the theater," he said. "Juliette was my wife by then and I started earning the groceries alone."

Back in 1933 he was playing in the Broadway stage success, "Roberta," when Goldwyn sent a talent scout to look over an actress in the show. She made a sound test and since she had to have a partner for it, she asked Murphy if he'd fill in.

He obliged with one of the first songs he ever sang. The girl didn't get the job. But Murphy did. Goldwyn brought him to Hollywood as a singer in "Kid Millions."

When the picture was finished, Murphy landed a job at Columbia, taking the part of a prize fighter.

The picture went over all right. Murphy went into a whole series of gangster films. He still hadn't danced a step in the movies. Metro put him under contract. Fox borrowed him and he was on the way up as a dramatic actor. Still no dancing.

"Finally it did come out that maybe I did know something about dancing," he said. "When that news got around town, Goldwyn asked me why I hadn't told him in the first place that I could dance? He'd seen me and Juliette at least 20 times in dancing places in New York and there wasn't a thing I could say."

They Bring 'Midnight'—and Merriment—Six Times Daily

AN IMPOSING LINE-UP OF PRINCIPALS IN THE LITTLE'S REVIVAL
Hedda Hopper, The Post columnist; Francis Lederer, seen here a week ago as Katharine Cornell's leading man at the National; Mary Astor, Don Ameche, Claudette Colbert, at her best since "It Happened One Night," and John and Elaine Barrymore, the voluble lovers so recently united, are the leading players in this revival of "Midnight," one of last season's most engaging comedies

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 29.

With 1940 less than two months old, Hollywood has already made the greatest theatrical history ever known in the world, all on account of one picture, "Gone With the Wind." You all know the three years front and back talk which preceded it, also since its release, so I'll just add my two cents' worth for luck. It's breaking every box-office record, taking in over a million and a half dollars a week. It's paid for itself already, So I thought I'd chat with its director, Victor Fleming.

HOPPER

I've known Vic for years, but never before sat down for a real heart-to-heart talk with him. I wanted to know if there was any truth to all this talk about his feuding with David Selznick because he hadn't gotten enough credit for the picture.

Vic's remark was, "Oh, that's a lot of nonsense. I've never worked with anyone more cooperative. Selznick has great appreciation and understanding.

"Think of the Herculean job that Billie Menzies did with his scenes—camera work of Ernest Haller—make-up of Westmores, costumes, acting, the story. Naturally, it was a tough job. For eight months I worked day, night and Sundays. It's the director's job to get every bit of emotion there is out of his actors, and to draw that out he has to spend his own.

"Of course, there were days when members of the cast had off. Gable didn't work every day, nor Vivien Leigh. But the director is there every day, before, during, and after each scene is shot. If you don't get a scene right, you work on it the next day, and the next, until the actor is ready to drop in his tracks and so are you. Naturally, nerves are frazzled, there are bound to be arguments, misunderstandings. At first, I didn't give Vivien Leigh credit enough for the emotional depth she has. She's an amazing person, and can stand more punishment than any woman I've ever met. I have great respect for her. I can't say too much about her or her ability.

Andrew Kelley To Be Honored By Testimonial

A group of America's most distinguished theatrical figures will join with local civic leaders and the Variety Club in the sponsorship of a testimonial dinner to Andrew R. Kelley, Washington drama editor and newspaperman, to be held Friday, March 8, in the main ballroom of the Hotel Willard.

"Because We Love Him" is the theme of the testimonial in which Mr. Kelley's many friends are to publicly acknowledge his friendship and his nearly 30 years of outstanding service in the field of journalism.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is active chairman of the committee, and as vice chairmen are listed Carter T. Barron, Richmond B. Keech, Hardie Meakin, Edmund Plohn, Elwood Seal, John J. Payette and Sidney Lust, the chief barker of the Variety Club.

The honorary committee represents leaders in the creative, production, executive and advertising fields of the stage and screen. Among honorary committee members are Playwrights Elmer Rice and Robert E. Sherwood; former Presidential Secretary Joseph P. Tumulty, White House Secretary Steve Early, Stage Producers Max Gordon, Marcus Heiman, Lee and J. J. Shubert, Leonard Bergman and Guthrie McClintic. The film world is represented by Joseph R. Vogel, Howard Strickling, Charles C. Moskowitz, Howard Dietz, S. Charles Einfeld, Oscar A. Doob, Harry Goldberg, Robert Gillham, Lynn Farnol, Grad Sears, William Rogers, William Scully, Jack Cohn, S. Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Accent o nHips By Style Experts This Season Means Exercise

NOW THAT you all have gone and slimmed your waistline down to a wispy 18 inches (or is it 28?) the accent is on the hips. The style experts are simply obsessed with the slim hiplines!

They appear to have eased their demands for a slim waist . . . But when you really think it over, the shift of stress to hip slimness does not mean that your waistline can go scotfree. Just imagine what you would look like with ultra-slim hips and an over-lapping waist! It would be much uglier than last year's "fashion" —which few women took seriously—in which your hips could billow so long as your waist was tiny.

Come right down to it, proportion is the thing. It always has been and we are ready to go on record as predicting that it always will be. In order to conform to the slim-hip style, you must also have a small waist. Many of the hip-slimming measures can be combined with the twisting that takes inches off the waist. Here are some exercises with a new twist:

Spanking Off Hips

MOVEMENT: Reverse the position, rolling across the hips and resting the weight on the left elbow and right thigh. In changing sides you must twist vigorously at the waist. The legs should be held together during the exercise.

You can also spank off the hips while twisting at the waist, as in the following exercise:

POSITION: Lying on the back on the floor with the knees flexed and the soles of the feet on the floor. Have the arms upstretched on the floor overhead, palms up.

MOVEMENT: Raising the hips off the floor, point the knees to the left side of the body, then bring the hips down smartly on the fat pad on the side of the left hip. Repeat, pointing knees to right, and spanking the fat pad on right hip. Continue for 50 spanks, gradually increasing to 100.

A Kicking Exercise

Much the same technique—hips to one side, trunk to the other—may be employed in a kicking exercise. The main object of any kicking exercise is to slim the hips, but the twisting of the trunk will slim the waist at the same time.

POSITION: Standing erect, arms straight out from the shoulders at sides.

MOVEMENT: Swing the right leg up in front, then across to the left side. While doing so, fling the arms and trunk around to the right. Reverse the kick and fling, continuing for 20 counts, gradually increasing.

Because these exercises must be given in detail, they sound more complicated than they really are. After you have experimented a few times you will be surprised at their simplicity—and their effectiveness.

Gloves Are Gay And Decorative

Paris (U.P.).—There is a special accent on accessories for spring. Nicolet already is displaying gloves of late design and made of gazelle skin, which is less fragile than antelope and which shows inside the glazed kid finish.

These gloves come in fuchsia tones and pastel shades. The hand is stitched in contrasting colors.

Flattering Coiffures, Dictum for Older Women

Simple Lines, Soft Effects Are Decreed in New Styles

Fewer Curls and Wider Waves in Evidence; Hair Should Be Brushed Back From Face; Is Swirled Up in Back

By Carolyn Abbott.

SIMPLICITY and softness are the keynotes of the older woman's smart coiffure. A natural neckline, a deeply swirled back, fewer curls, wider waves, side and front arrangements that are modified and dignified is the dictum of 12 Gotham hair stylists who recently met to evolve coiffures for the International Beauty Show in New York March 11 to 14.

In accordance with the theories propounded by these stylists who set the trends for women's hairdos, emphasis was placed upon the contour of the individual woman. As a result, the older woman's coiffure's this spring will be more flattering than in many previous years. For, generally speaking, the older woman looks younger if her hair is brushed back softly from the face. When pulled too far forward on the cheeks or down on the forehead, it centers attention on the puffs and circles around the eyes and the wrinkles around the mouth. Combed back and softly waved, it seems to lengthen the line of the cheek and makes the sagging throat or double chin less conspicious.

If the hair is gray it must be even more carefully coiffed than brown or black hair. Gray hair which is perfectly groomed, soft and nicely arranged makes a lovely frame for a face that has poise and charm of experience and maturity. So much does it add to attractiveness that it is worth the necessary effort to achieve.

Keep Eyebrows Neat

To form an enchanting frame for the face, white hair must be kept in excellent condition. First, it must be clean, for the least hint of dust or oil dulls its luster. Brush the hair thoroughly daily. Choose a brush with long flexible bristles and wipe it frequently on a clean towel.

One of the distresses of a woman with graying hair is a thinning part. This can be helped by changing the part or hiding it with a new coiffure. Remember that a wide soft wave is more flattering than a tight, narrow one.

Avoid parting the hair in the middle if you wear glasses and don't bring the locks down on the forehead or out on the temples. Even a straying tendril that touches the spectacles adds age to your appearance. Also keep the eyebrows very neat and trim—not plucked to a thin line or to any exaggerated shape, but looking as natural and as spruce as if they were drawn on. Any lashes growing down on the upper lid itself should be plucked out. This makes the whole face cleaner looking and improves the looks of the eyes behind glasses. Choose and apply lipstick with the greatest of care, because centering attention on your mouth distracts attention from your spectacles.

Make-up is a ticklish business for the older woman, but it can do wonders if expertly and correctly applied. Rouge improves the looks of the older woman but only when it is conservatively applied so as to look natural. Only the older woman with a ruddy complexion should be afraid of adding a little color. At all times make-up should look natural. Keep the rouge high on the cheeks. When spread low or all over the cheeks it accentuates sagging lines. Concentrate interest on the eyes by blending the rouge into the circles under the eyes. On a thin face, blend it out and up toward the temples. If your face is broad, rouge nearer the nose but do not let the color extend beyond the outer corners of the eyes.

Consider Skin First

As a woman grows older, the glowing, youthful tones fade. Some faces become pallid and unhealthy looking; some turn sallow; others develop a permanently flushed look, while still others look brown and weather-beaten. As the complexion changes, shades of powder and rouge also should change. Consider the skin first, regardless of the color of hair, when choosing make-up.

The Gentler Sex

Gustatory Mystery

Why do vitamin conscious women in restaurants and tea shoppeys,

Who sit up so self-righteously consuming their vegetable plates,

Never seem any more beautiful, healthy or Amazonian.

Than those who are stuffing down fried chicken and choc-o-lates?

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Members of the Busy Bee Sewing Circle for War Refugees will not meet at their work room tomorrow. Instead they will hold a luncheon at the Hotel Swank to discuss means for raising funds to buy more materials to sew on. The Bees will hold a tea Monday afternoon after which they will disband for the month of March to permit members to do their Easter shopping.

'Too, Too Lovely!'

A large number of collapses from rapture attending the housewarming reception held yesterday afternoon and last night by Mr. and Mrs. Halliburton Bigwigger. Opening their new $1,347,242.17 mansion for the first time to their friends, the host and hostess found themselves operating a first aid hospital before the reception was over.

Many of the feminine guests were temporarily overcome by the sight of the decorations as they stepped into the large entrance hall—particularly by a live gardenia plant which was guarded by three policemen.

The grandeur of the drawing room, which was done in strawberry red, eggplant purple and gold, at first rendered the women guests speechless—but not for long. The resulting "Oh's," "Ah's," caused several passersby to put in calls to the police, thinking a mass murder was in progress.

The most casualties from excitement, however, occurred in the upstairs bedrooms where Mrs. Bigwigger had assembled many rare curios and antiques. Mrs. Ellsworth Toddy and Mrs. Pettibone Twist developed acute cases of hysteria over an old desk from the home of a Revolutionary general; Mrs. Buffington Birdhaven was for awhile believed to have burst a blood vessel over a gong from a Chinese temple, and the sight of a bed said to have been slept in by George Washington caused several women to faint.

Ambulances were called for Mrs. Rufus Flitterjig and Mrs. Ethelbert Looney after they had ventured unwarned into a bedroom modeled after the boudoir of Marie Antoinette.

So many guests were understood to have lost their voices exclaiming over the decorations of the mansion that several important social affairs of the next few days have been called off.

Bachelors' Splurge

Truthtown's debs and post-debs are eagerly awaiting the coveted invitations to the annual Bachelors, Club dinner dance to be given shortly after Easter. This is one of the most exclusive social events of the season and all the young women attending, together with their chaperones, are carefully picked. The committee on arrangements for the ball has added three more bachelors to its membership. They are Carrington Stepp who has again become active in the club since his recent divorce from his fourth wife, the former Suzanne Plush, glamour deb of last season; Charles (Chett) Brandywine 3d who is not returning this semester to Princeton, and Wally Van Nitler, heir of the watercress magnate and one-time husband of "Tootsie" DeRaven, night club singer, and of "Gypsy" Jell, the dancer, who was mentioned in the Racy-Farthingale shooting.

With the Economists

Members of the Ladies' League to Chop Taxes have adopted a quaint insignia—a miniature gold hatchet set with diamonds to wear as a clip or to attach to a bracelet. Miss Mimi Luker, heiress of the salted cashew nut tycoon, and president of the junior auxiliary of the league, is sporting a bracelet made entirely of tiny platinum and emerald hatchets.

Club Item

The horticultural section of the Women's Garden Club of Upper Swaggville, will hear a talk Wednesday afternoon by Prof. Ashton Dummweiler on "Protection From Insects and Fungi of Fruit on Spring and Summer Hats."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy, 3, Misbehaves at Meals; Whines When Crossed; Resents Parental Tete-a-Tetes; How Control Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I enjoy the advice you give others and so we are writing to ask about our son. He is 3 and misbehaves at meals. He cries all the way home from a movie because he wants to see it again. He whines when he cannot have what he wants. If we send him from the table, he cries and refuses to eat when given a new chance. If we let him remain and ignore his mischievousness, he snatches our newspaper, gulps his milk, spears his bacon and plays with his silver.

He has fed himself (after a fashion) since he was 9 months old. He is quick to learn and knows how to eat the simple food he gets. He has the best medical care, has never been ill, has a happy disposition and I follow his doctor's advice in detail. He wants to be the center of every conversation and resents any he cannot join in.

He has a dog. He feeds her, keeps her water bowl filled and lets her in and out when she wants to go. He plays very well by himself in the back yard and is full of fun. He is independent and we know that leading is more effective than dragging. And while we do not want to "squelch" him, we want him to behave at meals and to know that when we say, "be quiet," we mean it.

We are not softies with him. We have spanked him, made him sit in a corner and have spent some thought in reasoning with him. We have a sense of humor and know it may seem funny to you that two grown persons should struggle so to bring up one son. But because we know a child reflects his parents, we want to give our son the best possible training, and we want him to have a happy childhood.

I was the youngest in a large family and was often hungry and cold. All my clothes were hand-me-downs that never fitted. My husband also was the youngest child and was brought up by maiden aunts when his parents separated. He and I probably have hangovers from our dismal childhoods, but we are happy now and want to give our child the things we missed. Perhaps nursery school training would help him, but we could not meet the expense unless I found one where I could do part-time work to pay for his care. Will you please advise us? M. R. T.

Child Suffers From Inexpert Guidance

DEAR M. R. T.: As I see the picture, your experiences with your son are fairly run-of-mine. He seems to be a typical specimen of the dotingly cared for, 3-year-old "only child" of today. It is the exceptional (and, I venture to think, too rigidly molded) modern child who behaves with Victorian gravity at the family table. Those of runabout age who take their meals with their parents are apt to become lovable nuisances while feeding—for the reason that their elders almost invariably employ the occasion to instruct them volubly in the intricacies of "table manners."

The only child thus spotlighted at table from babyhood obviously is conditioned to expect the center of the stage. By the time he has learned how to manipulate his silver, if his parents undertake happily to ignore him, he instinctively resorts to misbehavior as a means of recapturing their attention.

In order to obviate such a vexatious development, many parents let a child have his meals alone at his own small table until his "feeding form" is socially acceptable. His mother or nurse maid sits by, apparently engrossed in handiwork or a book, giving unobtrusive assistance or casual suggestion as required, without indicating that he is an object of paramount concern. On graduating from this type of schooling to a place at the family board, he should be agreeably unspoiled, properly attentive to his food and accustomed to the idea of his elders having other things on their minds than himself.

Review your past conduct at table carefully and I think you must confess that your son's present trying behavior at meals is the result of too much attention—solicitous as well as approving—during the earlier training period. How undo the damage? By patiently and imperturbably refusing to get upset by his failure to eat; by courteously dismissing him from the table, with casual suggestions as to how to occupy himself with his own affairs, when he begins to play with his food and pester his parents; by holding yourself aloof from any display of agitation such as scolding and punishment implies, and generally indicating more by quiet administration than hard-breathing effort that misbehavior is NOT an attention-getting device; that it produces, rather, the opposite effect.

You speak of his "crying all the way home from a movie because he wants to see it again." Perfectionists in child rearing probably would question the advisability of taking a child so young to the movies. I was told some years ago by a representative of the Junior League's Children's Theater that a child less than 6 years of age should not be taken to the theater—"because," she said, "his nervous system is not yet ready for the shock of a theater experience . . . If he goes, he is tense, confused and overstimulated by the time he leaves the theater." So ask yourself who is most at fault, yourself or your son, when he cries all the way home from the picture show.

His whining for what he wants that he cannot have indicates indecision in your behavior, somewhere along the line. He has learned that dogged persistence carries the day, now and again—and so it is natural for him to test his strength against a variable but friendly opposing force.

Limitations of space preclude further discussion of your problem here, so I will conclude with two suggestions, to-wit: 1. Read Winifred de Kok's book entitled, "Guiding Your Child Through the Formative Years," a volume published by Emerson Books, Inc., and well recommended by child psychologists. 2. If you feel the need of further discussion, talk the situation over with representatives of the Child Guidance Clinic of The Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, at 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033. A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 29.

THE AFTERNOON orgies in our town are divided very strictly into groups, and only rarely do the perpetual party dead-heads overlap. One of the constant types is what is technically known as the "literary tea," so called because no tea has been seen at one of these publishers' promotion parties since the late fall of '94. Prohibition, which made drinking "smart," really killed the tea industry as far as the press agents are concerned.

Alice Hughes

Though I am not in the booksy business, I occasionally rate a bid to one of these "teas," and enjoyed a very pleasant one this week to further the progress of a new novel called "Decade," written by a nice young fellow named Stephen Longstreet. The host, on this mellow occasion, was Bennet Cerf, head of Random House, and once the ever-loving husband of Sylvia Sidney; and the place was the thirty-floor of Al Smith's Empire State Building, in what is called the Bacardi Room, a colorful spot sacred to the promotion of the kind that is known, I believe, as "rum." There was the author, very nice, and the publisher, ditto, and such amiable publicists as Amy Vanderbilt and Joe Israels, not to mention the attractive "rum" man. And there was "the gang."

These are charming affairs, but I am skeptical about their sales effect. If they sell 10 more copies of a book, and make an author a few pennies, I'm tickled to death, and so, no doubt, is he. Like the big "movie parties" to meet Barbara Bustle, the big star, they are builders of good will, and they give a lot of friends a chance to meet and talk shop. At this one were Charlie Driscoll, the column writer; and Clare Davis; and the writer, very good time.

As you probably know, the huge local corps of beautiful models runs to specialties—one girl is in demand for sports togs, one for hosiery, and another for slinky evening dresses. One such specialist here is unique, in that a photographer named Albert has signed her exclusively to pose for his pictures of hands. She is a lovely Memphis girl named Florence Pearsall, who came here with no intention of such a career, but whose extraordinarily beautiful hands soon attracted expert attention.

Hollywood Rage Is Transparent Cinderella Shoes

Hollywood.—Cinderella will no longer be in a class by herself this spring and summer—transparent slippers are the newest in footgear. And in case the word "impractical" immediately comes to mind, designer Orry-Kelly has an answer.

"These slippers are not made of real glass," Orry says, "but of plastic material, transparent, and tinted any desirable shade. Nails are placed in the heels and soles while the material is soft and in the mold. Then they are fitted solidly to the shoe proper, which is in fabric, both for sports and formal wear."

Miriam Hopkins has two pairs of the new footwear. Bright and transparent red glass platforms on black moire pumps make up a clever pair to be worn with a black wool jersey evening gown with halter neck. Gabardine moccasins, polka dotted in blue, have blue and white plastic soles and heels. These clever sports sandals perk up a white sharkskin play dress.

Oriental Dishes for Occidental Palates

CHINESE food offers both surprise and delight to most occidental palates. Almond omelette is an excellent Lenten dish that will be both a surprise and delight. This dish posseses a triad of virtues—it is simple, it is good, and it is nutritionally sound. The following recipe is one that has been faithfully tested by a Chinese chef.

Almond Omelette

Parboil ½ cup celery, ½ cup thinly sliced onions, ½ cup mushrooms sliced thin, and 1 cup bean sprouts in a cup of boiling water for about 5 minutes. Drain in colander. Beat 4 eggs well and add to the vegetables. Season with tablespoon soy sauce, pepper and salt. Fry in cakes in a hot, well-greased skillet. Brown on both sides. Using the same frying pan, after the cakes have been removed, add a little fat, ½ cup meat broth and make a gravy with the addition of 2 teaspoons cornstarch. Pour over the almond cakes and serve with boiled rice.

Peach Celestial is a dessert that is a typical Chinese one. The recipe for making it follows:

Peach Celestial

Remove the skin from peaches and cut them in halves and remove the pits. If not in season, use canned peaches. Drop a little ginger syrup, taken from preserved ginger, on each peach half. Bake the peaches in a moderate oven. When they become slightly brown and dry, remove from oven and cool. Place two halves of peaches on a plate and fill the centers with ice cream. Sprinkle with walnuts, chopped fine and ¼ cup candied ginger, chopped fine.

Homemaker Finds Time for Career and Casual Entertaining

Mrs. Joseph Douglass Manages Without Maid

'Aunt Sammy,' of Department Of Agriculture, Says Scientific Cookery Conserves Her Time

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

WITH AN unusual zest for life and a design for living it, Helen Crouch Douglass, who as the "Aunt Sammy" of the United States Department of Agriculture, is the feminine counterpart of "Uncle Sam," crowds more into a day's life than one can imagine.

Martha Ellyn

"Aunt Sammy" in private life is Mrs. Joseph U. Douglass, and lives at 2013 Lynn street, Arlington, Va. Her life is full of many activities, and anxious to learn how she always has time for entering into them, I asked her by what particular plan she achieved so much. Mrs. Douglass told me that she does not keep a maid, but manages a modernistic home herself and does her own cooking.

One glimpse of the charming Douglass home which is a combination of all that is modern and comfortable and you are convinced that there is a judicious application of planning employed by this career woman.

Scientific Cookery

An answer to the running of Mrs. Douglass' home is her use of scientific cookery. And one piece of equipment that Mrs. Douglass prizes very highly is her speed cooker saucepan. Coming home from business at the end of the day she can cook vegetables, meats or cereals in such a short time that she finds preparing a meal takes little effort and time. I examined this "magic" cast aluminum pan of hers and learned that the chief virtue is its bakelite locking-cover lid, which makes it air tight. There is a small indicator, too. Experimentation has shown that in using this cooker asparagus can be cooked in 1 minute, wax beans, Brussel sprouts, broccoli, lima beans, cabbage and carrots take 2 minutes.

Mrs. Douglass also says that the broiler speeds meal preparation for the working wife and that frozen vegetables are a great aid. A mixed grill makes a quick and appetizing meal for two, using sausage and ham and other foods suitable for preparing the grills. On her way home from the office, "Aunt Sammy" picks up chops, kidneys, bananas and tomatoes and other fresh foods for her evening meals.

For easy entertaining the Douglass buffet bar is the "helper." The meal is cooked on the grill and served from the bar. One favorite menu for such service is a Fish and Egg Curry by which Mrs. Douglass has earned herself a reputation as a hostess. I asked her to give me the recipe for the curry and to suggest foods that she served with it. Her recipe and suggestions follow:

Fish and Egg Curry

Melt 4 tablespoons or other fat and cook 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper, 1 small onion, chopped, and ¼ cup chopped celery in the fat for a few minutes. Add 3 tablespoons flour and then 2 cups broth or water. Cook for 3 or 4 minutes. Add 2 teaspoons curry powder, 3 or 4 drops Tabasco sauce and salt to taste. Then add 1 large can tuna fish, about 1 pound, 1 pound shrimp and 4 hard-cooked, diced eggs. Cook until heated through. Then arrange on a platter with a border of hot flaky boiled rice. Sprinkle chopped parsley on top. Serves six.

Serve chopped nuts, chutney, Bombay duck, watermelon pickle, salad of mixed greens, cheese, crackers and plenty of hot coffee with the curry.

When a quick supper for the Douglasses is in order, Mrs. Douglass told me that she usually selects some of the following foods:

Broiled lamb kidneys (soaked in French dressing 1 hour in advance); small sausages; halves of banana, hot spiced peaches.

Pork and lamb patties; hot canned crabapples; broiled canned sweet potatoes.

Hamburg patties; bacon; halves of tomato; mushrooms; canned pineapple.

In the estimation of Helen Douglass, the buffet bar equipped with an electric grill is one short cut to preparing meals for the career woman. Whether it is used for cooking and serving food to guests, or for preparing a quick family supper as she and Mr. Douglass were doing when the above picture was taken, it serves as the capable silent servant

By Post Food Editor.

CHEESE expanded its personality in this week's Post recipe contest. When the many recipes popped out of the mail bag, there were many suggestions for the addition of cheese, full-flavored and meltingly good, to give that added touch to make a dish extra special. Following are the results of the contest.

Woven Rugs

Rugs are now being woven in big squares to be put together as needed, somewhat like rubber flooring blocks. Thus even when it's seamed, it makes a pattern that looks as if it were meant to be.

Refrigerator Treat

Apple Butter Refrigerator Roll is a dessert which has been developed in one of the great food laboratories. Whether you buy your apple butter or make it, their recipe will prove its worth.

Apple Butter Refrigerator Roll

Whip 1 cup whipping cream just until it begins to hold shape, then fold in gradually one-third cup apple butter. Spread 30 vanilla wafers with the whipped cream mixture, placing on platter to form a roll. Cover top and sides with the filling, and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Chill in refrigerator about 3 hours. Cut into diagonal slices and serve on individual plates.

Stuffed Dates

Stuffing dates is loads of fun for the juveniles. Preliminaries for this are not difficult for all you have to do is wash 8 dried apricot halves, cover with boiling water and let stand for 15 minutes. Then drain and chop in fine pieces. Put apricots, ¼ cup peanut butter, ¼ cup confectioners sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt in a bowl. Stir until blended and add 1-3 cup chopped shredded cocoanut. Then add 2 teaspoons water, a little at a time, stirring until the mixture holds together. Then start stuffing the dates, 24 pitted ones. When finished place dates in a tightly-covered container in the refrigerator.

If Swiss Make Cheese the U. S. Way, Mme. Bruggmann Hasn't Heard

Subject Arises at Luncheon Given By Mrs. Wallace; It's Said The Beltsville Recipe Is World's Best

By Hope Ridings Miller

IF SWITZERLAND now has the Beltsville recipe for making Swiss cheese and is using it, Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister and sister of Secretary Wallace, big boss of Beltsville, hasn't heard a word about it.

HOPE R. MILLER

She said so yesterday when the subject came up at a luncheon given by Mrs. Wallace. The latter said she hadn't heard about it either. But the guest who brought up the subject in the first place said she had the report straight from "somebody on the Hill"—which always sounds authentic enough.

It all came up on the heels of a report that Representative Charles A. Plumley, of Vermont, recently told House Minority Leader Joe Martin that despite the understanding among Republican members of the House, he couldn't bear to vote against the appropriation for Beltsville. The reason, he is said to have said, is that the cheese made at the agricultural research center "is the best in the world."

Well, big stories from little rumors grow—especially in Washington. And for all I know it may be true that Swiss cheese is now being made in Switzerland by the American recipe, and shipped back to American consumers.

The party, incidentally, was an especially pleasant get-together. Small and informal, it was accented by a gay company, a superb menu and exquisite flowers brimming from low bowls and tall vases all over the place. Fragrance from bouquets of roses, gardenias, tulips and snapdragons was wafted all the way down the hall from the Wallace apartment to the elevator. Somebody in the company remarked merrily, on viewing a bouquet of tulips, roses, snapdragons and carnations on the dining room table that she "wouldn't be a bit surprised if Holland will soon be getting tulip bulbs from America."

MRS. WALLACE was smartly turned out in a plum colored frock of brushed wool, made on simple lines and set off with a pearl necklace. Pastel shades accented most of the other costumes, with here and there a dash of bright red to remind you spring is just around the corner.

All in all, it was the kind of party you would like to see go on indefinitely. And certainly nobody thought of leaving until well past midafternoon. When the ranking guests—Mme Ertegun, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mme. Bruggmann and Mrs. Lister Hill—arose to take their leave, others in the company had no further excuse to stay. So the company regretfully called it a day.

INCIDENTALLY, one of the prettiest outfits there was worn by Mrs. Julian Schley, who looked like a spring fashion picture in a pale grey wool coat-dress, made with flowing sleeves and a flaring skirt, and worn with a smart burgundy turban.

Especially becoming also was that dusty pink sailor atop Mrs. Donald Richberg's pretty head, and it contrasted becomingly with that pale blue scarf dropped around Mrs. Raymond Clappers' new spring bonnet. Almost the same shade of blue was Mrs. Irene Caldwell's turban and its matching veil. Red feathers set off the smart hats of both Mrs. J. Frederick Essary and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin; while Mrs. John O. Herrick had on a draped black turban blending with the figures in her black and mauve figured frock.

HEARD: A new definition of an American girl. "She's vogue on the outside; vague on the inside; pretty as a picture, but over-exposed and under-developed."

Countess Szchenyi In Yacht Colony At Miami Beach

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 29.—Prettiest of the residents among the yacht-living winter colony is the Countess Lazlo Szchenyi, of Washington, who was seen this week dashing off for luncheon in a trim gray suit. About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Letter From Mrs. Francis B. Sayre Brings News of Mrs. Anne Archbold

A LETTER from Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, wife of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, brings news of the fabulous Chinese junk in which Mrs. Anne Archbold, of Washington, is cruising the islands southeast of Borneo in search of new plants for a Florida museum.

With Mr. and Mrs. David Fairchild, Mrs. Archbold stopped in Manila aboard the Cheng Ho for several days. She gave a tea on board, at which callers admired the lavishness of the world's largest luxury junk. Mrs. Sayre writes that the boat is built with every convenience, has air cooling a Swedish fireless cooker stove even, as well as several bathrooms, and electric refrigeration. The walls of the dining salon are lined with beautifully carved paneling, and everywhere are exquisite Chinese art objects and porcelain.

Several months ago the Cheng Ho was launched in Hongkong in real Chinese fashion, with a red-robed priest who fired firecrackers over the bow to warn off any evil spirits who might not be taking matters seriously, and flicked holy waters on the decks.

MRS. SAYRE writes that she is studying Spanish and trying to find time for her painting every other morning. She and Mr. Sayre, who was formerly Assistant Secretary of State, spent Christmas in the beautiful mountain resort of Baguio, in the old Mansion house, famous for its charm, simplicity and lovely garden. The government is building a magnificent new residence at Baguio for the Commissioner which probably will be completed about the first of March.

From other sources we hear that our Commissioner lives in great style, with an airplane and a boat, to say nothing of a fleet of cars put at his disposal by the United States Government.

MR. AND MRS. John Caswell will be among the dinner givers before the Thrift Shop ball next Wednesday. At Mrs. Charles M. Lea's tea yesterday Mrs. Caswell was the best-turned-out woman there in a stunning new gray suit with a white stripe, double silver fox furs and a flaring, pirate style gray felt hat.

Others at the tea were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who wore a caracul coat over her dress, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Charles Stanley White and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie. Mrs. Lea is occupying the house on Kalorama road which was formerly the home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe.

OFF FOR HAWAII today are Mr. and Mrs. James L. Karrick. They will go by train to the West Coast with a stop off at New Orleans. The first of May will see them back in Washington again.

THE WAR doesn't seem to have hurt the tourist trade in Nassau. Among the many there from Washington are the Misses Irene, Mary and Louise Sheridan, daughters of Gen. Phil Sheridan, and Henry S. Villard, of the State Department. Edward Gardner has leased a house in Queen street for the season and expects to be joined this week by his niece, Miss Mary Louise Marsh. The Drew Pearsons recently arrived from Miami by private plane. Irving Berlin, the songwriter, Mrs. Berlin, and their daughter, Elizabeth, are at the Jungle Cove Cottage for the rest of the season. Brenda Frazier and "Shipwreck" Kelly, of New York, add the cafe society touch to Nassau at the moment.

COMMANDER AND MRS. "Jerry" Wiltse have been doing the New York night clubs and theaters with the latter's son-in-law and daughter, the John Roosevelts. The reports say that Commander Wiltse will shortly be transferred from Washington for sea duty.

Miss Boardman Fetes Miss Rainer

Miss Mabel Boardman entertained at a luncheon yesterday afternoon at her home on P street in honor of Miss Luise Rainer, who will star in the forthcoming production of "Saint Joan," which opens at the Belasco March 10.

Miss Boardman is national secretary of the American Red Cross. Proceeds of Miss Rainer's performance will be turned over to the Red Cross.

Mrs. E. F. Parham Returns to N. C.

Mrs. Edwin Fuller Parham, after having been the house guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anthony Wadden, left yesterday to join her husband at their home in Henderson, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Parham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Parham at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City last week.

Mrs. Parham came to Washington to attend the luncheon given by Mrs. Wadden last Monday in honor of Mrs. Edward W. Pou, Mrs. John Kerr and Mrs. Don Leslie at the Congressional Club. While here Mrs. Parham was the guest of honor at several parties.

Urgent Relief for France Workers Put Down Their Sewing and Take Up Tea Cups

Embassy Counselor Speaks to Gathering At Workshop

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The tinkle of teacups replaced the sound of sewing yesterday at the work room of the sponsors of Urgent Relief for France, 1536 Connecticut avenue, where several hundred guests gathered at a tea given to acquaint Washingtonians with the work being carried on there.

Posters, used in France at the time of the first World War, decorated the walls and there were pictures of some of the children and elderly people recently evacuated from their homes, to whom the garments are being sent by the workers here. Layetts, shawls, sweaters and other garments which comprise the relief supplies, also were on display . . . all for civilians.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the former United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, received, assisted by Jacques Truelle, Counselor of the French Embassy, in place of Mrs. George Barnett, chairman of the sponsors' committee, who was ill.

Mrs. Carr said that, during February, 1,580 garments had been sent to France in addition to 110 pounds of wool to be knitted by the women there and 200 yards of material to be made up there. Money is also being sent for a sewing machine for the use of the French women.

Money has been sent, too, for the establishment of six social centers where the homeless people can meet, where the women can work, a medical clinic can be conducted and classes can be held for the children. In addition to this, money for another center at the town of Bailleux, has been provided by Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, of Chicago, who was there when the war started. Mrs. Dewey has organized a branch of Urgent Relief organization in Chicago. Another has been formed in Middleburg, Va., by Mme. Cartiere, who already has sent 800 garments.

Mrs. Melvin Hall is in charge of the office here, and Miss Alice Dodge supervises the work room. This is open from 10 to 4:30 daily and always has workers knitting or sewing. A group that has been working two days a week at the French Embassy ever since the war started and has a membership of 70, goes to the workroom every Thursday and sometimes meets there on Monday or Friday also instead of at the embassy.

The Urgent Relief Committee was organized in January. It works with the French organization Secours d'Urgence, founded in France in 1917 by Mme. La Marechale Joffre, for work in the devestated regions and among refugees. Afterward its was continued as a welfare organization. Now it is again called on to do war relief.

Dr. Truelle spoke briefly and commended the use of the word "urgent." When relief is required, it is always urgent, he said, and quoted the old proverb: "He who gives at once, gives twice."

The afternoon's entertainment was provided by Felian Garzia and Mme. Garzia, and those who assist in the Saturday night programs at Montmartre Noctambule—Mrs. Victor Tapke, Justin Lawrie and Mrs. Charles Tuttle. They presented two favorites of Montmartre, "Truffles" and "The Coachman," both original skits. Germaine Johnson, radio artist, sang, wearing a Normandy costume.

Pouring were Mme. Lombard, Mme. Lucet, Mme. Benech and Mme Weiser, of the French Embassy; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and Mrs. Carlos Delmar.

G. O. P. Women Give Luncheon; 100 Attend

Spring Flowers Decorate Tables; Optimism Prevails

The largest luncheon since the fortnightly luncheon meetings were instituted by the League of Republican Women was that yesterday at the clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street, with more than 100 members and guests attending.

Tables were set in the drawing room, dining room and reception hall. Spring flowers decorated the tables as well as the hats of many of the guests and there was a general air of optimism to which the result of the recent Ohio election had contributed. Over the door of the drawing room hung a jubilant little elephant bearing the inscription "Let's G. O. P.laces."

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, presented as guest speaker Mrs. Wlibur W. Carr, wife of the former United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, who talked on her experiences there.

Mrs. Carr described the beauty of the country, the warm feeling of the people for the United States and for Americans; their trust in to their President Thomas Masaryk, at the time of his death and the events leading up to Munich and after. She told in detail of the conference between Czecho-Slovakian President Hitler the day before the Germans marched into Prague. She made apparent the futility of resistance at that time, with the great munitions works already in German hands.

Mrs. Gann introduced her guests Mrs. Ralph Harris, Republican National Committeewoman from Kansas; Mrs. Ellis, former National Committeewoman from West Virginia; Mrs. [illegible] New, whose husband served in Cabinet under two Presidents; Mrs. William N. Doak, whose husband also was a Cabinet member, and Mrs. Jacob Leandose.

Among the many at the luncheon were Mrs. White Speel, National Committeewoman for the District; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, and Mrs. Harve Tibbott, wife of Representative Tibbott, of Maine's district in Pennsylvania, who was her guest at the luncheon, and Mrs. Robert H. Mitchell.

Alumni of Western High To Mark School's 50th Year

The alumni of Western High School will meet at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow night to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the school with a dinner, at which one of the distinguished graduates, Fulton Lewis, jr., will preside.

Although the "Westerners" have never had an alumni association, there are hundreds of loyal graduates, some of whom are coming from distant places to attend the dinenr, and it is likely that the organization of an alumni society will result. All former students, whether or not they have been reached by announcements from the committee, are urged to attend and may make reservations at Western today. Miss Emily Steuart, one of the 12 members of the faculty who are also graduates of the school, heads the committee.

Dr. Elmer Newton, Principal to Speak

Serving with her are Mrs. Ruth L. Huse, Miss Nell Bass, Mrs. Mary Bish, Miss Lottie Magee, Mrs. Nellie H. Scott, Miss Marion Magruder, Mrs. Gladys Sanders, Miss Susan Richmond and Miss Myrtle Bray.

Dr. Elmer S. Newton, the principal, who will be one of the speakers, although not an alumnus, has been on the faculty of Western for 42 of its 50 years and for 25 years has held his present position. His wife, who will also be an honor guest at the dinner, was one of the early teachers. Another early faculty member who will speak is Mme. Blanche Bimont, former teacher of French at the school, who is now retired.

Others on the program will all be distinguished alumni. They are Senator Robert M. La Follette, Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, Kenneth Collings, news writer, who has recently returned from Poland and other sections of the war area; Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford, daughter of Admiral Peary, and noted as the "snow baby," and Ernest Draper, of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve.

Alumni to Provide Music as Well

Music also will be provided by alumni—Virginia Sellars Cochrane, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Clifton R. Moore, a former Western teacher, and Charles Trowbridge Tittman, barytone, accompanied by George Wilson.

Honor guests will be Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and Mrs. Ballou; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, and Dean Doyle; Dr. Chester Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, and Mrs. Holmes; Mrs. William D. Appel, a niece of the late Miss Edith C. Westcott, first principal of Western, and Mr. Appel.

All of the classes from 1893 to the present will be represented at the dinner. Alumni will come from New England, Maryland and Virginia, from New York, New Jersey and from as far west as St. Louis. Judge Harry C. Blanton, Federal judge of the Eastern Missouri District, will come from there. Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Houghton are coming from Hingham, Mass.

Marines and Army To Be Represented

From the Marine Corps will be Col. and Mrs. Lucian W. Burnham and Col. Robert C. Kilmarten, of Quantico, and, from the Army, Capt. James L. Welchel, of Fort Belvoir.

When the Western High School was first opened in 1893, it had about 300 students and, for a few years, occupied the building now used as the Curtis Grade School. More than 40 years ago it was moved to its present location on Thirty-fifth street between R and Reservoir road. In 1925 a large addition was built, including 28 classrooms on the rear of the structure and a front section for the administrative offices. The auditorium also was rebuilt.

Six years ago there were more than 2,200 students enrolled, and two sessions were conducted daily, but when Woodrow Wilson High School was opened, part of these were transferred there, leaving the enrollment now approximately 1,600.

If Swiss Make Cheese the U. S. Way, Mme. Bruggmann Hasn't Heard

Subject Arises at Luncheon Given By Mrs. Wallace; It's Said The Beltsville Recipe Is World's Best

By Hope Ridings Miller

IF SWITZERLAND now has the Beltsville recipe for making Swiss cheese and is using it, Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister and sister of Secretary Wallace, big boss of Beltsville, hasn't heard a word about it.

HOPE R. MILLER

She said so yesterday when the subject came up at a luncheon given by Mrs. Wallace. The latter said she hadn't heard about it either. But the guest who brought up the subject in the first place said she had the report straight from "somebody on the Hill"—which always sounds authentic enough.

It all came up on the heels of a report that Representative Charles A. Plumley, of Vermont, recently told House Minority Leader Joe Martin that despite the understanding among Republican members of the House, he couldn't bear to vote against the appropriation for Beltsville. The reason, he is said to have said, is that the cheese made at the agricultural research center "is the best in the world."

Well, big stories from little rumors grow—especially in Washington. And for all I know it may be true that Swiss cheese is now being made in Switzerland by the American recipe, and shipped back to American consumers.

The party, incidentally, was an especially pleasant get-together. Small and informal, it was accented by a gay company, a superb menu and exquisite flowers brimming from low bowls and tall vases all over the place. Fragrance from bouquets of roses, gardenias, tulips and snapdragons was wafted all the way down the hall from the Wallace apartment to the elevator. Somebody in the company remarked merrily, on viewing a bouquet of tulips, roses, snapdragons and carnations on the dining room table that she "wouldn't be a bit surprised if Holland will soon be getting tulip bulbs from America."

MRS. WALLACE was smartly turned out in a plum colored frock of brushed wool, made on simple lines and set off with a pearl necklace. Pastel shades accented most of the other costumes, with here and there a dash of bright red to remind you spring is just around the corner.

All in all, it was the kind of party you would like to see go on indefinitely. And certainly nobody thought of leaving until well past midafternoon. When the ranking guests—Mme Ertegun, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mme. Bruggmann and Mrs. Lister Hill—arose to take their leave, others in the company had no further excuse to stay. So the company regretfully called it a day.

INCIDENTALLY, one of the prettiest outfits there was worn by Mrs. Julian Schley, who looked like a spring fashion picture in a pale grey wool coat-dress, made with flowing sleeves and a flaring skirt, and worn with a smart burgundy turban.

Especially becoming also was that dusty pink sailor atop Mrs. Donald Richberg's pretty head, and it contrasted becomingly with that pale blue scarf dropped around Mrs. Raymond Clappers' new spring bonnet. Almost the same shade of blue was Mrs. Irene Caldwell's turban and its matching veil. Red feathers set off the smart hats of both Mrs. J. Frederick Essary and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin; while Mrs. John O. Herrick had on a draped black turban blending with the figures in her black and mauve figured frock.

HEARD: A new definition of an American girl. "She's vogue on the outside; vague on the inside; pretty as a picture, but over-exposed and under-developed."

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone will be guests of honor at a luncheon to be given Sunday by Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon in their home near Rockville, Md. Mrs. Clarence Barton will be hostess at a luncheon at the Shoreham today . . . Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. A. A. Berle have cards out for a small tea on March 9 . . . The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz have issued invitations for a dinner on Friday, March 8 . . . Mrs. J. Harry Covington will give a luncheon on Saturday, March 9 . . . The Minister of Finland will have a few friends dining with him Monday night . . . Mrs. Irene Caldwell and Albert Warner will share honors at a birthday party to be given tonight at the Albert Warners' home.

Countess Szchenyi In Yacht Colony At Miami Beach

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 29.—Prettiest of the residents among the yacht-living winter colony is the Countess Lazlo Szchenyi, of Washington, who was seen this week dashing off for luncheon in a trim gray suit. The countess' brother, Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt, seldom ventures off in the Sabiha III, since he spends most of his time puttering at the lathes he has had installed on board.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Letter From Mrs. Francis B. Sayre Brings News of Mrs. Anne Archbold

A LETTER from Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, wife of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, brings news of the fabulous Chinese junk in which Mrs. Anne Archbold, of Washington, is cruising the islands southeast of Borneo in search of new plants for a Florida museum.

With Mr. and Mrs. David Fairchild, Mrs. Archbold stopped in Manila aboard the Cheng Ho for several days. She gave a tea on board, at which callers admired the lavishness of the world's largest luxury junk. Mrs. Sayre writes that the boat is built with every convenience, has air cooling a Swedish fireless cooker stove even, as well as several bathrooms, and electric refrigeration. The walls of the dining salon are lined with beautifully carved paneling, and everywhere are exquisite Chinese art objects and porcelain.

Several months ago the Cheng Ho was launched in Hongkong in real Chinese fashion, with a red-robed priest who fired firecrackers over the bow to warn off any evil spirits who might not be taking matters seriously, and flicked holy waters on the decks.

MRS. SAYRE writes that she is studying Spanish and trying to find time for her painting every other morning. She and Mr. Sayre, who was formerly Assistant Secretary of State, spent Christmas in the beautiful mountain resort of Baguio, in the old Mansion house, famous for its charm, simplicity and lovely garden. The government is building a magnificent new residence at Baguio for the Commissioner which probably will be completed about the first of March.

From other sources we hear that our Commissioner lives in great style, with an airplane and a boat, to say nothing of a fleet of cars put at his disposal by the United States Government.

MR. AND MRS. John Caswell will be among the dinner givers before the Thrift Shop ball next Wednesday. At Mrs. Charles M. Lea's tea yesterday Mrs. Caswell was the best-turned-out woman there in a stunning new gray suit with a white stripe, double silver fox furs and a flaring, pirate style gray felt hat.

Others at the tea were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who wore a caracul coat over her dress, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Charles Stanley White and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie. Mrs. Lea is occupying the house on Kalorama road which was formerly the home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe.

OFF FOR HAWAII today are Mr. and Mrs. James L. Karrick. They will go by train to the West Coast with a stop off at New Orleans. The first of May will see them back in Washington again.

THE WAR doesn't seem to have hurt the tourist trade in Nassau. Among the many there from Washington are the Misses Irene, Mary and Louise Sheridan, daughters of Gen. Phil Sheridan, and Henry S. Villard, of the State Department. Edward Gardner has leased a house in Queen street for the season and expects to be joined this week by his niece, Miss Mary Louise Marsh. The Drew Pearsons recently arrived from Miami by private plane. Irving Berlin, the songwriter, Mrs. Berlin, and their daughter, Elizabeth, are at the Jungle Cove Cottage for the rest of the season. Brenda Frazier and "Shipwreck" Kelly, of New York, add the cafe society touch to Nassau at the moment.

COMMANDER AND MRS. "Jerry" Wiltse have been doing the New York night clubs and theaters with the latter's son-in-law and daughter, the John Roosevelts. The reports say that Commander Wiltse will shortly be transferred from Washington for sea duty.

Miss Boardman Fetes Miss Rainer

Miss Mabel Boardman entertained at a luncheon yesterday afternoon at her home on P street in honor of Miss Luise Rainer, who will star in the forthcoming production of "Saint Joan," which opens at the Belasco March 10.

Miss Boardman is national secretary of the American Red Cross. Proceeds of Miss Rainer's performance will be turned over to the Red Cross.

Mrs. E. F. Parham Returns to N. C.

Mrs. Edwin Fuller Parham, after having been the house guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anthony Wadden, left yesterday to join her husband at their home in Henderson, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Parham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Parham at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City last week.

Mrs. Parham came to Washington to attend the luncheon given by Mrs. Wadden last Monday in honor of Mrs. Edward W. Pou, Mrs. John Kerr and Mrs. Don Leslie at the Congressional Club. While here Mrs. Parham was the guest of honor at several parties.

Urgent Relief for France Workers Put Down Their Sewing and Take Up Tea Cups

Embassy Counselor Speaks to Gathering At Workshop

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The tinkle of teacups replaced the sound of sewing yesterday at the work room of the sponsors of Urgent Relief for France, 1536 Connecticut avenue, where several hundred guests gathered at a tea given to acquaint Washingtonians with the work being carried on there.

Posters, used in France at the time of the first World War, decorated the walls and there were pictures of some of the children and elderly people recently evacuated from their homes, to whom the garments are being sent by the workers here. Layetts, shawls, sweaters and other garments which comprise the relief supplies, also were on display . . . all for civilians.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the former United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, received, assisted by Jacques Truelle, Counselor of the French Embassy, in place of Mrs. George Barnett, chairman of the sponsors' committee, who was ill.

Mrs. Carr said that, during February, 1,580 garments had been sent to France in addition to 110 pounds of wool to be knitted by the women there and 200 yards of material to be made up there. Money is also being sent for a sewing machine for the use of the French women.

Money has been sent, too, for the establishment of six social centers where the homeless people can meet, where the women can work, a medical clinic can be conducted and classes can be held for the children. In addition to this, money for another center at the town of Bailleux, has been provided by Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, of Chicago, who was there when the war started. Mrs. Dewey has organized a branch of Urgent Relief organization in Chicago. Another has been formed in Middleburg, Va., by Mme. Cartiere, who already has sent 800 garments.

Mrs. Melvin Hall is in charge of the office here, and Miss Alice Dodge supervises the work room. This is open from 10 to 4:30 daily and always has workers knitting or sewing. A group that has been working two days a week at the French Embassy ever since the war started and has a membership of 70, goes to the workroom every Thursday and sometimes meets there on Monday or Friday also instead of at the embassy.

The Urgent Relief Committee was organized in January. It works with the French organization Secours d'Urgence, founded in France in 1917 by Mme. La Marechale Joffre, for work in the devestated regions and among refugees. Afterward its was continued as a welfare organization. Now it is again called on to do war relief.

Dr. Truelle spoke briefly and commended the use of the word "urgent." When relief is required, it is always urgent, he said, and quoted the old proverb: "He who gives at once, gives twice."

The afternoon's entertainment was provided by Felian Garzia and Mme. Garzia, and those who assist in the Saturday night programs at Montmartre Noctambule —Mrs. Victor Tapke, Justin Lawrie and Mrs. Charles Tuttle. They presented two favorites of Montmartre, "Truffles" and "The Coachman," both original skits. Germaine Johnson, radio artist, sang, wearing a Normandy costume.

Pouring were Mme. Lombard, Mme. Lucet, Mme. Benech and Mme Weiser, of the French Embassy; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and Mrs. Carlos Delmar.

Although the "Westerners" have never had an alumni association, there are hundreds of loyal graduates, some of whom are coming from distant places to attend the dinenr, and it is likely that the organization of an alumni society will result. All former students, whether or not they have been reached by announcements from the committee, are urged to attend and may make reservations at Western today Miss Emily Steuart, one of the 12 members of the faculty who are also graduates of the school, heads the committee.

Blanche Bimont, former teacher of French at the school, who is now retired.

Others on the program will all be distinguished alumni. They are Senator Robert M. La Follette, Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, Kenneth Collings, news writer, who has recently returned from Poland and other sections of the war area; Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford, daughter of Admiral Peary, and noted as the "snow baby," and Ernest Draper, of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve.

Judge Harry C. Blanton, Federal judge of the Eastern Missouri District, will come from there. Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Houghton are coming from Hingham, Mass.

Marines and Army To Be Represented

From the Marine Corps will be Col. and Mrs. Lucian W. Burnham and Col. Robert C. Kilmarten, of Quantico, and, from the Army, Capt. James L. Welchel, of Fort Belvoir.

When the Western High School was first opened in 1893, it had about 300 students and, for a few years, occupied the building now used as the Curtis Grade School. More than 40 years ago it was moved to its present location on Thirty-fifth street between R and Reservoir road. In 1925 a large addition was built, including 28 classrooms on the rear of the structure and a front section for the administrative offices. The auditorium also was rebuilt.

Six years ago there were more than 2,200 students enrolled, and two sessions were conducted daily, but when Woodrow Wilson High School was opened, part of these were transferred there, leaving the enrollment now approximately 1,600.

G. O. P. Women Give Luncheon; 100 Attend

Spring Flowers Decorate Tables; Optimism Prevails

The largest luncheon since the fortnightly luncheon meetings were instituted by the League of Republican Women was that yesterday at the clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street, with more than 100 members and guests attending.

Tables were set in the drawing room, dining room and reception hall. Spring flowers decorated the tables as well as the hats of many of the guests and there was a general air of optimism to which the result of the recent Ohio election had contributed. Over the door of the drawing room hung a jubilant little elephant bearing the inscription "Let's G. O. P.laces."

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, presented as guest speaker Mrs. Wlibur W. Carr, wife of the former United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, who talked on her experiences there.

Mrs. Carr described the beauty of the country, the warm feeling of the people for the United States and for Americans; their tribute to their President Thomas Masaryk, at the time of his death, and the events leading up to Munich and after. She told in detail of the conference between the Czecho-Slovakian President and Hitler the day before the Germans marched into Prague. She made apparent the futility of resistance at that time, with the great munitions works already in German hands.

Mrs. Gann introduced as other guests Mrs. Ralph Harris, Republican National Committeewoman from Kansas; Mrs. Ellis Yost, former National Committeewoman from West Virginia; Mrs. Harry S. New, whose husband served in the Cabinet under two Presidents; Mrs. William N. Doak, whose husband also was a Cabinet member, and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose.

Among the many others at the luncheon were Mrs. Virginia White Speel, National Committeewoman for the District; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, and Mrs. Harve Tibbott, wife of Representative Tibbott, of Mrs. Speel's district in Pennsylvania, who was her guest at the luncheon, and Mrs. Robert H. MacNeill.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 29.

No ball player has ever stomped into the office of this department's boss and demanded that our pay be raised and until such an event occurs we have decided to be quite aloof in the baseball athletes' own salary squabbles with their club owners . . . beyond reporting, of course, the newsworthy facts of the case.

POVICH

By this time it is pretty well established that the ball player, except in exceptional cases, operates from a position in the rear of the eight ball whenever he talks salary with a club owner. He must take what he can get or stay out of baseball, which, in 99 per cent of the cases, is the only livelihood he knows.

The Clark Griffith-Dutch Leonard salary battle, which ended in some sort of a compromise, was interesting in that it was typical of most salary arguments. There was the case of a recent newcomer to the big leagues winning 20 games and losing 8 for a sixth-place club and demanding a salary he believed commensurate with that performance. On the other side was a club owner who persisted in promoting his star too rapidly in the salary scale.

"Sure, he won 20 games last season and he had a great year, but he isn't an established pitcher yet," said Clark Griffith. "I can't pay him the big star's salary he wants unless he shows me he is no flash in the pan. He's got to repeat."

That sounded reasonable enough save for one inconsistency. Cecil Travis last season failed for the first time in his big league career to hit .300. His salary was immediately slashed. Griffith had demanded that Leonard have two good years in a row before he was promoted to the higher-pay brackets, but he didn't wait for Travis to encounter two poor seasons in a row before he slashed his salary. No indeedy.

It is a rare case, anyway, when a big league ball player is overpaid. The club owners are in a position to drive hard bargains and there are few Mr. Bountifuls among them. Ususally, a ball players' pay is a year in arrears anyway. Dutch Leonard, for example, is not being paid his 1940 salary because he will be a 20-game winner in 1940, but because he won 20 games in 1939. He may present the paradox of being better paid this season as a 10-game winner than he was last season as a 20-game performer.

There is no evidence, incidentally, that the Washington Club is any laggard in the matter of paying decent salaries. Clark Griffith has not had any $30,000 wage-earners on his pay roll in contrast to such as the Yankees, Tigers and Red Sox, for only one reason—he hasn't had any stars who were worth that much salary.

When there was a deal in the making for Hank Greenberg a few months ago, Griffith knew that he would have to assume Greenberg's $30,000 salary, but that fact didn't deter him in his efforts to make the trade. He was willing to pay $30,000 to a player like Greenberg.

Buddy Myer, who has taken two consecutive salary slashes from Griffith in the past two seasons, rose to the defense of the Washington Club today in discussing salaries. "I've never had any complaint about the pay I've received from Mr. Griffith. I don't know anybody I'd rather deal with in salary matters.

"The good ball players on the Washington club don't have any squawk about their salaries. They ought to be lucky they're playing for Mr. Griffith. He's one of the few club owners who knows a good ball player when he sees one and he appreciates it. When you play for him, it's strictly up to yourself. You get what you deserve or pretty near it."

There is a salary situation on the Philadelphia Athletics, incidentally, that des not figure to contribute to the harmony of Connie Mack's club. When Mack bought Free Agent Bennie McCoy for $45,000 he agreed also to a $10,000 contract for McCoy. There are better players on the A's team than McCoy who are not getting that sort of money.

Mack's catcher, Frank Hayes, for example, apparently isn't taking any too kindly to the fact that Mack is paying McCoy $10,000 a year. Hayes is holding out, and with reason. He is one of the few catching stars in the American League and the Red Sox have offered $75,000 for him. He has been a star for three years, but he isn't even asking the $10,000 that the half-baked Rookie McCoy is receiving.

Maryland Upsets Washington-Lee, 43-30

Terps' Rally In Last Half Nets Victory

Wake Forest, Duke, North Carolina Win In Conference Play; Terps Meet Devils

By the Associated Press

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 29.—Maryland's Old Liners turned in the only upset of the first round of the nineteenth Southern Conference basketball tourney tonight with a last-half comeback which ousted the third seeded Washington and Lee Generals who twice whipped Maryland during the regular season. The score was 43-30.

In the opener of the night doubleheader, North Carolina defeated Clemson's defending champions as expected, 50-41, while on the matinee program Wake Forest opened with a 40-34 victory over Richmond and Duke scored, 40-35, over The Citadel.

A crowd of more than 3,500 watched Burton Shipley's' charges play rings around the Generals in the closing period, after trailing, 15 to 11, at half-time. The Terps meet Duke tomorrow.

Pinck Leads Attack

The Generals used a slower attack than is exhibited by most quintets in this section. They worked with Dick Pinck as their star through the first half.

Shipley must have told his boys something during the half that they didn't like to hear.

Mearle Duvall and George Dewitt went to work with the opening whistle of the final stanza. Quickly they began to drop in the baskets, and between them rolled up 18 points before another Maryland man could help them in the scoring. The Generals, meantime, had been held to 3 points and Maryland was ahead 29 to 18.

Pershing Mondorff, Old Liner center who hardly played enough in the first half to get warm, had been doing some brilliant guarding in the last half, and with 10 minutes to go he got his scoring habits on. Mondorff got 11 points in those remaining minutes to keep the winning score on the right side.

Sewall, DeWitt Click

Ten minutes after the final period started, Duvall hit the hoop for two points. Dewitt banged one in 45 minutes later. Duvall took his turn, and Maryland was ahead 17 to 15. Thompson sank a free shot for the Generals, when Duvall fouled. Dewitt retaliated with a floor basket. Dick Pinck sank one for the Generals, five minutes of the half having been played. Duvall sank three baskets and then Dewitt caged one and two more free shots.

Mondorff then broke into the scoring column, making good two free chances off Thompson's error. Rea added a basket, Pinck got a basket and a foul, and Mondorff and Thompson alternated on baskets, Maryland leading, 36 to 27, after the exchange and leaving the game sewed up.

Rea Opens Scoring

Washington and Lee got the first point, which Rea miscued on Dobbins, and the free shot was converted. There had been no score in the first two and a half minutes, and it was another two before Rea sank a field basket for Maryland. Dobbins missed a free chance, after another miscue, but followed up on the rebound for a crip. Gary made it 5 to 2, and the Generals led the rest of the half, having a 15 to 11 tally at the intermission. Pinck, of the Generals, led a surge which put them ahead, 13 to 6, seven minutes before the half ended.

Clemson rallied late in the final half and whittled a 20-point mar-

Mrs. Fabyan And McNeill Net Winners

Oklahoman Gains Finals Third Time; Plays Riggs for Title

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 29.—In one of the most masterful exhibitions of forcing tennis ever seen here Oklahoma City's Don McNeill reached the final round of the men's national indoor singles championship today with a 6—4, 7—5, 6—4 victory over Frank Bowden.

The veteran New Yorker had reached the title round for three straight years. All his friends knew this was the one match he wanted to win above all others.

But against the McNeill he met this afternoon Bowden never stood a chance. With every stroke an attacking shot, the country's third-ranking player won the first set by breaking Bowden's booming service in the third game; broke through in the eleventh to take the second, and got the vital advantage right at the start of the third set by taking the opening game on Bowden's service. A sparse gathering of 250 spectators saw the match.

As impressive as McNeill, if not so explosively, was Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan. Favorite for the womens' title, the little Cambridge, Mass., matron dealt an old foe, Katharine Winthrop of Boston, a 6—1, 6—2, defeat. In thus reaching the final, Sarah gave up a total of only 29 points, allowing Miss Winthrop a bare half-dozen in winning the last four games in a row.

Bloodworth Is Favored In Second-Base Battle

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 29.—A three-cornered fight for the second base job on the Washington club will begin tomorrow with Jimmy Bloodworth the preseason favorite to win.

Thirty-six-year-old Buddy Myer looms as Bloodworth's most serious rival with little Edgar Leip strictly the dark horse of the field.

Manager Bucky Harris discretely remains open minded in the matter of the second base position, but it is known that he would gladly settle on the veteran Myer if Myer shows any semblance of return to his once stylish play at the position.

The enthusiasm of Washington fans for the sensational Bloodworth last season was not completely shared by Harris who saw many flaws in the play of the young former fisherman from Appalachicola, Fla.

Bloodworth infused new life into the Washington infield with his sure fielding and superb throwing arm, and the double-play production of the Nats' infield stepped up to the point where they led the league in twin outs.

Bloodworth batted a respectable .289 for the Nats and made a goodly share of extra base hits, but Harris was not enthusiastic about the lad's slowness on the bases. Bloodworth moved with all the alacrity of a rheumatic snail, to exaggerate a bit, and proved a double-play threat at bat as well as in the field.

It was with undiguised delight that Harris today shook hands with the newly arrived Myer who, in contrast to former seasons, appeared the picture of health this spring. A bit heavier, but still sprightly, Myer showed no trace of the stomach ill-

Bob Pastor, Savold Fight May Be Delayed

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 29.—The Bob Pastor-Lee Savold heavyweight fight may be delayed until May, due to lack of open dates at Madison Square Garden, Promoter Mike Jacobs said today after postponing the bout, slated for tomorrow night, because of Savold's grippe.

Savold showed improvement at Medical Arts Hospital, where he was taken yesterday, but Dr. William H. Walker, boxing commission physician, said it would be impossible for him to go through with tomorrow night's scheduled 12-rounder with Pastor.

Moreover, Dr. Walker doubted that Savold would regain his strength in time to go through with the bout on March 15, a possibility suggested by Jacobs. On March 15, Buddy Baer and Valentin Campolo are slated for a ten-round tilt, but Jacobs figured he might make Savold and Pastor the main event and let Baer and Campolo fight the semi-final.

Armstrong Seeks Fourth Ring Crown

Welter Champion Meets Garcia in Ten-Round Bout Tonight

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 29.—Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong, the nearest thing to perpetual motion the ring has seen, apparently is in top shape to attempt a feat never recorded in prizefight history.

Once ruler of three divisions, now the king of the world's 147-pound ranks, the weaving, bobbing Brown Bomber is confident he will annex a fourth title tomorrow night against heavier, hardhitting Ceferino Garcia, claimant of the middleweight crown.

The sturdy Filipino's title may be a cloudy one, and a victory by Armstrong would further befuddle the situation, but there will be action, excitement and drama in this battle.

The rematch finds Garcia, the bolo-busting Filipino, at his natural weight and defending the crown he blasted away from Freddie Apostoli in New York last October.

Tomorrow night's throng, a turnout expected to top 35,000 and thick with Hollywood celebrities, will be watching two fighters who began their climb to fame in this, their home town.

Betting still is 50-50 and take your pick. Garcia probably will have a weight advantage of 12 to 14 pounds, ringside. Armstrong admirers refuse to believe Garcia can whip their man in 10 rounds. A 15-rounder, with the weight difference, might be different.

Man Wanted At Nats' Camp!

By a Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 29.—WANTED FOR QUESTIONING IN PAY ROLL CASE. James Pofahl, 22, 5 feet 11 inches, dark hair, slight cut over left eye; seen recently in Minneapolis; suspected of holding up Clark Griffith for huge sum.

The whereabouts of Pofahl are a thickening mystery in the Washington training camp. The young shortstop for whom Griffith paid the Minneapolis club $35,000, thus far has refused to deliver himself to the Washington team and the Nats' owner is no little piqued.

Salary Is Nub

Salary matters are the nub of Pofahl's absence. Six weeks ago he returned the second of Griffith's offers unsigned. He didn't like the salary terms. Other than that he has said nothing.

"I haven't heard from him for a month," said Griffith tonight, "and I don't care if he never reports. That rookie ought to be grateful he's got a chance to break into the big leagues."

Despite the outburst by Griffith, the Nats' owner would very much like to communicate with Pofahl for the simple reason that the young man looms as a very important member of the Washington club. Teams which pay $35,000 for young infielders don't abandon them over mere salary differences.

But the Pofahl situation is getting critical. Unless he reports to the club by tomorrow, he will be regarded as a holdout and subject to both fine and suspension. He has given the Nats' owner no intimation that he intends to report.

Texas Pro Tops Nelson By 1 Stroke

Fifth Tournament Victory of Year Worth $700; Horne Takes Third Place

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 29.—Smiling Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., professional and golf's leading money winner for 1940, today won the St. Petersburg Open golf tournament for his fifth victory of the winter campaign.

Adding two par rounds of 71 to his opening 69, Demaret won the 54-hole tournament with 211, nosing out Byron Nelson, National Open champion, of Toledo, Ohio, by one stroke. First prize money was $700 and increased Demaret's links' earnings for the year to more than $6,000.

Nelson Second

Nelson, three strokes off the pace set by E. J. Harrison, Little Rock, Ark., and Demaret through the first 36 holes, blazed in with a 69, two under par, for 212, and took $450 second money.

Nelson had rounds of 71, 72 and 69.

Fourth place was shared by Jim Turnesa, Providence, R. I.; Ben Hogan, White Plains, N. Y.; Harrison, and Sam Snead, the defending champion from Shawnee, Pa., with 214's.

Turnesa set a new competitive record for the Lakewood links with a 5 under par on the final round. Hogan finished with a 69, Snead with a 71 and Harrison a 74.

Third Straight

The victory was Demaret's third in succession, following his conquests at Houston, Tex., in the Western Open and at New Orleans in the $10,000 New Orleans Open, and his fifth in nine tournaments this year. He took first money at Oakland, Calif., and San Francisco.

The tournament came to a spectacular close before a gallery of more than 3,000 as both Demaret and Nelson put their second shots on the home green, the former 4 feet from the flag and the latter 8 feet away. Nelson sank his putt and Demaret had to drop his to avoid a tie and a playoff. His putt was straight as a die and plunked into the cup.

Wilfred Wehrle, Racine, Wis., was low amateur with 221.

Jimmy DeMarest, Houston, Tex., 69, 71, 71—211, $700.
Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio, 71, 72, 69—212, $450.

Ben Hogan, White Plains, N. Y., 72, 73, 69—214, $210.
E. J. Harrison, Little Rock, Ark., 68, 72, 74—214, $210.
Sam Snead, Shawnee, Pa., 70, 73, 71—214, $210.
John Revolta, Evanston, Ill., 72, 72, 71—215, $140.

Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio, 74, 70, 76—220, $30.

G. W. Points For St. John's, Georgetown

Nearing the close of their season, George Washington University's basketers are putting on a final drive to wind up the campaign with victories over two important, competent rivals, St. John's, of Brooklyn, and Georgetown.

The Colonials have won 13 games and lost 4 in a stiff intersectional schedule, and victories in these last two contests would give Coach Bill Reinhart's crew the undisputed District title and a highly successful record.

Tomorrow night the Colonials entertain St. John's, of Brooklyn, one of the ranking eastern teams whose record parallels G. W.'s, at the Eastern High School gym, Seventeenth and East Capitol streets northeast. St. John's is one of the leaders in the fast New York race and probably will rate a slight favorite to beat George Washington.

The Redmen have defeated such recognized opponents as Temple, City College of New York, Manhattan, Niagara, Bradley Tech and Loyola of Chicago. Their most recent defeat was a 40-38 loss to unbeaten N. Y. U., which stamped the Violets as city champions of New York and ranked St. John's a razor-edge second.

Comiskeys to Keep Chisox, Court Rules

Judge O'Connell Denies Bank Permission To Ask Bids for Sale of Chicago Club Founded by Famous 'The Old Roman'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 29.—One of baseball's most famous combinations, the Comiskeys and the Chicago White Sox, won the biggest victory of its 40-year diamond history today—in the drabness of a courtroom.

Probate Judge John F. O'Connell, emphasizing that the names Comiskey and White Sox "are in themselves a part of Chicago's life," denied the First National Bank permission to ask bids for the sale of the club founded by one of the most famous names the sport has ever known, Charles A. Comiskey, "The Old Roman."

The bank, as executor of the estate of J. Louis Comiskey, who died last July, asked permission to call for bids on the grounds that baseball is a "hazardous business." From the filing January 18 of that petition, the Comiskeys, led by the widow, Mrs. Grace Reidy Comiskey, served notice they would fight to the last to hold the club in the family name.

They climaxed that fight today with all the hustle and scrap of the team which Manager Jimmy Dykes now is training in California for its fortieth American League season and fortieth under the Comiskey banner.

"There is no showing, as the bank claims, that there is necessity for the sale of the White Sox stock," said Attorney Roy Egan, who with Thomas J. Sheehan, represented the family. "There is no showing before this court that the assets are insufficient to meet claims. And we'll show this court that if they are insufficient, the Comiskey family will produce the money to meet expenses. The outlook for the club is bright. Under Lou Comiskey it weathered the worst depression in the history of this country and is coming out of it—as shown by the 1939 season when the popularity of night baseball paid for a great lighting system."

The bank, through Attorney Paul M. Godehn, said the petition did not necessarily mean the club would be sold, but Judge O'Connell, said he "frankly considered it one for sale" despite Godehn's arguments that the bank merely wished to ascertain the worth of the 7,450 shares of club stock. Godehn argued that assets other than the club were hard to liquidate and not enough to meet inheritance and Federal taxes, a contention disputed at length by Egan.

Henry Picard's Third Son Is Back Of Withdrawal

Lebanon, Pa., Feb. 29 (AP).—The leap year stork dropped in on the Henry Picard family today and thereby cleared up the mystery of why the Nation's leading money golfer last year passed up the $5,000 International Four-Ball Tournament at Coral Gables, Fla., starting Sunday.

"I thought I'd stay up here and meet my new arrival," Picard chuckled. The new arrival made the third son for the Picards and Henry confidently predicted "there'll be three golfers in the family."

Bruins Trounce Canadiens, 4 to 2

Montreal, Feb. 29 (U.P.).—The Boston Bruins bounced back into a first place tie in the National Hockey League tonight by scoring a 4-to-2 victory over the Montreal Canadiens while the first place New York Rangers lost to the Hawks.

Goals by Porky Dumart and Milt Schmidt in the third period won the game for the Bruins.

Pytlak Refuses Cleveland Offer, Is Told He Can Stay Home

Yanks Sign Joe Gordon For $12,500

Newsom Announces Detroit Will Win Pennant; Coscarart Confers With McPhail

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 29.—While fellow members of the Cleveland Indians baseball team are training in Fort Myers, Fla., Catcher Frank Pytlak shoveled snow today and said he would not accept a 35 per cent pay cut.

"The Indians gave me an increase of 15 per cent last season and now they want me to give it all back—and then some," the 31-year-old backstop told reporters at his Buffalo home.

"This business of giving back to the Indians is not going to take place," he added, "because I feel I deserve as much money as last year. It wasn't my fault that I was forced out by injuries so much last year."

Identifying himself as a holdout, Pytlak said he has not heard from the club for two weeks and has no intention of going to Cleveland to discuss matters with Club President Alva Bradley.

Cleveland, Feb. 29.—President Alva Bradley of the Cleveland Indians said today if Frankie Pytlak, holdout catcher, doesn't like the salary offered, he may continue staying home.

"We've cut him, you bet your life we cut him, but not any 35 per cent," declared Bradley. "Maybe that's his strange arithmetic.

"We offered him a fair salary and if he doesn't want it, he can stay home. I think we've paid him so much in the past, he can afford to stay home. We probably paid him too much."

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 29.—After a short chat with Manager Joe McCarthy, during which he agreed to salary terms for 1940, Second Baseman Joe Gordon of the Yankees said today that he would be out in uniform for practice tomorrow, even though he officially isn't due to report until next Monday, when the second squad appears.

Gordon, signed for $12,500, a $4,000 raise over his last year's salary, looked in fine condition.

Jimmy Foxx, of the Red Sox, was another visitor to the Yankee camp today. He is many pounds lighter than last year, and apparently untroubled by the sinus infection which has harassed him in the past.

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 29.—Four days late and 12 pounds overweight, Louis (Buck) Newsom, talkative right-handed pitcher, arrived at the Detroit Tigers training base today and announced that his team—and not the Yankees—would win the American League pennant.

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 29.—Infielders and outfielders reported today to virtually complete the roster of Cincinnati Reds in training.

First in uniform, over protests of Manager Bill McKechnie, was Eddie Joost, who won his argument that he be permitted to start work a day ahead of time. Other arrivals Billy Myers, shortstopfi Third Baseman Don Lang and Outfielders Lee Gamble and Vince DiMaggio.

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 29.—Johnny Allen, one of the few unsigned Cleveland Indians, will conduct future contract negotiations with Manager Oscar Vitt, C. C. Slapnicka, tribe vice president, said today.

Slapnicka admitted he and Allen were deadlocked on the papers for 1940, with Allen refusing a bonus clause. So Slapnicka asked Vitt to seek a compromise that will bring the fiery right-handed pitcher to the spring training camp here. After an arm operation, Allen had a disappointing 1939 season, winning nine against seven losses.

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 29.—Pete Coscarart, the Dodgers' holdout second baseman, reached camp today and will confer on salary with Boss Larry MacPhail. The differences between the player and the club is not known, but Coscarart described it as not much and intimated he soon would sign.

Today's workout was featured by a five-inning game between the Dressens and the McGrews, and won by Dressens, 9 to 8. Casey and Nahem pitched for the Dressens, Kimball and Carleton for the McGrews. Ripple, Moore, Phelps and Chapman hit homers.

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 29.—Manager Joe Cronin and Slugger Jimmy Foxx formed the welcoming committee that greeted the Red Sox Special when it pulled into this training camp late today. The manager has scheduled the opening workout for tomorrow morning and warned his battery candidates that it would be "strenuous."

On Fishing

Anglers all over the world will welcome the formation of the International Game Fish Association, for even though sports anglers fish mostly with little thought of record fish, if one happens to be their lot they want it recorded and recognized. And that, in addition to being a tribunal of last resort in regards to tackle and angling ethics, is what this new organization hopes to be able to do.

ACKERMAN

Back in 1934-1935 the Salt Water Anglers of America tried unsuccessfully to bring about some sort of order in the chaotic tackle regulations, because old angling clubs couldn't see why they should accept, in place of their own well-tried rules, those of a club just organized. Possibly they were right, who knows? We believe they were just a few years too soon, and in addition didn't provide quite enough incentive to bring about a change.

The International Game Fish Association proposes to classify catches of record fish solely on line weight. A procedure, that in the last two years has become the generally accepted way, because if the angler uses other than rods and reels balanced to the line he is only penalizing himself.

Not only because it is starting out on a real basis, but for the reason that it is dedicated to individual anglers, as well as clubs, all over the world, there is every reason to believe this organization will succeed where others have failed.

Headquarters are at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City, and will provide a central place for discussion and decision on tackle rules and catches and a rich source for scientific data on the large oceanic creatures that because of their size, can only be studied on their own grounds.

Dr. William King Gregory, curator of ichthyology, and one of the world's leading scientists, is president of the newly formed association. Michael "Mike" Lerner and Van Campen Heilner, two of the foremost sportsmen in the angling world, are vice presidents.

Mr. Lerner, getting ready now for an expedition on March 18 to South American waters, has been the leader in four other expeditions for the study of big game fishes for the American Museum, where he is field associate of the department of ichthyology. He is known well and loved by sportsmen everywhere, not only because of his many real accomplishments in angling, but mostly for his keen interest in every one with whom he comes in contact.

Van Campen Heilner has been introduced and is well known to most anglers through his "Adventures in Angling," "Salt Water Fishing" and "A Book on Duck Shooting." He has earned his vast knowledge by shooting in many lands and fishnig most of the waters of the globe.

Francesca LaMonte, associate curator of ichthyology and scientific leader of three of the Lerner expeditions, is secretary. Miss LaMonte is better known to anglers for her ever-ready help and her acceptance of trying to keep angling records without any too much help.

In following columns there will be much of interest to all anglers about the International Game Fish Association. The regulations, well worth clipping and saving.

Stewart's 130-Pound Champs Enter Post-A.A.U. Tourney

To Compete in 145-Pound Class in Annual Play Starting Wednesday in Heurich Gym

Stewart Photographers, last year's 130-pound class champions in the District A. A. U. tournament, sponsored by The Washington Post, apparently aren't bothered about the elimination of their class in this year's tourney.

For last night the members of the Stewart linup marched in The Post sport's department in a body and applied for entry blanks in the 145-pound class, that with the unlimited and girls unlimited comprise the only classes in the event this year.

The boys have all grown a little since last year and may offer a real threat to Merrick Boys Club, defending champions in the 145-pound class.

Several teams of the lighter class may follow Stewart's example and move up and take a crack at the heavier fives. And in turn some of the teams have outgrown and outweighed the 145-pound bracket may move into the unlimited competition.

With the Rockville girl's champions broken up, there will also be more chance for the lighter girls teams in the class.

The Washington Post trophies are being prepared for the presentation while the members of the winning teams will receive gold medals and all members of the runners-up, silver medals.

With the original entry deadline moved ahead to Monday night, a record entry is expected for the three classes, with the newly organied Recreation League a big aid in creating interest in the city championship.

Entries close Monday night at midnight at the Washington Boys Club, 230 C street northwest.

The opening games will be played Wednesday night, March 6, in Heurich gymnasium.

Cox Kicks, Wins Decision

A new kind of a drop kick delivered while he lay flat on his back gave Joe Cox the championship of Lou Plummer last night at Turner's Arena before a wrestling house of 1,300.

Lou had just administered three of his Grade A body slams to the puffing and wheezing Joe and was about to fall on him for the kill when Joe unleashed a left foot to Lou's jaw and dropped him in his tracks. He then got up and sat on Plummer while the referee counted him out.

Abie Coleman and Jim Coffield waltzed to a draw in the semifinal and had their real fight after time was up. While they traded left hooks in the ring, the fans hurled peanuts and cutting remarks at the duo.

Tommy O'Toole defeated Tommy Rae in 24 minutes, Cliff Olson downed Joe Maynard in 13½ minutes, and Ralph Garibaldi beat Jim Parker in 15 minutes.

N. P. S. Beats U. S. H. A. Five, 40-31, for Title

Overcoming an early lead run up by the United States Housing Authority five, National Park Service unleashed a scoring attack that gave them a 40-31 victory and the championship of the Interior Department Recreation Association League last night before a "standing room only" house at the Interior gymnasium.

N. P. S., winners of the first half of the league, played the second half champions off their feet in the late stages of the game.

The battle developed into a scoring duel between Joe Walters and Don Frye, of the Housing team. Frye, with 15 points, had the edge on the N. P. S. forward, who accounted for 12 points.

Housing's early lead was short-lived, N. P. S. tightening down and holding their opponents to just 10 points in the first half. The cup denoting the championship will be presented N. P. S. at a banquet.

Monday Fight Card in Arena Is Completed

Scott-Fiorentino Meet In 10-Round Feature; Ivy-Pitts Top Prelims

With new faces as the keynote, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday announced his complete card for Monday night's boxing show featuring Nick Fiorentino, rugged Philadelphia Italian, and Buddy Scott, Washington heavyweight, in a ten-round match at Turner's Arena.

With Scott, beaten only four times in some 80 fights, due here tomorrow night to train Saturday at 12:30 at the Huron gym, Promoter Turner has rounded up what he considers a "corking good" fistic program.

The semi-windup will be an eight rounder in which Bobby (Poison) Ivy, protege of Bat Battalino, and claimant of the New England featherweight championship, will make his bow against Marcus Pitts.

Mayon Padlo, featherweight stablemate of Fiorentino, also debuts in a six-rounder against Eddie Finazzo, of Baltimore. Padlo has engaged in 37 pro fights, has won 33, had three draws and lost only one decision.

Al Gilbert, the former sailor boy, meets Eddie Miller, Baltimore lightheavyweight, clash in a six, while Artie Johnson, Baltimore colored fighter, opposes Buddy Holmes, of Washington, in a four-rounder.

Three Records Threatened In C. U. Games on Saturday

Marks for Mile, Rector 1,000 and Abbey 50 Expected to Fall as Track Stars Invade City

Three records are almost certain to be broken tomorrow night when Catholic University holds its seventh annual Indoor Track Meet for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund.

The records expected to fall are all in the feature events—the Maki Mile, the Rector's 1,000 and the Abbey Club 50. The record for the mile at the C. U. gym is 4:34, established by Tommy Fields, of Maryland. With such stars as Glenn Cunningham, Archie San Romani, Gene Venzke, Joe McCluskey, Luigi Beccali, and Mason Chronister entered, some 20 seconds is expected to be sliced off the old standard.

The mark for the Rector's 1000 is 2 minutes 20 4-5 seconds, established by Bill Morse, of Duke. Jim Kehoe, of Maryland, who will defend tomorrow night, last year ran it in 2:21 but because of his record breaking feats in the 880 this year, the Terp ace is expected to hang up a new record.

The last of the three features, the Abbey 50-yard dash, has withstood the assaults of star sprinters for eight years. The present record of 5.4 seconds was set by C. U.'s great Johnny Lyons in 1932. The closest to Lyons has been Villanova's Joe Maher, who won last year and will be back tomorrow night.

Maher ran the 50 in 5.5 seconds last year but because of the presence of Navy's Leon Chabot, the Villanovan is expected to crack the present mark.

Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, director of athletics, announced there are still plenty of seats left. Reserved tickets sell for $1.50 while general admissions are $1. Reservations may be made by calling the C. U. gym, Michigan 6000, or downtown at Henderson's, Fourteenth and New York avenue.

Goodwill Boys' Club To Have Ball Team

Future Joe Di Maggios, Babe Ruths, etc., are being called for by Richard Stanley, newly elected coach of the baseball team of the Boys' Club of Goodwill Industries.

Spring training will begin tomorrow. Edward Herl is captain of the team, which has the following holdovers from last year: Pete Duncan, George Duncan, Ward Tilburg, Austin Knight and Edward Herl.

Red Wings Sign Two

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 29 (AP).—Mike Ryba, veteran right-handed hurler, and First Baseman Harry Davis, of the International League's Rochester Red Wings, have returned signed contracts to President Oliver French.

French said both players received salary increases.

BETTY HICKS

By the Associated Press

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 29.—Nineteen-year-old Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., stole the spotlight today in the South Atlantic Women's Golf tournament with a subpar performance in defeating Laddie Irwin, of Montclair, N. J., 6 and 5.

Miss Hicks advanced into the semifinals with Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, whom she plays tomorrow, and Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., and Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., who play in the other bracket.

Yesterday red-haired Patty, the former national champion who is making a whale of a comeback after a layoff caused by an appendix operation, shot a 2 under men's par 35 on the outgoing 9. Today Miss Hicks did it in 34, and was 4 under fours for the 14 holes of the match.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 29.—Cecil Travis moved into the Nats' batting practice today for the first time this season and astounded both the Nats' bosses and the spectators with his hitting . . . With no trace of the fact that he hadn't seen a pitched ball since last September, Travis boomed the ball all over the premises, evoking from Clark Griffith the observation that "that fellow can hit in the dark" . . . Travis is almost unrecognizable as the lean, thin-shanked fellow who has been with the Nats for six years . . . He is 20 pounds heavier and doesn't want to lose a pound . . . Bennie Bengough was forced to retire shortly after the start of the day's workout when a foul tip banged against his knee . . . The tone of the workouts will be improved considerably tomorrow when the regular infielders and outfielders take their first practice . . . Arrivals today were Buddy Myer, Johnny Welaj and Joe Mellendeck . . . Jimmy Wasdell is the camp's pocket billiard champion, succeding Jimmy DeShong who is now in the minors . . . Buddy Myer operates an electrical appliance shop in Jackson, Miss., and is branching out as a realtor with 25 houses in the process of building . . . Sixten eyears in the big leagues have contributed considerable to Myer's exchequer, particularly the $15,000 salary he drew after winning the batting championship in 1935 . . . The Nats will be asked to send at least two of their promising rookies to Tampa for the Finnish Relief Fund All-Star rookie game on March 17, and Sidney Hudson is certain to be one of the pair . . . There was distinct improvement today in Buddy Lewis' fly catching and the Nats' bosses are agreed that he will learn to play the outfield without undue delay.—POVICH.

Roosevelt Plays Western, Central Faces Eastern Tonight

Tournament For School Crown Opens

Winners to Clash Tomorrow Night; Newmyer Leads Scorers for Year

By Bill Burnett

One of the last two steps toward settling the 1940 basketball championship of the District public high schools will be taken tonight at Tech gym, where a doubleheader starts the second annual title tournament.

For the first time this season, a packed house is expected to be in attendance when Roosevelt and Western launch the final round robin at 7:30. Approximately one hour later Central and Eastern will come to grips. The winners of the two games will clash tomorrow night for the crown, while the losers meet in the first half of a twin bill for the consolation.

Unlike 1939, when the tournament was first introduced to the inter-high series, the winner of the event starting tonight is not a foregone conclusion. Last year Eastern ended its season without a loss and promptly went through the tournament the same way. It took its third consecutive title.

Eastern Arrived

This year the perennially powerful White Tide is in the championship round by accident, mostly. A basket by young Neil Craig in the waning seconds of an overtime playoff game with Wilson was the accident that accounted for the Tide's presence.

Roosevelt is the hot favorite now. Its hardy lads, the same with which it lost out in the fifth round of last year's affair, have yet to be beaten by an interhigh club. Yet it has had several close squeaks to date and might conceivably run into an "off" night that would give Western an opening victory.

Western and Central are strictly the "dark horses" in the tourney, despite the fact Central won its way into the round legitimately. A late splurge turned the trick, but the Mt. Pleasanters weren't forced into a playoff to gain a position.

Tide, Riders Choices

With Central and Western the unknown quantities, Roosevelt and Eastern appear the likely winners of tonight's games. In Bob Custer, Eastern boasts the highest scorer among the interhigh group to date. He has tallied 178 points in 17 games for a 10.47 average. That gives him fifth place in District schoolboy scoring.

Instead of one ace scorer, Roosevelt has three who can hit the ring from any portion of the floor. Hymie Perlo ranks ninth in Washington with an average of 8.61 points per game. Ernie Travis is tenth with 8.47, and George West is 15th with 7.94.

Tops on the list which includes all schools in the District and immediate vicinity is Armand Newmyer, Sidwell Friends star, whose 127 points in 11 games gives him an average of 11.54 per game.

Brewers Meet Troy-Celtics In Play-Offs

Scheduled to close their regulation American Basketball League season against the Baltimore Clippers in one end of a tripleheader at Convention Hall, Philadelphia, tomorrow night, the Washington Heurich Brewers yesterday were pointing for the opening of the 1939-1940 American Basketball League's championship play-off series against the Troy-Celtics at Heurich gymnasium Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The Sphas and the Brewers currently are tied for the American League's lead and the result of the championship race hinges around tomorrow night's games. In the event they finish the regular American League season in a deadlock, a play-off game will be arranged for the title which will not conflict with the championship play-off series.

President John J. O'Brien and other American Basketball League officials will be in attendance for Sunday's game and O'Brien has volunteered to toss up the first ball.

The New York Jewels, twice defeated by the Brewers last Sunday, will be the defending champions.

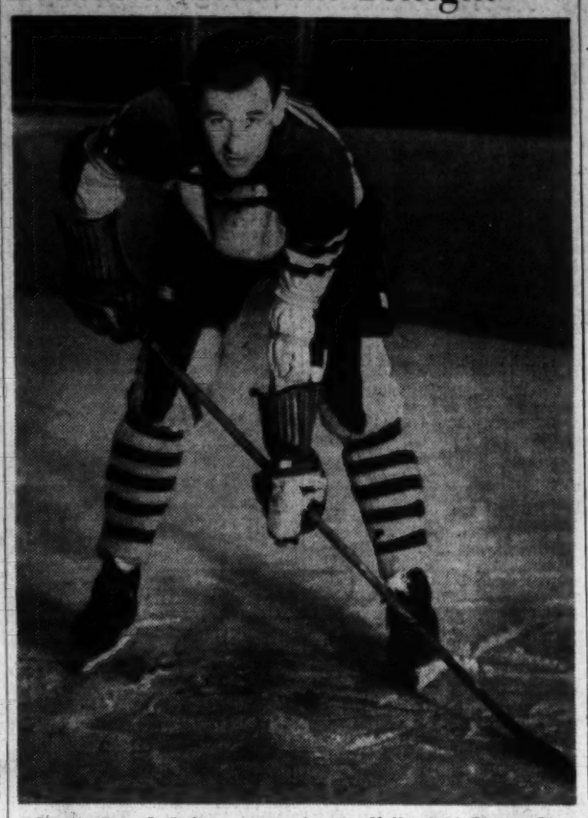
Eagles Entertain Vallyfield Braves at Stadium Tonight



Here's Jean LaPointe, center for the Valleyfield Braves Ice Hockey Club, who meet the Washington Eagles tonight at 8:30 in Riverside Stadium. Jean, formerly with the Baltimore Orioles, weighs 165 and is 21 years old

D. C. Club in Drive for 2d Place In Eastern League; Scant Hopes for 1st

The Valleyfield Braves, defending Provincial Senior Hockey League champion, will be the attraction tonight when the Washington Eagles skate back into the Eastern Amateur Hockey League picture at Riverside Stadium, 8:30 o'clock.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Eagles are to entertain the Jersey Skeeters, of River Vale, N. J.

The Valleyfield Braves reported here at noon yesterday and unhesitatingly predicted an upset of the Eagles tonight.

"We're a far finer team than our losses to River Vale and Baltimore indicate," Manager Emile Perron imparted upon his arrival here, "and we'll prove it against the Eagles tomorrow night.

"We had just experienced long bus rides and were pretty well tired out for the River Vale and Baltimore matches. We'll be well rested and in full stride for the Eagles."

The Eagles, who boast a margin over every Eastern League club this season, have lost three of their four matches to invading Canadian teams thus far this season and will be out to improve their record tonight. Whereas they were victorious over the McIntyre Mines, they have been beaten by the Toronto Goodyears, Montreal Royals and Port Colborne Sailors.

Coach Redvers Mackenzie yesterday announced that the Eagles currently are pointing for a second place finish, although he has not entirely given up hopes for a pennant.

"We'll be out bearing down every minute just in case something happens to Baltimore," he disclosed, "and the recent collapse of the New York Rovers proves that anything can happen in ice hickey."

The Eagles, despite wholesale injuries received in the Baltimore match last Tuesday night, will return their full strength against Valleyfield tonight. Paul Courteau, Bruce McKillop and Ross Knipfel, all injured in the Baltimore match, will be back on the ice.

Lackawanna Wins Palm Beach Purse on Turf Course

2-Mile Test Is Longest Of Meeting

Irving Anderson Rides 3 Winners; Jockey Flinchum Lodges Foul Claim

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 29.—J. F. Quinn's Lackawanna, a confirmed lover of the turf course, today won the Palm Beach Purse, longest race of the season decided on the grass. At the end of the grueling 2-mile test, the $4.10 for $2 favorite had only a nose margin over G. L. Weiss' Cave Hill, while H. N. Lape's Wise Will was beaten a length and a half for the place.

Irving Anderson, riding star of the afternoon, chalked up his third victory of the card astride Lackawanna, which covered the distance in 3:29 3-5.

Apprentice Jack Flinchum, who rode Wise Will, lodged a double foul claim, the boy charging that both the winner and second horse had him wedged in between them during the drive home. The stewards dismissed the objection.

Takes Early Lead

Wise Will took a very wide early lead over Cave Hill and Bailiwick. Passing the stands the first time Ruperto Donoso, the Chilean jockey on Bailiwick, seemed to think he had reached the finnish line. Then he began riding again, but Bailiwick was too tired an animal to keep in a contending position.

Cave Hill and Lackawanna began to close in on Wise Will before the end of a mile and a half. The trio fought it out through the stretch, with Lackawanna outlasting Cave Hill in the closing strides.

Two apprentice boys—Merrill Packer and Charlie Durando—became victims of upset stomachs after riding in the fifth race. Both canceled their remaining mounts of the day.

Winner by Length

Rapid Way, after being outrun in the early stages, settled into his stride in time to record a length triumph in the 6½ furlongs of the fifth contest. The Whiskaway colt drove to the wire a length in advance of Liberty Ann, the favorite, with Dahomey four lengths farther back. Equistone shot to the front, was eased back by Meade when Picture Play came up with a rush, then regained command entering the stretch. The colt stopped in the last furlong as Rapid Way and Liberty Ann took up the issue. The winner was a $9.70 for $2 shot.

Willie Rodriguez led the winners with 6 points.

Clear Skies Predictions Cheer Owners of Anita Speed Horses

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 29.—Predictions of clear weather and a fast racing strip Saturday brought cheer to owners of speed candidates in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap, but it will take more than mere forecasts to ease their anxiety.

Entries for the mile and one-fourth event are due to be announced around noon tomorrow.

A downpour during last night drenched the track, and it was muddy when workouts were held this morning, but Dr. Irving Krick, the track's official weatherman, declared there would be no more rain today or tomorrow. His forecast did not go into Saturday's possibilities. Horsemen figured if they could escape damp weather for two days the third would take care of itself.

Jockey Leon (Buddy) Haas, brought here from Florida by C. S. Howard to ride Kayak II, winner of the 1939 Sanita Anita Handicap, got acquainted with the Argentine for the first time this morning. He took him for a gallop, but did not ask for a real test.

Howard's other star, Seabiscuit, surprised the clockers with a nice workout in the mud with the "double dogs" up. The Biscuit did five-eighths in 1:00 2-5, which is good traveling for the 7-year-old on such a track.

A notorious distaste for mud belongs to Seabiscuit. Kayak can go under any conditions.

The probable lineup for the big race remains about the same. The Binglin Stable may send Ra Ii postward with Don Mike, although some horsemen believe the stable's new Argentine is not ready for the big race.

The field, as figured today, probably will include the two Howard candidates, the two Binglin steeds, Whichcee, Specify, Heelfly, Can't Wait, War Plumage, Wedding Call, Royal Crusader, Kantan and possibly one or two others.

Widener Cup Crowd May Bet Million

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 29.—Although there isn't a single outstanding horse in the $50,000 added Widener Cup race Saturday, Hialeah Park is looking confidently forward to its first million-dollar pari-mutuel "handle" since the boom days.

The track's modern single-day record has been broken the last two week-ends, and reached $905,412 for the Flamingo Stakes last Saturday.

The "handle" might have gone over the million-dollar mark then except that the plant wasn't prepared to accommodate the 24,267 customers and hundreds were shut out at the betting windows. It's a safe wager that the mutuel men will be equipped this Saturday to receive all the money the crowd can shove through the wickets.

There isn't a horse in the barns to approach last year's attractions such as Stagehand and War Admiral, yet the top daily amount last season was $744,046.

Among 16 possible starters in the Widener, the experts favor Leo J. Marks' Many Stings, but most of them concede it's a wide-open proposition, and that should be an added spur to the betting.

Many Stings took several other Widener candidates into camp in winning the $10,000 McLennan Memorial two weeks ago, but that was the 5-year-old gelding's first stake triumph in 38 starts.

Exchange Board To Enforce Ban On Outside Trade

New York, Feb. 29 (AP).—Governors of the New York Stock Exchange have voted to enforce a ban on dealings by members in its listed stocks on out-of-town exchanges.

The action was directed against what the exchange called "making a public market" in its listed securities on other exchanges by member firms. Commission business handled for customers will not be affected.

Members and partners of member firms are liable to suspension or expulsion for violation of the rule.

The shift of business out of Wall Street to the other markets has been blamed by brokers on the New York State transfer taxes and the growth of unlisted trading in stock exchange issues on out-of-town exchanges with the permission of the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission.

Short Week Cuts Bank Clearings

New York, Feb. 29 (AP).—The sharp decline shown in bank transactions this week compared with the week previous and the same week of last year was again due to the disparity in the number of business days included in the respective weeks.

Total clearings for the five days ended February 28, for 22 leading cities reporting to Dun & Bradstreet, amounted to $4,757,741,000, compared with $5,438,523,000 for the corresponding six-day week a year ago, a decrease of 12.5 per cent.

The aggregate for the current short week fell $363,012,000 from the amount for the preceding full week.

Mesta to Erect Forge Shop At Homestead

Expansion Will Help U. S. 'Rearm in Case Of Emergency'

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Feb. 29.—The Mesta Machine Co. announced today it will build a heavy forge shop at its Homestead plant at a cost of $1,000,000 to help the Nation rearm "in case of emergency."

In an annual report to stockholders, President Lorenz Iverson said:

"When finally the European crisis developed into actual declaration of war and our Government was doing everything within its power to prepare the country for any emergency that might arise, your board of directors unanimously decided that an addition to the company's forging facilities should be provided since this would be of greatest value to our Nation in case of emergency."

The forge shop, to include a 6,000-ton forging press, will be located in a remodeled storage building. Other equipment includes heating and heat-treatment furnaces, and additional machine tool equipment for finishing forged steel.

The shop will be completed in "the late spring."

Wheat Prices Ease at Close; Trade Erratic

Early Gains Erased; Fractional Losses Rule Market

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 29.—Buyers and sellers took turns sending small lot orders into the rather turbulent wheat pit today as prices wavered nervously over a 1½-cent raise and closed ½ to ⅞ cent lower than yesterday.

An early fractional rise was followed by a slump of almost a cent. Then the market advanced 1¼ to 1½ cents to new highs for the day, only to react again before the close.

This unsettled trade reflected pressure of loan wheat coming to market, lagging domestic demand for wheat and flour and virtual stagnation of export business as well as a British government summary of the wheat situation.

On the constructive side were absence of moisture in the Southwest, approach of the windy March season of crop scares, reports of wheat damage in Russia and other sections of Europe and war news. A decline of more than a cent in wheat at Buenos Aires at one stage caused some early selling here.

The lower close carried May wheat to 1.03@1.02⅞ and July to 1.01@1.00⅞. Corn was unchanged to ¼ cent off; May, 56⅞@56¾; July, 57¼. Oats, ⅛ lower to ¼ higher. Rye, ⅛ to ½ down, and lard ⅝ lower.

Statements of Government farm officials, in which they expressed themselves as puzzled by recent independent strength of wheat and cited bearish market statistics, drew much attention. They pointed out that the prospective domestic and world States prices are substantially above world prices, and are therefore over an export basis except so far as subsidy operations permit sales abroad. Grain men here asserted domestic crop conditions and the war situation in Europe and the Orient apparently have been the basis of recent buying of wheat, with immediate supply and demand requirements relegated to the background.

Corn prices fluctuated within one of the narrowest ranges on record. Net changes throughout the session did not exceed ¼ cent.

Britain to Take All of Canada's Crude Aluminum

By the Canadian Press

Montreal, Feb. 29.—Aluminum, vital to the empire's war machine, will flow to Great Britain from Canada in ever-increasing quantities between now and the end of 1941.

Announcements made simultaneously last night here and in London disclosed that the British ministry of supply has purchased the entire exportable surplus of the Aluminum Co. of Canada for the remainder of 1940 and for 1941.

(Aluminum of Canada is controlled by Aluminum.)

It was also disclosed that the aluminum firm, Canada's main producer, has embarked on a wide program of expansion.

The Montreal announcement, made by President R. E. Powell, of the Aluminum Co., said the base price will be equal approximately to that current in Canada at the outbreak of the war—about 20 cents a pound. The deal, involving "practically all" of the firm's crude aluminum production, will not encroach on Canada's domestic demands for the metal.

Used car sales for the first 20 days of the current month numbered 86,355 compared with 71,524 in the comparable period a year ago.

Closes Month on a Calm Note as SEC Begins Its Public Utility Integration; February's Volume Poorest Since 1921

New York, Feb. 29.—Whatever March may hold for the stock market, February went out like a lamb. With the extra day of the leap year month, coming once in four years and with five planets in line, which happens once in a lifetime, and with the SEC finally starting its process of integrating the public utilities after two years' delay—and seven years of discussion—it seems as though there should have been a few rockets and flares.

But Wall Street took the combination in its stride. After all, it has been taking a depression, a war or two and a considerable amount of tinkering with economic laws in the last few years, so why should it lose its calm now?

February a Calm Month

It had plenty of calm in the month of February, the record shows. The volume of stock business on the big board was only 13,470,755 shares, making it the poorest February since 1921. As a basis for comparison, February's total in 1937 was 50,248,010 and in 1936 it was 60,885,392.

Price changes for the month were in keeping with the light trading. The composite average advanced 0.56 point during the 29 days and throughout the month only 1.80 points separated the composite high and the composite low. The rail shares were virtually changed during the period, their average gaining 0.01 point, while the industrials added 0.80. It is said by some of the seers that investors and financial interests generally are waiting for November, but if they wait in this manner it is questionable how many of them will still be off relief.

The market today made one more day of minor changes. On a volume of 622,640 shares the average lost 0.04 point. Steels did fairly well and metals were firm while utilities formed the softest group.

Price Changes Small

Price changes of the speculative leaders were small, in accordance with recent market behaviour. The lower priced issues continued to dominate the tape, the most active being Seaboard Air Line, which sells for 25 cents a share. Loft held near the new high it made on Wednesday, but closed off a fraction. Pan American held the lead in the aviation division.

The soft tone in the public utilities was ascribed to the action of the S. E. C. in going ahead with the integration section of the Public Utility Act, but this was not a surprise and declines in general were of small proportions. Consolidated Cigar turned in the best performance of the active stocks, adding 1¼ points.

Business news of the mid-week was not of the nature to spur bullish operations. The weekly report on car loadings, covering the period ended last Saturday, showed a decline from the previous week of 2.1 per cent, reports from the steel industry indicating a halt in the decline of production accounted for the better performance of these shares. Construction awards were reported as above the previous week, but below a year ago. Firmness in lead and copper prices has contributed to support for the metal shares.

Within the financial district itself interest centered on the reception accorded new issues. The Bethlehem Steel issue was the most important and it went fairly well.

Bond Trading Dull

Listed bond trading developed only a few points of interest today. Some of the local tractions remained in demand, although others receded. The foreign department reflected renewed buying of Scandinavian obligations, notwithstanding the further gains of Russia in Finland. Best rated investment media were dull and virtually unchanged. The several new issues offered in the course of the day met excellent demand. Turnover in listed issues amounted to $5,000,000.

Third Avenue Railway bonds were churned about, with some of most active obligations finishing higher. Interborough issues lost ground, while Brooklyn Transit obligations were irregular. Speculative railroad bonds showed more small gains than losses and the communications bonds also displayed a firm tone. Convertibles were soft and holding company issues likewise reflected little more than neglect.

Foreign Issues Lower

Finland 6s dropped 2 points on a single trade. Norwegian and Danish obligations developed some buying interest. The Belgian group drifted lower, but Italians improved. German bonds again were in mild demand, while Australian and Canadian securities receded. Latin-American default bonds disclosed a few points of strength.

United States Treasury obligations slowly lost ground, with dealers and investors aloof. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were quiet and steady, with most interests concerned with the new Bethlehem Steel and Kentucky Utilities issues, rather than the listed bonds.

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 29.—Strong demand for kaffirs influenced buying in other sections of the stock market today. Strength in the golds followed South American budget proposals Wednesday. Institutional buyers continued to bid for government bonds. Domestic rails improved after opening declines, while oils maintained morning gains. Industrial leaders lagged as speculative interest switched to mining issues.

Paris.—The fastest bourse trading in two months accompanied broad price gains. Main stimulus appeared to be the announcement of an increase in the Treasury's borrowing power from the Bank of France. Banking issues were particularly strong. Rentes closed 10 to 145 centimes richer.

Amsterdam.—Early improvement was partially lost in late bourse dealings, leaving the close narrowly mixed. Bank of Netherlands stock was a weak spot.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures closed 3 points lower to 3 higher today. Bombay support and covering in distant deliveries offset hedging and liquidation in March.

Transit Merger Bond Dealings Under Inquiry

Prosecutor Summons Two Brokerage Firms To Explain 'Offers'

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 29.—State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., today ordered representatives of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Carlisle, Mellick & Co., and the over-the-counter securities firm of J. L. Wilson & Co. (not a member of the exchange), to appear in connection with an investigation into some boad trading aspects of the city's huge subway unification program.

The Wilson firm, and Howard Boulton, jr., a telephone clerk employed by Carlisle, Mellick & Co., had previously been summoned by City Corporation Counsel William C. Chandler to tell why they could not "make good" on alleged offers to sell the city $70,000 and $35,000 face value, respectively, of Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co. 4½ per cent bonds at $950 per thousand-dollar bond.

The bonds are now selling at $1,075, with few offered.

Assistant State Attorney General Ambrose McCall said he would endeavor to learn how far the responsibility of the Carlisle, Mellick firm extended over the acts of its employes dealing with the public, and also whether there had been any violation of the State Securities Act.

Robert A. Haughey, a partner of Carlisle, Mellick & Co., said the firm knew nothing about the transaction, except that Boulton was an employe there. No statement was obtainable from the Wilson firm.

A spokesman for the Stock Exchange said he understood the investigation was merely to determine a question of civil responsibility.

Cotton Futures Stagnant; Textile Markets Active

While cloth markets were enjoying some of the fastest trading in weeks at stiffening prices, the futures ring seemed caught in one of the lulls that often follow a period of activity.

Minor gains were scored at the start when Bombay bought, apparently working straddle business by buying here and selling in the East Indian market at favorable price differences. Liverpool favored near months.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil refiners, egged on by improvement in hog prices and steady crude oil, bought oil futures today. Final prices were up 1 to 5 points.

Pressure against deferred deliveries, which lagged, seemed inspired by disappointment over failure of lard to respond to the Congressional approval of additional credits to Finland. The Baltic country was recently in the market for lard.

Sales totaled 75 lots: March, 6.95 bid; May 7.05; July, 7.14; September, 7.20 bid.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

This problem refers to the hand displayed in today's box. The problem was conceived by M. J. Sullivan, of Brisbane, Queensland, Australia. The contract is four spades by South.

(a) You can have the North-South hands to make the contract, or the East-West hand to defeat it. Which will you have?

(b) If you choose the North-South hands, how will you proceed to fulfill the contract?

(c) If you choose the East-West hands, how will you proceed to defeat the contract?

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
WEST DEALER

	♠ 9 8 4 ♡ K Q 8 7 2 ◇ K 10 6 ♣ 10 4
♠ None ♡ A J ◇ A Q 9 7 4 ♣ A Q 8 6 3 2	WEST — NORTH — EAST — SOUTH	♠ 7 6 5 3 2 ♡ 10 6 4 ◇ 3 2 ♣ 9 7 5
	♠ A K Q J 10 ♡ 9 5 3 ◇ J 8 5 ♣ K J

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	Pass	1 ♠
2 ◇	2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠
3 ◇	Pass	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: A ◇

Answers

(a) The East-West hands with which to defeat it.

(b) On obtaining the lead, South must draw trumps and then establish the heart suit by leading a low card toward dummy.

(c) By making an opening lead of the ace of diamonds and following with another diamond, West, by spectacular discarding, can insure the defeat of the contract. On winning the second trick South is forced to draw trumps. Any other play will result in a two-trick set, for West will lead a third diamond for East to ruff and lead a club.

On South's trump leads East discards the ace and jack of hearts, thereby setting up East's ten of hearts as an entry for a lead through declarer's guarded king of clubs.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Listen! with Slocum

Prof. Quiz, the gentleman who is making something of a career by asking instead of answering questions, blew into town yesterday on the eve of his week's engagement at the Earle Theater during the "C. B. S. Radio Revue" which is being run during "WJSV Week."

We have seen the professor on full many's the evening, but never had an opportunity to talk to him much. He wears a tiny black pointed moustache and a wing collar and we have long wondered why.

There was one simple way to find out, and we did it, "Professor," I said, "why do you wear a wing collar?"

"My son," he answered gently, "I wear a wing collar because wing collars are more comfortable than the ordinary collar. Furthermore, I like wing collars."

Down at WJSV we have a rather deep interest in the "Prof. Quiz" radio program. One of our members, John Heiney by name, has an interest that's downright sordid. For Johnny is the gent who dreamt up the first quiz program and promptly made a doubtful contribution to the radio industry.

This Heiney was minding his own business one day way back in 1937 when a call came for a program idea. It should be an audience participation show (a new category of program then). Something like a spelling match or a man-on-the-street—but neither.

"Prof. Quiz" was the result. A combination of a spelling match from the first broadcast and not only has held a devoted audience of millions every week but set a new cycle of radio entertainment—the so-called quiz show. Once a nice guy around WJSV who works a slide rule discovered that the original "Prof. Quiz" questions-and-answer program has been imitated, duplicated, slashed, wounded and tortured 3,642 times.

"I Take This Man"

BY ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

Chapter 15

SHE SPENT some of the time at night making tiny dresses and other baby things, and they were beautifully done.

Only once in all of this time had Cary taken her out in the evening. They worked late at the office one afternoon and went downtown for dinner. They lingered over their table, talking until after 9 o'clock. Most of their conversation concerned their work.

"I'm more than grateful, Brenda. That you came. I know that we'll miss you more than ever when you leave again." Cary wished that she was never to go.

"It has been fun having something to occupy my time here, while Alan is away. I'm beginning to plan on going back soon, you know."

"How soon? Can't you stay on, Brenda?" he asked in a low voice. "His life would be barren without her.

She shook her head. "Three weeks, Cary. I want to be in the apartment when Alan come back. He will expect me there and I shall not disappoint him. I plan to go back at least a week before his return."

"You are happy in your marriage, Brenda. I can see that." Now he knew. He had seen it all along! She was in love with Alan! The impact of the knowledge struck him forcibly—stunning him.

"Yes, happier than I possibly could have imagined." Her dark eyes lit and Cary, seeing their expression, felt chilled and lonely.

Three weeks later Brenda told Cary that her arrangements were all made to return to Rio.

The night before she was to take the plane back, he asked to take her out to dinner one last time.

One Last Dinner

Brenda knew that he was lonely and she decided to go. She dressed for the occasion, and looked unusually beautiful. Her anticipation of seeing Alan soon gave her a new sparkle. The depth of her smile and the light in her eyes betrayed it.

"You are looking lovely," Cary said as they crossed the lobby of her hotel where he was waiting for her. "I'm glad to send you back looking so well. Alan will have no cause for regretting your coming!" No cause for regret! Regret only reared its ugly head within his own bosom.

"But Alan is the most generous person in the world, Cary. I know that he will be so glad I came. He likes you tremendously, and would want me to do anything possible to help you. But I am also glad that I'm starting back tomorrow."

They were dining at a nearby hotel, and walked the short distance. It was a cold, exhilarating night. And the air sharpened the color in Brenda's cheeks. Her skin had lost the golden tan and regained its clear whiteness.

The food was excellent, and Cary ordered champagne for their farewell dinner. Brenda barely touched it, but said softly, "Cary, I have such wonderful news, that I must tell you. I have kept it a secret, reserving it for this last day."

Cary looked at her inquiringly.

"I am so happy about it and I know you will be glad for us, too. Alan and I are going to have a child."

"Brenda!" He was silent for a long moment. "My congratulations! I hope that Alan realizes that he is the luckiest man in the world." Cary's voice was low and almost harsh with emotion. He was remembering that on a certain night he had kissed the red lips opposite him and held her briefly in his arms. Then he knew it was sheer madness, since he loved Lynne. But even then he had known that Lynne was infatuated with Jeff Adams. Brenda was so utterly desirable. His thoughts would always stray to what might have been had she not married Alan on a stormy week-end in a little New England town.

Cary looked up and across to her and smiled valiantly. "I know that you are happy over it, Brenda. And I am happy for you."

She turned the conversation to other channels and they ended the evening on a light note. It was still early when he took her to her hotel. He went up in the elevator with her. He unlocked the door to her little suite.

He silently held out his hand. Brenda placed hers in it.

Without a word, Cary bent over and kissed her lips. His arms held her hungrily. "Good-by, Brenda," he said briefly. Then he was gone.

Surprise Visitor

"Alan!" she cried. Her feet were weighted with the surprise of his being here.

"Brenda!" His voice grated harshly.

She caught the anger of his tone, and stood stock still.

"I come thousands of miles and find you in another man's arms!" Alan did not advance toward her.

"Oh, but Alan—no, no!"

"You could not wait for me in Rio. No, the moment that I was gone, you came back to the man you love. You loved him when you married me . . . You could not stay away from him." He pushed her hand from his arm when she would interrupt him. "No, let me talk now. I thought I could change all of that. I thought you would love me. You even made me promises," he laughed harshly. "Promises you had no intention of keeping; promises I did not ask you to make."

"But Alan, you don't understand. Let me tell you——"

"I think I saw enough to understand," he said bitterly, "no matter what you say, no matter what you promise, or where we are, I will always know your heart is with Cary."

"But——"

"Don't interrupt me! I have had time to think it all out. Time when you weren't near to make me lose my reasoning. When you are with me all that I can think of is my love for you. I burn with it. It seems that I'm doomed forever to be laughed at by fate. First Margot and now you!" He took a quick step toward the door. "I decided that I would not hold you to your promises. If you still loved Cary and wanted to marry him, I had no right to tie you to me. I thought it out under the stars at night. Oh, there was plenty of time! Then I came back to Rio and you were gone! What was I to think? Yet I had to come and see for myself."

Alan Leaves Her

"But I was coming back, Alan. My bags are packed." Brenda's voice was a sob. "I was leaving tomorrow . . . "

"Yes, you thought you'd go back, and I'd never know that you'd been gone. Well, I came home earlier than you thought. But it's no use talking. I was fool enough to think part of you would be enough. But it isn't! I want you, completely mine!" His blue eyes were sunken from sleeplessness, his white under his tan.

"But my letters to you, Alan. I wrote." She stopped. Of course, he had not found them.

"Goodbye, Brenda. It was nice to have met you!" Alan's voice, cold and formidably sarcastic, cut her like a knife. Then he was gone, and Brenda fell to her knees beside a chair. She got to her feet and ran to the corridor, but the elevator was already taking him down.

She flew after it. But she crossed the foyer minutes late. He was gone.

Brenda thought of a thousand things later, that she might have said to Alan during the stormy scene that followed his discovery of Cary kissing her at the door. But she had not had a chance to even say, "I love only you, Alan." Nor would he have believed her if she had said those words.

In the terrible silence of her room, she could hear his harsh voice. She remembered his sunken eyes, his thinness and his pale face. "Oh, Alan, you have suffered all of this without cause," she thought over and over.

Cary's farewell kiss had climaxed it all. But she told herself Alan had already convinced himself that he must give her up, after he had found her gone in Rio.

Dry eyed, she lay on her bed hour after hour. She had called Alan's club and several hotels, but there was no trace of him. She hesitated calling at his parents' home, because she knew that he would not go there, and she disliked letting them know anything was wrong.

If only she knew where he was she could send her letters to him. He must believe them!

Brenda never knew afterward how she got through the next week. She haunted the places where she thought Alan might be. She called hotels and clubs until she felt ashamed to call again. Then she learned from the Airways Company office that Alan had taken a plane back for Rio the day following the night he had left her.

The next two weeks Brenda felt too ill to do more than sit up a little each day. She had cried until there were no more tears. She sent a message to Alan at Rio, but it seemed hopeless to reach him. She cabled Senor Pedro Cruze, who replied that Alan was returning to the new mine. Her next message she sent to Mese Vorhoe, and one to Morro Melhoa. Whether he received them or not, she did not know.

She had been too hurt to tell him of their child. She would not tie him to her with that responsibility. She had cabled frantically that she loved him and asked him to return.

But this Alan was a different man from the one she had known. There was nothing of gentleness about him. Yet she could not blame him. He had every right to misunderstand.

Cary's Proposal

One day she called Cary and told him everything. He asked her if she would care to return to the office for a while and she agreed, knowing that the work there would help alleviate the dreadfulness of empty days.

She moved about, a small pale ghost of her old self. Her dark eyes had lost their brilliance, and the doctor was alarmed over her loss of weight. He warned her that she must get out more and secure new interests. He did not ask too much about her decision to stay here, after he had known her plans were to have gone back to Brazil.

Cary was quiet and stern these days, and Brenda was sorry.

She felt now that they needed each other more than ever. But to give Cary her love while she carried Alan's child under her heart was unthinkable.

Even Mary looked anxious and troubled when the office seemed so gloomy. She had found Brenda in tears more than once, and had only an unsatisfactory idea of all that had happened.

Cary took her in his arms one afternoon. "Brenda, I can't stand seeing you so unhappy! Let's go away together, darling. We'll make a new life."

Brenda was silent a long moment. She lifted a despairing face. "All right, Cary," she whispered. It would be better to know Cary's love than none.

She thought of Alan. She could see him in the loneliness of the nights when he had hungered for her, anw knew that as he had said, it was when she was gone that he came to the decision that he must give her up if she did not love him wholly.

"If I had only stayed in Rio!" She reproached herself. But would she there have recognized her love for Alan, or would the distance of Cary have kept her discovery buried? A thousand things haunted her, but only the grim reality that Alan was lost to her seemed real.

They stood staring at each other, in silence. It was broken suddenly and Brenda answered the telephone when it rang.

Telephone Message

It was Lynne's voice speaking. A frightened, shaken Lynne, Brenda knew as she handed the receiver to Cary. "Lynne," she had whispered to him, to prepare him. Cary's face whitened before he took it.

"Yes?"

His eyes stared, and drops of perspiration glistened on his forehead. "Dulcie?" he whispered. "Lynne," his voice became firm. "Get hold of yourself, darling. I'll be there in a few minutes." Blindly he groped for the cradle to replace the receiver. "Dulcie. Our baby girl, oh, dear God!"

Brenda reached for his hand. "Cary! Cary! What is it?" She forgot her own need for help.

"Dulcie was thrown by one of the horses." He sank down to his desk, his head in his hands.

Brenda stared at him, her heart turning over. "Come on, Cary. Let me drive for you," she whispered.

Great sobs shook him. Brenda had never seen a man cry before. The strain that he had gone through was more than he could bear.

The great house was hushed and still. Somewhere Brenda could hear a childish voice after she had climbed the stairs with Cary. Cary, jr., breaking from his nurse's hold, ran from a room when he heard his father's steps.

Brenda held back her tears as she saw Cary sweep the little figure into his hungry arms. Together they went in to Lynne.

Brenda went into the room to talk with Cary, jr.'s nurse. "Tell me, is she . . ?"

Cary and Lynne Reunited

The woman's face was white and her eyes filled with tears. "There isn't any chance for her. Poor baby! She was thrown to the concrete drive. Just a few hours."

Dulcie, with her golden curls and shining eyes, was leaving Lynne forever. Brenda, already knowing love for her unborn child, could only partly guess at this moment how Lynne was suffering. Lynne had never got up enough courage to go to Reno. She had put it off week after week. Brenda was never to know just what part she played in this, but Jeff Adams had long since become too impatient at the delay that Lynne's indecision was causing.

In the room beside Dulcie's little bed, Cary and Lynne knelt together, Lynne's face was as white as the small face on the pillow. Her body shook until Cary placed his arm about her to still its trembling.

Insurance Record Is 'Extraordinary,' Henderson Says

By the Associated Press

A member of the Monopoly Committee, after hearing testimony yesterday on the causes for insurance company failures in the last 10 years, commented that the industry had made an "extraordinary record" in weathering financial adversity.

Alfred M. Best, of New York, publisher of Insurance Statistics, estimated that in the last 10 years 19 insurance failures had resulted in a total initial loss to policyholders of $130,000,000, or not more than from one-half to three-fourths of 1 per cent of the total assets of insurance companies in the period.

In the same period, he said, there were more than 14,000 bank failures with an indicated initial loss of about $3,500,000,000.

Leon Henderson, securities commission member, expressing the opinion that the insurance industry had made "an extraordinary record as far as the integrity of insurance policies is concerned," remarked that a single investment trust had suffered a loss of $370,000,000.

Messenger Dies; Was Classmate Of Roosevelt

Paul C. Pinn, veteran colored messenger at the War Department, who attended classes at Harvard with President Roosevelt, died here Wednesday after a short illness.

Born here March 28, 1880, Pinn attended local schools and was graduated from Exeter Academy in 1897. He entered Harvard two years later and completed the four-year course in three years, receiving his A. B. degree in 1903. President Roosevelt was in the class behind him.

Personal messenger to the Assistant Secretary of War, Pinn had been on duty until recently. His brother, the Rev. James L. Pinn, survives. The funeral will be Saturday at 1:30 at the Good Will Baptist Church, with burial in Harmony Cemetery.

D. C. Trees Being Primped For Their Debut in Spring

Special Squad of Experts Snips and Prunes To Heal the Scars of Rough Winter; Project Financed by $40,000 From PWA

A special squad of tree experts, paid from a $40,000 PWA grant, has been inspecting the trees in the Capital's parks for disease, decay and unruly boughs that need pruning. They started in September, and yesterday they were about 80 per cent through.

Aided by the eight regular tree surgeons in the park maintenance division, the tree repairmen have cut and pruned, braced and cabled, cleaned decay and filled cavities.

They hope to be through in a few more weeks, when the annual "spring cleaning" begins. Three hundred maintenance men will swarm into the parks around March 15, to heal the scars of winter and erase the cold-weather damage.

They will recondition lawns, planting beds, shrubs and flowers. They will grade softball diamonds and tennis courts and sweep out rubbish that accumulated over the winter.

Three pruning just has been completed at Farragut Park and McPherson Square. Work is going on in the Ellipse, the Washington Monument grounds, and the West Potomac and Rock Creek Parks.

Other areas completed include Marion, Garfield, Folger, Stanton, Lincoln, Montrose, Fort Kemble and Lafayette Parks, Washington circle and the White House grounds.

Areas yet to be treated include Judiciary Square, Mount Vernon Square, the Mall, Franklin Park and Dupont Circle.

Jackson Assailed By Rep. Thomas

New York, Feb. 29 (AP).—Representative Thomas, New Jersey Republican member of the Dies Committee, asserted today that Attorney General Robert Jackson's "extraordinary" dismissal of recent indictments for Spanish war recruiting in Detroit was motivated by sympathy for Communists.

"When we look at the record, the answer to his extraordinary course of action will become plain," Thomas told the Women's National Republican Club in a prepared address, citing articles in the Communist organ, The Daily Worker, that Jackson indorsed a march led by veterans of the Abraham Lincoln brigade.

St. John's College Adds Woman to Faculty

Mrs. Miller, Mother Of 2 Small Children, To Teach Economics

The authorities of St. John's College at Annapolis, Md., have reached into the Department of Agriculture, it was learned yesterday, to pick a writer as the institution's first woman faculty member.

She is Mrs. Helen Hill Miller, of Fairfax, Va., mother of two children barely old enough to learn the alphabet who are taught French one week and German the next.

She is the author of "George Mason, Constitutionalist" and was associated with M. L. Wilson, director of the department's extension service, in the preparation of "Democracy Has Roots."

Selection of Mrs. Miller to teach economics at St. John's was not alone a tribute to her scholarship. It was, in a sense, a move to establish a reunion of old friends who in the early 1920s were students at Oxford University, England. Dean Scott Buchanan and Mrs. Miller were at Oxford together. Stringfellow Barr, St. John's president, left the university in the spring of 1921, a few months before Mrs. Miller's arrival.

MRS. HELEN MILLER

"So while Mr. Barr and I weren't classmates, we almost were, and we consider my going to St. John's a reunion anyway," she said.

Mrs. Miller's husband, Francis P. Miller, is a member of St. John's board of visitors.

Mrs. Miller's plan of instruction is calculated ultimately to produce ideas in the heads of her students. She has one class a week, a two-hour session in which she lectures and quizzes her students and encourages them to look seriously between the covers of many thought-provoking books.
